UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF NEVADA

CHRISTOPHER ADAM DOLLAR,

Petitioner,

v.

GREGORY SMITH, et al.,

Respondents.

Case No. 2:13-cv-01952-JCM-GWF

ORDER

Christopher Adam Dollar’s 28 U.S.C. § 2254 habeas corpus petition is before the court for final disposition on the merits. Respondents filed an answer to the petition, and Dollar filed a reply and request for an evidentiary hearing. The request for an evidentiary hearing is granted, and the court has reviewed Dollar’s proffered new evidence. As discussed below, the petition is denied.

I. Procedural History and Background

As set forth in this court’s order on respondents’ motion to dismiss, in November 2010, Dollar and two co-defendants were charged by way of criminal complaint with one count of conspiracy to commit robbery, two counts of burglary while in possession of a firearm, two counts of attempted robbery with use of a deadly weapon, and one count of robbery with use of a deadly weapon (exhibit 1).¹ Dollar pled guilty to one count of conspiracy to commit robbery and one count of robbery. Exh. 3. The state district court sentenced Dollar to 19 to 48 months for conspiracy and a consecutive term of 60 to 180

¹ Unless otherwise noted, exhibits referenced in this order are exhibits to respondents’ motion to dismiss, ECF No. 21, and are found at ECF No. 23. Exhibits filed by petitioner are found at ECF Nos. 9-13 and shall be referred to as petitioner’s exhibits.

1 months for robbery, with 104 days credit for time served. Exh. 8. The court entered the 2 judgment of conviction on February 7, 2011. Exh. 9. The Nevada Supreme Court 3 affirmed his convictions. Exh. 14.

4 In January 2012, petitioner filed a pro per motion for modification of harsh sentence 5 requesting that the court modify his sentence to 12 to 30 months and 24 to 60 months, 6 consecutive, which was the term parole and probation had recommended. Exh. 16. The 7 state district court denied the motion. Exh. 17.

8 In May 2012, petitioner filed a proper person postconviction petition for writ of 9 habeas corpus in state district court. Exh. 18. The state district court conducted a limited 10 evidentiary hearing at which Dollar's plea counsel testified regarding whether he had 11 had reason to question Dollar's competency and/or to seek a competency hearing. Exh.
12 22. The state district court denied the petition, finding that Dollar received effective 13 assistance of trial and appellate counsel. Exh. 24. The Nevada Supreme Court affirmed.
14 Exh. 25.

15 Dollar dispatched his federal petition for writ of habeas corpus on or about October 16 14, 2013 (ECF No. 5). This court appointed counsel, and Dollar filed a counseled, first-17 amended petition (ECF No. 16).

18 On August 26, 2015, this court granted respondents' motion to dismiss and 19 dismissed the petition without prejudice because it was wholly unexhausted (ECF No.
20 30). Dollar appealed, and the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed and remanded, 21 concluding that this court should have treated the petition as technically exhausted and 22 procedurally defaulted and should have analyzed whether Dollar could demonstrate 23 cause and prejudice to excuse the default (ECF No. 37).

24 In the meantime, in May 2014, Dollar returned to state court and filed a motion to 25 modify or correct an illegal sentence, or in the alternative a postconviction petition 26 seeking resentencing based on a due process violation (ECF No. 26, exh. A). Dollar 27 presented the purported new evidence (which is now also before this court) with his 28

1 motion. The state district court denied the petition/motion, finding that Dollar failed to 2 demonstrate cause and prejudice to excuse the procedural bars of the untimely and 3 successive petition and that the sentencing judge was not mistaken about Dollar's past 4 criminal record (ECF No. 27, exh. C). The Nevada Supreme Court affirmed the denial 5 of the petition. Nevada Supreme Court Case No. 67314.

6 After the court of appeals' remand in this case, this court directed the parties to 7 file an answer to the federal petition and any reply and to raise and/or renew any 8 arguments regarding whether, in light of Martinez v. Ryan, 566 U.S. 1 (2012), Dollar 9 could demonstrate cause and prejudice to excuse the procedural default (ECF No. 41).
10 Respondents filed their answer (ECF No. 43). Dollar filed a document that he styled as 11 a response to the answer and a request for a Martinez hearing regarding whether 12 Dollar's procedural default of his ineffective assistance of counsel (IAC) at sentencing 13 claim should be excused (ECF No. 56).

14 II. Request for an Evidentiary Hearing Pursuant to *Martinez

15 The United States Supreme Court held in Martinez,

16
17 Where, under state law, claims of ineffective assistance of trial counsel 18 must be raised in an initial-review collateral proceeding, a procedural 19 default will not bar a federal habeas court from hearing a substantial claim 20 of ineffective assistance at trial if, in the initial-review collateral proceeding, 21 there was no counsel or counsel in that proceeding was ineffective.

22 Martinez, 566 U.S. at 17. Dollar requests an evidentiary hearing in order to 23 demonstrate cause and prejudice to excuse the procedural default of his IAC at 24 sentencing claim (ECF No. 56, pp. 15-16). He urges that this court may consider the 25 evidence he now presents under Cullen v. Pinholster, 563 U.S. 170 (2011), Dickens v.
26 Ryan, 740 F.3d 1302 (2014), and Martinez. The request for an evidentiary hearing is 27 granted. The court accepts as authentic the proffered evidence, which is comprised of 28 records from Clark County School District, the Social Security Administration, Dollar's high school, and a document entitled Psychiatric Review Technique. Pet. exhs. 42-46.
Below, the court discusses this evidence along with the rest of the state-court record.

III. Legal Standards & Analysis

a. Procedural Default and Martinez

“Procedural default” refers to the situation where a petitioner in fact presented a claim to the state courts but the state courts disposed of the claim on procedural grounds, instead of on the merits. A federal court will not review a claim for habeas corpus relief if the decision of the state court regarding that claim rested on a state law ground that is independent of the federal question and adequate to support the judgment. Coleman v. Thompson, 501 U.S. 722, 730-31 (1991).

The Coleman Court explained the effect of a procedural default:

In all cases in which a state prisoner has defaulted his federal claims in state court pursuant to an independent and adequate state procedural rule, federal habeas review of the claims is barred unless the prisoner can demonstrate cause for the default and actual prejudice as a result of the alleged violation of federal law, or demonstrate that failure to consider the claims will result in a fundamental miscarriage of justice.

Coleman, 501 U.S. at 750; see also Murray v. Carrier, 477 U.S. 478, 485 (1986). The procedural default doctrine ensures that the state’s interest in correcting its own mistakes is respected in all federal habeas cases. See Koerner v. Grigas, 328 F.3d 1039, 1046 (9th Cir. 2003).

To demonstrate cause for a procedural default, the petitioner must be able to “show that some objective factor external to the defense impeded” his efforts to comply with the state procedural rule. Murray, 477 U.S. at 488. For cause to exist, the external impediment must have prevented the petitioner from raising the claim. See McCleskey v. Zant, 499 U.S. 467, 497 (1991).

To demonstrate a fundamental miscarriage of justice, a petitioner must show the constitutional error complained of probably resulted in the conviction of an actually innocent person. Boyd v. Thompson, 147 F.3d 1124, 1127 (9th Cir. 1998). “[A]ctual innocence’ means factual innocence, not mere legal insufficiency.” Bousley v. United States, 523 U.S. 614, 623 (1998). This is a narrow exception, and it is reserved for

1 extraordinary cases only. Sawyer v. Whitley, 505 U.S. 333, 340 (1992). Bare 2 allegations unsupplemented by evidence do not tend to establish actual innocence 3 sufficient to overcome a procedural default. Thomas v. Goldsmith, 979 F.2d 746, 750 4 (9th Cir. 1992).

5 The Court in Coleman held that ineffective assistance of counsel in postconviction 6 proceedings does not establish cause for the procedural default of a claim. Coleman, 7 501 U.S. at 750. In Martinez, the Court established a “narrow exception” to that rule. As 8 noted above, the Court explained that a procedural default will not bar a federal habeas 9 court from hearing a substantial claim of ineffective assistance at trial if, in the initial-10 review collateral proceeding, petitioner had no counsel or counsel in that proceeding 11 was ineffective. 566 U.S. at 17. The Ninth Circuit has provided guidelines for applying 12 Martinez, summarizing the analysis as follows:

13 14 To demonstrate cause and prejudice sufficient to excuse the 15 procedural default, therefore, Martinez . . . require[s] that Clabourne make 16 two showings. First, to establish “cause,” he must establish that his counsel 17 in the state postconviction proceeding was ineffective under the standards 18 of Strickland [v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668 (1984)]. Strickland, in turn, 19 requires him to establish that both (a) post-conviction counsel's 20 performance was deficient, and (b) there was a reasonable probability that, 21 absent the deficient performance, the result of the post-conviction 22 proceedings would have been different. Second, to establish “prejudice,” he 23 must establish that his “underlying ineffective-assistance-of-trial-counsel 24 claim is a substantial one, which is to say that the prisoner must 25 demonstrate that the claim has some merit.”

26 Clabourne v. Ryan, 745 F.3d 362, 377 (9th Cir. 2014) (citations omitted).

27 Here, Dollar urges that he can demonstrate cause and prejudice to excuse the 28 default of his IAC at sentencing claim (ECF No. 56). First, Dollar did not have counsel for his state postconviction proceedings; thus, Dollar has demonstrated cause under Martinez.

The question, therefore, is whether Dollar can demonstrate prejudice by demonstrating that his underlying IAC at sentencing claim is substantial. The parties

1 agree that in this procedural posture, this is essentially an adjudication of the merits of 2 the claim.

3 b. State-court Proceedings

4 When Dollar was first arrested, he wrote a letter to the court. Pet. Exh. 5. He 5 opened: "I know this may not mean much, but I feel compelled to write you this letter of 6 apology and show my remorse" He asks for forgiveness, states that he'll comply 7 with any "stipulation" the court sets because he loves his children and urges that he will 8 prove to the court and to society that he was worthy of a second chance. Id.

9 At the arraignment, Dollar responded to the court's questions, stating that he had 10 graduated high school and could read, write, and understand English. Pet. Exh. 8, p. 5.
11 He indicated that he understood the charges to which he was pleading guilty, that no 12 one forced him to plead guilty and that he pleaded guilty of his own free will. He also 13 stated that he understood the sentencing range for each count, that sentencing is 14 strictly up to the court, and that no one could promise him probation, leniency, or special 15 treatment. He answered affirmatively when asked if he had freely and voluntarily signed 16 the plea agreement and if he understood that he was giving up certain constitutional 17 rights. He said he pled guilty because in truth and in fact he committed the acts 18 constituting robbery and conspiracy to commit robbery. Id. at 7-11.

19 After Dollar entered into the plea agreement, his counsel submitted a sentencing 20 memorandum and supplemental sentencing memorandum. Exhs. 10, 11. The 21 supplemental memorandum included 7 letters from family attesting to Dollar's good 22 character and asking that he receive probation so that he could return to his children. It 23 also included numerous requests submitted by Dollar to attend various programs while 24 he was in jail awaiting sentencing.

25 The state court conducted sentencing for the four co-defendants in January 2011.
26 Exh. 8. At the outset of the proceedings the court denied Dollar's counsel's request for 27 a continuance in order to assess whether he was eligible for boot camp. The State 28

1 noted that the two male co-defendants had previous felony convictions and argued that 2 the three male co-defendants should receive the same sentence of 6 to 15 years.

3 Dollar had no adult convictions but had been on juvenile probation. See also pet. exh.
4 47. The prosecutor stated that Dollar had a $7,000 debt and that he enlisted the other 5 defendants to help him with the robberies. The State argued “with Mr. Dollar, obviously 6 although he has a limited criminal history is equally culpable, he’s the motive, he’s the 7 person that gets the crime rolling, he’s the person that elicits the help.” Exh. 8, p. 7.

8 Dollar spoke at sentencing. Id. at 10. He stressed that he had no excuse for his 9 poor choice but that he intended to move forward with his life and asked for the 10 opportunity to demonstrate that he had learned something over the more than 3 months 11 that he had been in jail by receiving probation. Dollar’s counsel emphasized that Dollar 12 was only 20 years old and that this was his first adult offense. Id. at 11-13. He urged “I 13 don’t see how anyone could think that my client, just because he said he had a $7,000 14 debt, would be the motivating individual in this case when he’s the youngest of the three 15 and he’s also the one with no past adult criminal record.” Counsel noted that Dollar had 16 a job waiting for him at WalMart. Counsel stated: “It should be noted that he was 17 involved in special education all of his life, but he worked hard enough and was 18 persistent enough that he did earn a high school diploma.” Counsel pointed out the 19 many letters of recommendation that people wrote on Dollar’s behalf, asserting that he 20 was of good character and that this was an aberration. Counsel concluded by stating 21 that Dollar’s main problem was a drug problem that needed to be addressed then at 20 22 years of age and urged the court to impose 12 to 30 months on the conspiracy and 24 23 to 60 months on the robbery, concurrent, and to give him probation so that he could go 24 to drug court.

25 The state district court sentenced the three male defendants to 19 to 48 months and 26 60 to 180 months, consecutive. Id. at 20.

1 In January 2012, Dollar filed a pro per motion for modification of a harsh sentence.
2 Exh. 16. He asked the court to modify his sentence at least to parole and probation's 3 recommendation of 12 to 30 months and 24 to 60 months, consecutive. He argued that 4 the sentencing court considered misleading information that worked to his extreme 5 detriment. At sentencing, the court had stated that Dollar was not eligible for boot 6 camp. But Dollar argued in this motion that the considerations for boot camp are how 7 many prior felony convictions the offender has and whether he is eligible for probation.
8 He also asserted that you are not eligible for boot camp if you are convicted of robbery 9 with a deadly weapon, but you may be eligible for the offense of robbery. Id.

10 In May 2012, Dollar filed a pro per state postconviction habeas corpus petition. Exh.
11 18. In September 2012, the state district court conducted an evidentiary hearing limited 12 to whether Dollar's plea counsel was ineffective in not arranging for further evaluation of 13 Dollar's competency. Exh. 22, pp. 6-14. Dollar's plea counsel Dan Winder testified as 14 follows. He grew up with Dollar's father and to his recollection the father had retained 15 him. He recalled that at the outset he had a conversation with Dollar's father and a bail 16 bondsman who also grew up with Winder and they opined that Dollar was a little "slow" 17 and easily influenced and had probably just gone along with the co-defendants. Id. at 18 11. In response to the state's questioning, Winder stated:

19 20 A: So, I was prepared to evaluate for myself whether it was necessary 21 to have him – whether he was having mental health issues. So, prior to 22 speaking to him, I already gathered some information about his past and 23 about his education history. I understand that he was in special ed during 24 periods of time in school. So, I made sure that I communicated with him 25 accordingly. We did not have any trouble communicating. I actually found him to be more articulate than what was represented to me. He seemed to very much understand what was going on and as I always do, I allow my clients to make the choice whether to accept the plea bargain or go forward to trial.

26 Q: So, prior to even recommending any plea bargain in this case to Mr.
27 Dollar, the idea of a competency issue was on your mind, it sounds like?

28 A: That's correct.

Q: But after meeting with Mr. Dollar, you deemed that it was not actually an issue?

A: I didn't believe that he fit within the criteria to legally require me to request a psychological evaluation.

THE COURT: Now, is it fair to say that you have a number of clients who may be – were in special ed or of lower IQs?

A: Yes I would say that at least fifty percent of my clients –I'd say eighty percent of them have drug problems and those who have drug problems tend to have cognitive problems. And then there's a high percentage who also have been involved with special ed or have lower IQs. And it's only where we get to the level that they're border line retarded on the IQ scale or lower that I will request – or if they don't understand the proceedings going on or they can't assist me in defending them in the case that I request a psychological evaluation So, at no point in my discussions with Mr. Dollar did I feel that he was one that was entitled to – needed to have an evaluation or didn't understand what was going on or couldn't assist me in making – in the decision-making process about the Defendant's case.

THE COURT: Okay. So in other words, even though maybe he had been – had some IQ issues, so to speak a lower IQ, you didn't feel it was low to the point where it would be low enough where you would need to have him assessed and that could be utilized by you; is that fair to say?

A: That's correct. That's fair to say.

Id. at 11-13.

Winder stated that at no time prior to Dollar's entry of his plea or through sentencing did any issues arise that caused Winder to feel that there might be any questions regarding Dollar's competency. Winder noted that it was Dollar who decided to continue the original sentencing hearing because he wanted to present more information to the judge in support of probation. Id. at 13. Winder also recounted that a different judge presided over sentencing. Winder moved for a continuance when he saw the presiding judge because "we all knew at that point that [Dollar] was going to receive a higher sentence than we anticipated," which the judge denied. Id. Winder

1 opined that all four defendants received harsher sentences than they deserved, but 2 especially Dollar.

3 Dollar also questioned Winder at the hearing. Id. at 15-30. Winder responded 4 that he evaluated Dollar based on his experience regarding whether a client 5 understands the proceedings, the charges, etc. He also had reviewed letters from 6 Dollar's mother and girlfriend and various other friends and stated that they all "say very 7 nice things" and further stated that they presented those letters to the court. Winder 8 agreed that he had been informed that Dollar was "slow and . . . had problems in 9 school" and stated that in this case he did not conduct further investigation beyond 10 speaking with Dollar's family and friends. Winder stated:

13 So, even to this day, nobody's presented me with evidence for me 14 to present to the court indicating that you didn't – your mental health or 15 your psychological state at the time of sentencing required additional 16 consideration by the court.

17 Id. at 18. Winder testified that to his recollection Dollar's father had stated that Dollar 18 was slow and had some problems at school. But when he spoke with Dollar, Dollar 19 understood the proceedings and the plea bargain. Dollar wanted to go to trial, and he 20 and Winder discussed that.

21 Near the end of the evidentiary hearing, the judge stated that she had noted to 22 her law clerk that Dollar had already demonstrated by his questions that he was much 23 smarter than most defendants, and she also stated that Dollar did a better job with his 24 examination of Winder than some new lawyers she had observed. Id. at 26.

25 Dollar pressed Winder as to whether he had had cause to go further in his 26 investigation. Winder responded:

27 A: I didn't. After speaking with you and knowing what the law of 28 competency is for criminal court here, I did not believe you required an evaluation and that you were going to be – I didn't have any hint that you were going to be incompetent to go forward with your case nor did I want you to have to be locked up at Lakes Crossing wasting time there just to come back and go forward with your case. So, I don't believe there's 1 anything more I could have done. You probably do need some mental 2 health assistance that doesn't rise to the level of legal incompetency that's required by this court so that you'd be locked up in a facility.

3 Id. at 27. At the conclusion of the evidentiary hearing, the judge explained that 4 the hearing was not about whether the sentencing judge gave Dollar too harsh a 5 sentence. She found that Winder's testimony belied the claim that he was ineffective for 6 failing to further investigate Dollar's competency or need for a competency 7 determination. Denying the petition, she noted to Dollar

8 Now you may have been influenced by these other young men that 9 you committed these crimes with But that does not absolve you from responsibility in this case and that certainly isn't the kind of thing that 10 should send you up to Lakes Crossing for some kind of psychiatric or psychological evaluation. . . . you're standing here arguing with me . . . the 11 proof is in the pudding you know, you're not that low standard. So, 12 it's denied.

13 The state district court entered the order denying the petition on November 15, 14 2012. Exh. 24.

15 c. Dollar's Proffered New Evidence

16 Dollar now presents records from Clark County School District, the Social 17 Security Administration, his high school, and a document entitled Psychiatric Review 18 Technique. Exhs. 42-45. He presented these documents to the state district court in 19 his May 2014 motion to modify or correct an illegal sentence, or in the alternative a 20 postconviction petition seeking resentencing based on a due process violation (ECF No.
21 26, exh. A).

22 The Clark County School District records reflect that in grades 9-11, Dollar 23 received 2 A grades, a few Bs and Cs, but mostly Ds and Fs. Exh. 42. He was in 24 special education from kindergarten through high school and was diagnosed with a 25 specific learning disability. The school reports stated that Dollar had low average social 26 understanding and fell in the high probability range for Asperger's Disorder. Id. at 22.
27 The report of the Clark County School District Student Support Services Division team 28 stated that it was the:

1 consensus of team that Chris is in control of behaviors identified as 2 weaknesses and therefore accountable to general school rules there 3 was a severe discrepancy between his predicted and actual achievement .
4 . . these discrepancies are not primarily the result of a visual, hearing or 5 motor impairment, mental retardation, a serious emotional disturbance, or 6 environmental, cultural difference of economic disadvantage.

7 Id. at 24-25.

8 A 2007 Clark County School District assessment states that his basic reading 9 skills and written language skills were assessed as average for a person his age (17) 10 and grade level; his math skills were below average. Exh. 44, p. 8. His individualized 11 educational program (IEP) for the 2007-2008 school year provided that he may use a 12 calculator as needed in math, and that in all classes, assignments could be shortened, 13 or alternate assignments given, and he was allowed extra time to complete 14 assignments. Id. at 13. That same school year the IEP also reflects that Dollar was in a 15 regular classroom with supplementary aids and services. Id. at 14.

16 These records plainly demonstrate that Dollar struggled in school and received 17 special education throughout. However, at the time he participated in these robberies 18 he had a job at WalMart, and he was a father who expressed great remorse in writing to 19 the court and begged to be allowed a chance at probation in order to be with his family.
20 The state postconviction evidentiary hearing reveals that Dollar very capably examined 21 his plea counsel on the stand. His counsel testified credibly that Dollar's family told him 22 that Dollar was slow, but that Dollar handled himself a lot better than his counsel 23 expected. Counsel also noted that Dollar thoughtfully participated and strategized in his 24 defense; it was Dollar's idea to seek a continuance of sentencing in order to marshal 25 more support for probation. Again, perhaps most striking is that Dollar did a very 26 competent job of questioning his counsel—to the extent that the court commented on 27 how well he was doing. The records that Dollar now presents do show more specifically 28 Dollar's learning difficulties as he was growing up. However, Dollar's demeanor and the way he handled himself during sentencing and appeals completely belie his argument

1 that had the court had these records at sentencing he would have been given a lighter 2 sentence.

3 The state-court record reveals that the district judge viewed the three men as 4 equally culpable. When Dollar asked for a chance on probation, the court responded by 5 noting that Dollar had had probation before as a juvenile. Exh. 8, p. 10. Dollar's 6 counsel argued that they were not equally culpable, that Dollar had a significant drug 7 problem, that he was in special education throughout school and that far from being the 8 ringleader he merely followed the lead of the other, older two men in committing the 9 robberies. Id. at 11. When Dollar's counsel mentioned the letters of support, the court 10 interjected: "No, no, no, people with good character don't do what they did." Id. at 12.

11 Under Martinez, Dollar has demonstrated cause to excuse the procedural default 12 because he had no counsel in his state postconviction proceedings. However, this 13 court concludes that Dollar's proffered new evidence fails to demonstrate that his claim 14 that counsel rendered ineffective assistance at sentencing is "substantial." See, e.g., 15 Clabourne, 745 F.3d at 377. That is, Dollar has failed to demonstrate prejudice. The 16 IAC claim, therefore, is procedurally barred from federal habeas review.

17 d. IAC Claim Alternatively Fails on the Merits

18 As Dollar has not shown that the IAC claim is substantial, it alternatively 19 necessarily fails on the merits. In Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668 (1984), the 20 Supreme Court held that a petitioner claiming ineffective assistance of counsel has the 21 burden of demonstrating that (1) the attorney made errors so serious that he or she was 22 not functioning as the "counsel" guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment, and (2) that the 23 deficient performance prejudiced the defense. Williams, 529 U.S. at 390-91 (citing 24 Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687). To establish ineffectiveness, the defendant must show that 25 counsel's representation fell below an objective standard of reasonableness. Id. To 26 establish prejudice, the defendant must show that there is a reasonable probability that, 27 but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been 28

1 different. Id. A reasonable probability is “probability sufficient to undermine confidence in 2 the outcome.” Id. Additionally, any review of the attorney’s performance must be “highly 3 deferential” and must adopt counsel’s perspective at the time of the challenged conduct, 4 in order to avoid the distorting effects of hindsight. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689. It is the 5 petitioner’s burden to overcome the presumption that counsel’s actions might be 6 considered sound trial strategy. Id.

7 Ineffective assistance of counsel under Strickland requires a showing of deficient 8 performance of counsel resulting in prejudice, “with performance being measured 9 against an objective standard of reasonableness, . . . under prevailing professional 10 norms.” Rompilla v. Beard, 545 U.S. 374, 380 (2005) (internal quotations and citations 11 omitted).

12 This court recounts the state-court record at length because it reveals that Dollar 13 cannot demonstrate prejudice. Nothing in the documents that Dollar now presents 14 indicates such serious intelligence or competency issues that would give rise to a 15 reasonable probability that, but for counsel’s unprofessional errors in failing to 16 investigate further, the result of the sentencing would have been different. Strickland, 17 466 U.S. at 687. Accordingly, the petition is denied in its entirety.

18 IV. Certificate of Appealability

19 This is a final order adverse to the petitioner. As such, Rule 11 of the Rules 20 Governing Section 2254 Cases requires this court to issue or deny a certificate of 21 appealability (COA). Accordingly, the court has sua sponte evaluated the claims within 22 the petition for suitability for the issuance of a COA. See 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c); Turner v.
23 Calderon, 281 F.3d 851, 864-65 (9th Cir. 2002).

24 Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(2), a COA may issue only when the petitioner "has 25 made a substantial showing of the denial of a constitutional right." With respect to 26 claims rejected on the merits, a petitioner "must demonstrate that reasonable jurists 27 would find the district court's assessment of the constitutional claims debatable or 28

1 wrong." Slack v. McDaniel, 529 U.S. 473, 484 (2000) (citing Barefoot v. Estelle, 463
2 U.S. 880, 893 & n.4 (1983)). For procedural rulings, a COA will issue only if reasonable 3 jurists could debate (1) whether the petition states a valid claim of the denial of a 4 constitutional right and (2) whether the court's procedural ruling was correct. Id.

5 Having reviewed its determinations and rulings in adjudicating Dollar's petition, the 6 court finds that none of those rulings meets the Slack standard. The court therefore 7 declines to issue a certificate of appealability for its resolution of Dollar's petition.

8 V. Conclusion

9 IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that the request for a hearing pursuant to 10 Martinez v. Ryan (ECF No. 56) is GRANTED as set forth in this order.

11 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the petition (ECF No. 16) is DENIED in its 12 entirety.

13 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that a certificate of appealability is denied.

14 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that respondents' motion for extension of time to file 15 a response to the request for a hearing (ECF No. 59) is GRANTED nunc pro tunc.

16 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Clerk shall enter judgment accordingly and 17 close this case.
