DEBRA A. SHULTZ,

Plaintiff,

v.

NANCY A. BERRYHILL, Acting
Commissioner of Social Security,

Defendant.

Case No. 2:15-cv-00804-PAL

ORDER

(Mot. Reversal/Remand – ECF No. 21)
(Cross-Mot. to Affirm – ECF No. 24)

This matter involves Plaintiff Debra A. Shultz’s appeal and request for judicial review of the Acting Commissioner of Social Security, Defendant Nancy A. Berryhill’s final decision denying her claims for disability insurance benefits under Title II of the Social Security Act (the “Act”), 42 U.S.C. §§ 401–33, and supplemental security income under Title XVI of the Act, 42 U.S.C. §§ 1381–83.¹ This case is referred to the undersigned magistrate judge for a determination and entry of final judgment pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(c) and Rule 73 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. See Reference Order (ECF No. 27).

BACKGROUND

On September 16, 2011, Ms. Schultz protectively filed applications for a period of disability, disability insurance benefits, and supplemental security income (SSI) benefits, alleging disability beginning on May 20, 2011. AR 153–66.² She was 50 years old at the time she applied.

¹ Nancy A. Berryhill is now the Acting Commissioner of Social Security. Pursuant to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the Social Security Act, the court substitutes Nancy A. Berryhill for Carolyn W. Colvin as the defendant. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 25(d) (allowing the automatic substitution of a successor to a public officer who is a party to an action but ceases to hold office while the action is pending); 42 U.S.C. § 405(g) (“Any action instituted in accordance with this subsection shall survive notwithstanding any change in the person occupying the office of Commissioner of Social Security or any vacancy in such office.”).

² AR refers to the Administrative Record (ECF No. 16-1), a certified copy of which was delivered to the undersigned upon the Commissioner’s filing of her Answer.

1 AR 37. Her work history included a job as a security officer for the Transportation Security 2 Administration and a dispatcher. AR 50, 56–57. In her application, Shultz claimed she was unable 3 to work because of bipolar disorder, fibromyalgia, ulcers, and vertigo. AR 206. The Social 4 Security Administration denied her application initially and on reconsideration. AR 74–77.

5 An administrative law judge (“ALJ”) held a hearing on August 14, 2013, where Shultz
6 appeared with counsel. AR 48–73. In an opening statement, counsel asserted Schultz qualified 7 for disability benefits because: (1) the grid rules directed a disability finding because of Shultz’s 8 age; (2) she meets or equals certain listings for mental disorders; and (3) the combination of 9 fibromyalgia, affective disorder, osteoarthritis, vertigo, and ulcers prevented her from substantial 10 gainful employment as it exists in the national economy. AR 49.

11 In a decision dated December 13, 2013, the ALJ found that Ms. Shultz was not disabled.
12 AR 20–39. Shultz requested review of the ALJ’s decision by the Appeals Council, but the decision 13 became final when the Appeals Council denied review on March 19, 2015. AR 1–6. On April 29, 14 2015, Shultz filed a complaint in federal court, seeking judicial review of the Commissioner’s 15 decision pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 405(g). The Commissioner filed her Answer (ECF No. 13) on 16 February 12, 2016. Shultz filed a Motion for Reversal and/or Remand (ECF No. 21), and the 17 Commissioner filed a Cross-Motion to Affirm and Response (ECF Nos. 24, 25).

18 The court has reviewed the record and considered Ms. Shultz’s Motion and the 19 Commissioner’s Cross-Motion and Response. Shultz did not file a reply and the deadline to do so 20 has expired. For the reasons explained, the court denies Shultz’s Motion and grants the 21 Commissioner’s Cross-Motion.

22 DISCUSSION

23 I. APPLICABLE LAW

24 A. Judicial Review of Disability Determinations

25 Federal district courts review administrative decisions in social security benefits cases 26 under 42 U.S.C. § 405(g). However, judicial “review of social security determinations is limited.” 27 Treichler v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec. Admin., 775 F.3d 1090, 1098 (9th Cir. 2014). After an ALJ has 28 held a hearing and the decision is final, § 405(g) allows a disability claimant to seek judicial review

1 of an adverse decision by filing a lawsuit in a federal district court within the district where the 2 claimant lives. The statute authorizes the court to enter “a judgment affirming, modifying, or 3 reversing the decision of the Commissioner of Social Security, with or without remanding the 4 cause for a rehearing.” 42 U.S.C. § 405(g).

5 The ALJ’s findings of fact are conclusive if they are supported by “substantial evidence.”
6 42 U.S.C. § 405(g). The court may reverse the decision “only if the ALJ’s decision was not 7 supported by substantial evidence in the record as a whole or if the ALJ applied the wrong legal 8 standard.” Shaibi v. Berryhill, 883 F.3d 1102, 1106 (9th Cir. 2017). “Substantial evidence means 9 more than a mere scintilla, but less than a preponderance. It means such relevant evidence as a 10 reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion.” Trevizo v. Berryhill, 871 F.3d 11 664, 674 (9th Cir. 2017). To determine whether the findings are supported by substantial evidence, 12 a court “must consider the entire record as a whole and may not affirm simply by isolating a 13 specific quantum of supporting evidence.” Ghanim v. Colvin, 763 F.3d 1154, 1160 (9th Cir. 2014).

14 “For highly fact-intensive individualized determinations like a claimant’s entitlement to 15 disability benefits, Congress ‘places a premium upon agency expertise, and, for the sake of 16 uniformity, it is usually better to minimize the opportunity for reviewing courts to substitute their 17 discretion for that of the agency.’” Treichler, 775 F.3d at 1098 (quoting Consolo v. Fed. Mar.
18 Comm’n, 383 U.S. 607, 621 (1966)). Thus, courts must “leave it to the ALJ to determine 19 credibility, resolve conflicts in the testimony, and resolve ambiguities in the record.” Id. (citing 20 42 U.S.C. § 405(g); Andrews v. Shalala, 53 F.3d 1035, 1039 (9th Cir. 1995)). The Commissioner’s 21 findings must be upheld if they are supported by inferences reasonably drawn from the record.
22 Batson v. Comm’r Soc. Sec. Admin., 359 F.3d 1190, 1193 (9th Cir. 2003). “Where evidence is 23 susceptible to more than one rational interpretation, the ALJ’s decision should be upheld.”
24 Trevizo, 871 F.3d at 674–75 (quoting Orn v. Astrue, 495 F.3d 625, 630 (9th Cir. 2007)).

25 The court may only review the reasons the ALJ provided in the disability decision and 26 “may not affirm the ALJ on a ground upon which he did not rely.” Id. at 675 (quoting Garrison 27 v. Colvin, 759 F.3d 995, 1010 (9th Cir. 2014)). Thus, an ALJ’s findings should be stated with 28 enough specificity so that a court does not speculate as to the basis of the findings when

1 determining if the findings are supported by substantial evidence. See Burrell v. Colvin, 775 F.3d 2 1133, 1140–41 (9th Cir. 2014). Cursory findings of fact lacking explicit statements about what 3 portions of evidence were accepted or rejected are not sufficient. Lewin v. Schweiker, 654 F.2d
4 631, 634 (9th Cir. 1981). An ALJ’s findings should be comprehensive, analytical, and include a 5 statement explaining the “factual foundations on which the ultimate factual conclusions are based.”
6 Id.; see also Hiler v. Astrue, 687 F.3d 1208, 1212 (9th Cir. 2012) (an ALJ need not “discuss every 7 piece of evidence” but must explain why significant or probative evidence was rejected).

8 B. Disability Evaluation Process

9 A five-step sequential evaluation process is used “to determine whether a claimant is 10 disabled and eligible for benefits.” Shaibi, 883 F.3d at 1106 (citing 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520(a)).
11 “The claimant carries the initial burden of proving a disability in steps one through four’.” Id.
12 (quoting Burch v. Barnhart, 400 F.3d 676, 679 (9th Cir. 2005)). To meet this burden, the claimant 13 must demonstrate an “inability to engage in any substantial gainful activity by reason of any 14 medically determinable physical or mental impairment which can be expected . . . to last for a 15 continuous period of not less than 12 months.” 42 U.S.C. § 423(d)(1)(A). If the claimant 16 establishes an inability to continue his or her past work with specific medical evidence, the burden 17 shifts to the Commissioner in step five to show that the claimant can perform other substantial 18 gainful work. Shaibi, 883 F.3d at 1106.

19 II. THE ALJ’S DECISION

20 An ALJ is required to follow the five-step process to determine whether a claimant is 21 disabled. 20 C.F.R. § 416.920. If an ALJ makes a finding of disability or non-disability at any 22 step, no further evaluation is required. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(a)(4), 416.920(a)(4); Barnhart v.
23 Thomas, 540 U.S. 20, 24 (2003).

24 Here, the ALJ followed the five-step sequential evaluation process and issued an 25 unfavorable decision (the “Decision”). AR 20–39.

26 A. Step One

27 The first step of the disability evaluation requires an ALJ to determine whether the claimant 28 is currently engaging in substantial gainful activity (“SGA”). 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(b),

1 416.920(b). SGA is defined as work activity that is both substantial and gainful; it involves doing 2 significant physical or mental activities, usually for pay or profit. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1572(a)–(b), 3 416.972(a)–(b). If the claimant is currently engaging in SGA, then a finding of not disabled is 4 made. If the claimant is not engaging in SGA, then the analysis proceeds to the second step.

5 At step one, the ALJ found that Ms. Shultz had not engaged in SGA since May 20, 2011, 6 the alleged onset date. AR 25. Given her lack of SGA, the analysis proceeded to step two.

7 B. Step Two

8 The second step of the disability evaluation addresses whether a claimant has a medically-9 determinable impairment that is severe or a combination of impairments that significantly limits 10 him or her from performing basic work activities. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(c), 416.920(c). An 11 impairment or combination of impairments is not severe when medical and other evidence 12 establish only a slight abnormality or a combination of slight abnormalities that would have no 13 more than a minimal effect on the claimant’s ability to work. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1521, 416.921;
14 Social Security Ruling (“SSR”) 85-28, 1985 WL 56856 (Jan. 1, 1985), SSR 96-3p, 61 Fed. Reg.
15 34468 (July 2, 1996); SSR 96-4p, 61 Fed. Reg. 34488 (July 2, 1996).³ If a claimant does not have 16 a severe medically-determinable impairment or combination of impairments, then an ALJ will 17 make a finding that a claimant is not disabled. If a claimant has a severe medically-determinable 18 impairment or combination of impairments, then an ALJ’s analysis proceeds to the third step.

19 At step two in the Decision, the ALJ found that Ms. Shultz had the following severe 20 impairments: (i) bipolar disorder, and (ii) history of alcohol abuse and dependence. Because she 21 had multiple severe medically-determinable impairments, the ALJ proceeded to the third step.⁴

22 ³ SSRs are the Social Security Administration’s official interpretations of the Act and its regulations. Bray
23 v. Comm’r Soc. Sec. Admin., 554 F.3d 1219, 1224 (9th Cir. 2009); 20 C.F.R. § 402.35(b)(1). “SSRs do not 24 carry the ‘force of law,’ but they are binding on ALJs nonetheless.” Bray, 554 F.3d at 1224. SSRs are entitled to some deference as long as they are consistent with the Act and related regulations. Id. at 1223.

25 ⁴ Although Ms. Shultz testified that she suffered from fibromyalgia, muscle pain, and vertigo, her report 26 was not supported by medical diagnoses, laboratory findings or explanation. AR 25–26. She further 27 testified that she’d had left shoulder surgery. AR 26. However, there were no medical records to support 28 this allegedly disabling impairment. Id. The ALJ therefore concluded there was insufficient evidence to find these were severe impairments. Id. In addition, the ALJ noted that he considered the regulation related to obesity. AR 26 (citing SSR 02-1p, 67 Fed. Reg. 57859 (Sept. 12, 2002)). Ms. Shultz testified that she weighed 170 pounds and was 5 foot 2 inches tall, giving her a Body Mass Index (BMI) of 31.1%. Id. The ALJ found this impairment did not cause any significant limitations in her ability to perform “basic” work

1 C. Step Three

2 Step three of the disability evaluation requires an ALJ to determine whether a claimant’s 3 impairments or combination of impairments meet or medically equal the criteria of an impairment 4 listed in 20 C.F.R. Part 404, Subpart P, Appendix 1, which is commonly referred to as the 5 “Listings.” 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(d), 404.1525, 404.1526, 416.920(d), 416.925, and 416.826. If 6 a claimant’s impairment or combination of impairments meet or equal the criteria of the Listings 7 and meet the duration requirement, 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1509, 416.909, then an ALJ makes a finding 8 of disability. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(h), 416.920(h). If a claimant’s impairment or combination 9 of impairments does not meet or equal the criteria of the Listings or meet the duration requirement, 10 then the analysis proceeds to the next step.

11 When the Agency evaluates the severity of mental impairments, 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520a 12 requires the use of a “special technique” to evaluate four broad functional areas known as the 13 “Paragraph B Criteria” in Listing 12.00C of the Listing of Impairments set forth at 20 C.F.R., Part 14 404, Subpart P, Appendix 1. Id.; 20 C.F.R. § 1520a (explaining the psychiatric review technique); 15 SSR 96-8p, 61 Fed. Reg. 34474 (July 2, 1996) (application of the technique is documented on a 16 Psychiatric Review Technique Form). Paragraph B criteria require a claimant to show that he or 17 she experienced marked limitations in mental function. 20 C.F.R. Pt. 404, Subpt. P, App. 1, 18 § 12.00. To satisfy Paragraph B criteria, mental impairments must result in at least two of the 19 following: (i) marked restriction in activities of daily living; (ii) marked difficulties in maintaining 20 social functioning; (iii) marked difficulties in maintaining concentration, persistence, or pace; or 21 (iv) repeated episodes of decompensation, each of extended duration. See, e.g., id. § 12.04(B). A 22 “marked” limitation means “more than moderate but less than extreme.” Id. § 12.00(C). Repeated 23 episodes of decompensation with extended duration means three episodes within one year, or an 24 average of once every four months, each lasting for at least two weeks. Id. § 12.00(C)(4).

25 If the Paragraph B criteria are not met, a claimant may nevertheless be found disabled under 26 alternative Paragraph C criteria. Id. § 12.00(A). Under the regulations, Paragraph C criteria are

27 _____
28 activity and was not severe under 20 C.F.R. § 404.1521. Id. Thus, the ALJ determined that obesity was also a non-severe impairment. Id. Schultz does not challenge these findings on judicial review.

1 considered only if the Paragraph B criteria are not satisfied. Id. Paragraph C criteria require a 2 medically documented history of a chronic affective disorder of at least two years duration that 3 has caused more than a minimal limitation of ability to do basic work activities with symptoms or 4 signs currently attenuated by medication or psychosocial support, and one of the following:
5 (1) repeated episodes of decompensation each of extended duration; or (2) a residual disease 6 process that has resulted in such marginal adjustment that even a minimal increase in mental 7 demands or change in the environment would be predicted to cause the individual to 8 decompensate; or (3) current history of one or more years' inability to function outside a highly 9 supportive living arrangement, with an indication of continued need for such arrangement. See 10 §§ 12.02(C), 12.03(C), 12.04(C), 12.05(C), 12.06(C).

11 At step three, the ALJ determined that the evidence did not support a finding that Ms.
12 Shultz had the severity of symptoms required, either singly or in combination, to meet or equal 13 Listings 12.04 (affective disorders) or 12.09 (substance addiction disorders). AR 26. The ALJ 14 specifically evaluated the Paragraph B Criteria for Listings 12.04 and 12.09 and concluded that 15 the greater weight of the evidence showed that Shultz suffered: (i) mild restrictions in activities of 16 daily living; (ii) mild to moderate difficulties in social functioning; (iii) moderate limitations in 17 concentration, persistence, or pace; and (iv) no episodes of decompensation that have been of 18 extended duration. AR 26–27; see also AR 422–35 (Psychiatric Review Technique Form). The 19 ALJ also considered Paragraph C criteria; however, the record lacked evidence of Paragraph C 20 criteria. AR 27. The ALJ therefore concluded that she did not have an impairment or combination 21 of impairments that meet or medically equal one of the impairments described in the Listings. Id.
22 Schultz does not claim she has an impairment or combination of impairments that meet or equal 23 the Listings on judicial review of the ALJ's Decision.

24 D. Step Four – RFC

25 The fourth step requires an ALJ to determine whether a claimant has the residual functional 26 capacity (“RFC”) to perform his or her past relevant work (“PRW”). 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(f), 27 416.920(f). To answer this question, an ALJ must first determine a claimant's RFC. 20 C.F.R.
28 §§ 404.1520(e), 416.920(e). RFC is a function-by-function assessment of a claimant's ability to

1 do physical and mental work-related activities on a sustained basis despite limitations from 2 impairments. SSR 96-8p, 61 Fed. Reg. 34474 (July 2, 1996). In making this finding, an ALJ must 3 consider all the relevant evidence such as symptoms and the extent to which they can be reasonably 4 be accepted as consistent with the objective medical evidence and other evidence. 20 C.F.R.
5 §§ 404.1529, 416.929; SSR 96-4p, 61 Fed. Reg. 34488 (July 2, 1996); SSR 96-7p, 61 Fed. Reg.
6 34483 (July 2, 1996). To the extent that statements about the intensity, persistence, or functionally 7 limiting effects of pain or other symptoms are not substantiated by objective medical evidence, an 8 ALJ must make a finding on the credibility of a claimant's statements based on a consideration of 9 the entire case record. An ALJ must also consider opinion evidence in accordance with the 10 requirements of 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1527 and 416.927 as well as SSR 96-2p, 61 Fed. Reg. 34489
11 (July 2, 1996); SSR 96-5p, 61 Fed. Reg. 34471 (July 2, 1996); and SSR 06-3p, 71 Fed. Reg. 45593 12 (Aug. 9, 2006).

13 After considering the entire record, the ALJ concluded that Ms. Shultz had the RFC to 14 "perform a full range of work at all exertional levels but with the following non-exertional 15 limitations: she is limited to performing no more than simple work tasks and following simple 16 work instructions." AR 28. In making this finding, the ALJ "considered all symptoms and the 17 extent to which these symptoms can reasonably be accepted as consistent with the objective 18 medical evidence and the other evidence." Id. He also considered opinion evidence. Id. Although 19 the ALJ found that Shultz's medically determinable impairments could reasonably be expected to 20 cause her alleged symptoms, he determined that her statements concerning the intensity, 21 persistence and limiting effects of those symptoms were not entirely credible. AR 29. Ms. Shultz 22 does experience some levels of mental limitations, but the ALJ found that her treatment notes in 23 the record do not sustain her allegations of disability, and that his RFC assessment is supported by 24 the objective medical evidence in the record. AR 36.

25 E. Step Four – Ability to Perform PRW

26 Once an ALJ has determined a claimant's RFC as an initial consideration at step four, an 27 ALJ utilizes the RFC assessment to determine whether a claimant can perform his or her PRW.
28 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(f), 416.920(f). PRW means work a claimant performed within the last 15

1 years, either as the claimant actually performed it or as it is generally performed in the national 2 economy. 20 C.F.R. § 404.1560(b). In addition, the work must have lasted long enough for a 3 claimant to learn the job and to perform it as SGA. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1560(b), 404.1565, 4 419.960(b), 416.965. If a claimant has the RFC to perform his or her past work, then an ALJ 5 makes a finding that a claimant is not disabled.

6 The Department of Labor publishes the Dictionary of Occupational Titles (DOT), which 7 provides “detailed physical requirements for a variety of jobs.” Bray v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec.
8 Admin., 554 F.3d 1219, 1230 n.3 (9th Cir. 2009) (quoting Massachi v. Astrue, 486 F.3d 1149, 1153 9 n.8 (9th Cir. 2007)). The ALJ and/or a vocational expert utilizes the DOT in determining whether 10 a claimant with her RFC, can perform her PRW. Id. (citing 20 C.F.R. § 404.1560(b)(2)).

11 At step four in the Decision, the ALJ concluded that Ms. Shultz was unable to perform her 12 PRW as a security officer (DOT # 376.367-018) and dispatcher (DOT # 913.367-010). AR 37.
13 The vocational expert testified that a hypothetical individual with Ms. Shultz’s RFC would not be 14 able to complete the demands of her PRW. AR 67–68. Accordingly, the ALJ accepted this 15 testimony and determined she was unable to perform her PRW. AR 37. As a result, the ALJ 16 continued to step five.

17 F. Step Five

18 Step five requires an ALJ to determine whether a claimant can perform any other work 19 considering his or her RFC, age, education, and work experience. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(g), 20 416.920(g). If he or she can do other work, then an ALJ makes a finding that a claimant is not 21 disabled. Although a claimant generally continues to have the burden of proving disability at this 22 step, the Commissioner is responsible for providing evidence that demonstrates that other work 23 exists in significant numbers in the national economy that the claimant can do. Beltran v. Astrue, 24 700 F.3d 386, 389 (9th Cir. 2012) (citing 42 U.S.C. § 423(d)(2)(A)).

25 The Medical-Vocational Guidelines, 20 C.F.R. Part 404, Subpart P, Appendix 2, are 26 commonly known as the “Grids,” and specific sections are referred to as a Medical-Vocational 27 rule. The Grids aid the ALJ in the analysis at step five for cases that cannot be evaluated on 28 medical considerations alone. The Grids consist of three tables that each represent a different

1 physical exertional level: sedentary, light, and medium work. Id. Each table also presents the 2 vocational factors Congress has identified as important: age, education, and work experience. If a 3 claimant can perform all or substantially all of the exertional demands at a given exertional level, 4 the Grids direct a conclusion of either “disabled” or “not disabled” depending upon the claimant’s 5 specific vocational profile. SSR 83-11, 1983 WL 31252 (Jan. 1, 1983). When a claimant cannot 6 perform substantially all of the exertional demands of work at a given level of exertion and/or has 7 non-exertional limitations, the Grids are used as a framework for decision-making, unless there is 8 a particular rule that directs a conclusion of “disabled” without considering the additional 9 exertional and/or non-exertional limitations. See SSR 83-12, 1983 WL 31253 (Jan. 1, 1983); SSR
10 83-14, 1983 WL 31254 (Jan. 1, 1983). If the claimant has solely non-exertional limitations, 11 Medical-Vocational Rule 204.00 provides a framework for decision-making. SSR 85-15, 1985 12 WL 56857 (Jan. 1, 1983).

13 At step five in the Decision, the ALJ determined that Ms. Shultz could perform jobs that 14 exist in significant numbers in the national economy, considering her age, education, work 15 experience, and RFC, using the Grids as a framework for his decision. AR 37–38. On the alleged 16 date of disability onset, Shultz was 50 years old, which categorized her as an individual closely 17 approaching advanced age. AR 37. She has at least a high school education and is able to 18 communicate in English. Id. The ALJ found that transferability of her job skills was not material 19 to the determination of disability, because using the Grids as a framework supported a finding that 20 she was not disabled, without regard to whether she had transferable job skills. Id.

21 The ALJ found that Ms. Shultz’s ability to perform work at all exertional levels has been 22 compromised by non-exertional limitations. AR 38. To determine the extent to which her non-23 exertional limitations eroded the occupational base of unskilled work at all exertional levels, the 24 ALJ asked the vocational expert, Bernard Preston, a hypothetical question regarding whether jobs 25 exist in the national economy for an individual with Shultz’s age, education, work experience, and 26 RFC. AR 38, 64–73. Mr. Preston testified that the individual would be able to perform the 27 requirements of three representative jobs:

28 ///

Job Title	DOT Code	Exertional Level	Skill Level	Approximate Number of Jobs Existing
Ticket Taker	344.667-010	Light	Unskilled	86,527 nationally
Office Helper	239.567-010	Light	Unskilled	117,183 nationally
Mail Clerk	209.687-026	Light	Unskilled	71,760 nationally

AR 38.

Ms. Shultz’s counsel asked Mr. Preston whether a hypothetical individual with “a moderate restriction in maintaining attention, concentration and pace for extended periods” would be able to do these jobs. AR 38, 70–73. Preston responded that based on his interpretation of what “moderately is defined...it would eliminate those jobs, sir.” AR 71. The Decision quotes SSR 86-8, 1986 WL 68636 (Jan. 1, 1986), which states that the “claimant’s functional capacity must be defined in terms of the claimant’s ability to function in a work setting.” Because Shultz’s counsel did not specify the functional limitations that would result from the “moderate” limitations he posed in his hypothetical question, the ALJ did not give significant weight to this testimony.

AR 38.

The ALJ found that Mr. Preston’s testimony in response to the ALJ’s initial hypothetical was consistent with the DOT and the jobs Preston identified represented significant numbers. Id. Considering Shultz’s age, education, work experience, and RFC, the ALJ determined she was capable of making a successful adjustment to other jobs that exist in significant numbers in the national economy. Id. A finding of “not disabled” was, thus, appropriate under the framework of section 204.00 of the Medical-Vocational Guidelines. Id.

III. THE PARTIES’ POSITIONS

Ms. Shultz seeks reversal and remand of the ALJ’s decision on the grounds the ALJ failed to properly consider the medical evidence from Dr. Voss and the testimony of Mr. Preston. Pl.’s Mot. (ECF No. 21). Shultz points out that Dr. Voss found she was moderately limited in multiple areas.⁵ Schultz claims that when her counsel asked Mr. Preston to assume the moderate limitations

⁵ Dr. Voss found moderate limitations in her abilities to (i) understand, remember, and carryout detailed instructions; (ii) maintain attention and concentration for extended periods; (iii) perform activities within a schedule, maintain regular attendance, and be punctual within customary tolerances; and (iv) complete a normal workday and workweek without interruptions from psychologically based symptoms and to perform

1 described by Dr. Voss, the vocational expert testified that such a person would have no work 2 available to them, citing AR 71.

3 Ms. Shultz contends that the ALJ erred in his assessment of Dr. Voss' opinion. Although 4 the ALJ claimed to give Dr. Voss' opinion great weight, Shultz argues the ALJ ignored the doctor's 5 findings of moderate limitations when the ALJ made his RFC assessment. The ALJ's RFC 6 assessment incorporated Dr. Voss' limitation to simple work tasks and simple work instructions, 7 and the ALJ included these limitations in his hypothetical to the vocational expert, but excluded 8 Dr. Voss' moderate limitations without explanation, which was legal error. By rejecting Mr.
9 Preston's testimony that included Shultz's moderate limitations, she asserts that the ALJ simply 10 substituted his own lay opinion for that of the expert.

11 The Motion anticipated the Commissioner would cite Stubbs-Danielson v. Astrue, 539 F.3d 12 1169 (9th Cir. 2008), and argues that reliance on this case is misplaced. There, the Ninth Circuit 13 held that an "assessment of a claimant adequately captures restrictions related to concentration, 14 persistence, or pace where the assessment is consistent with the restrictions identified in the 15 medical testimony." Id. at 1174. Shultz argues that the medical testimony in Stubbs-Danielson 16 "did not establish any limitations in concentration, persistence, or pace." Mot. at 13. In contrast, 17 the medical evidence in this case establishes that Schultz has multiple moderate limitations in 18 concentration, persistence, or pace. Shultz therefore urges the court to find Stubbs-Danielson 19 inapposite.

20 The Commissioner seeks affirmance of the ALJ's Decision asserting the ALJ properly 21 assessed Dr. Voss's opinion, Shultz's RFC, and Mr. Preston's testimony in determining that Shultz
22 is not disabled. Cross-Mot. & Resp. (ECF Nos. 24, 25). The Commissioner argues that the ALJ's
23 RFC assessment properly accounted for Shultz's limitations as stated in Dr. Voss' mental RFC 24 assessment. Ms. Shultz retained the RFC to work at all levels of exertion; however, based on Dr.
25 Voss' opinion, the ALJ found Shultz was limited to simple work and following simple tasks.

26
27 _____
28 at a consistent pace without an unreasonable number and length of rest periods. AR 436–37. Each of these areas was evaluated "within the context of the individual's capacity to sustain that activity over a normal workday and workweek, on an ongoing basis." AR 436.

1 AR 28, 34–35. Shultz claims this RFC should have included moderate limitations in maintaining 2 concentration, persistence, or pace for extended periods, as well as maintaining attendance, but 3 these limitations are not the same as RFC. The Commissioner points out that Shultz’s RFC is the 4 most she can do despite her impairments and resulting limitations. Cross-Mot. & Resp. at 5 (citing 5 20 C.F.R. § 404.1545).⁶ The plain language of the regulations contradicts her contention.

6 The Cross-Motion argues the special technique for evaluating mental impairments requires 7 the ALJ to determine what limitations a claimant has in the functional domains of activities of 8 daily living, maintaining social functioning, and maintaining concentration, persistence, or pace.
9 The Commissioner notes that regulations and case law provide guidance on this issue and establish 10 that “a moderate limitation is not part of the RFC, but merely informs the RFC finding.” Id.
11 (collecting cases and quoting SSR 96-8p).⁷ Dr. Voss’ findings of moderate limitations informed 12 his conclusion as to what Shultz could do despite her limitations. Id. (citing AR 432 (III. Rating 13 of Functional Limitations, A. “B” Criteria of the Listings)). Dr Voss’ mental RFC assessment 14 concluded that Ms. Shultz “can maintain the attention, concentration, and persistence necessary to 15 carry out simple work tasks at a consistent pace over a regular 40 hr workweek.” AR 438.

16 The Commissioner asserts that the ALJ properly rejected the portions of Mr. Preston’s 17 testimony that eliminated substantial gainful employment for Ms. Shultz based on her counsel’s 18 unspecified, moderate functional limitations. Shultz’s counsel asked Mr. Preston to explain the 19 meaning of a moderate limitation in attention, concentration, and persistence. But Preston did not 20 need to provide an explanation since Dr. Voss did so. The Commissioner asserts that the ALJ 21 reasonably relied on Dr. Voss’ explanation of his mental residual functional capacity findings.

22 The Commissioner also argues the Motion misstates the facts and applicability of Stubbs- 23 Danielson. There, the medical record did, in fact, show a limitation in the claimant’s pace, which 24 one doctor opined restricted her to “simple tasks.” 539 F.3d at 1173. Here, Dr. Voss found

25
26 ⁶ “Your residual functional capacity is the most you can still do despite your limitations.” 20 C.F.R.
§ 404.1545(a)(1).

27 ⁷ SSR 96-8p, 61 Fed. Reg. 34474 (July 2, 1996) (limitations in activities of daily living, maintaining social 28 functioning, and maintaining concentration, persistence, or pace “are not an RFC assessment but are used to rate the severity of mental impairment(s) at steps 2 and 3 of the sequential evaluation process”).

1 limitations in Ms. Shultz's concentration, persistence, or pace, and then found those limitations
2 restricted her to simple tasks at a consistent pace over a normal workweek. Thus, the Ninth
3 Circuit's holding in Stubbs-Danielson supports the ALJ's findings that the Commissioner's 4 decision should be affirmed.

5 IV. ANALYSIS AND DECISION

6 The court has reviewed the record in its entirety and weighed both the evidence that 7 supports and the evidence that detracts from the ALJ's conclusion and finds the ALJ's decision is 8 supported by substantial evidence, and the ALJ did not commit legal error.

9 As an initial matter, the Motion erroneously claims that the ALJ determined Schultz could 10 perform her PRW. Mot. (ECF No. 21) at 5. The ALJ found that Schultz had the RFC to perform 11 a full range of work at all exertional levels; however, because of her non-exertional limitations she 12 was limited to performing no more than simple work tasks and following simple work instructions.
13 AR 28. He relied on the testimony of the vocational expert and found that Schultz could not 14 perform her PRW as a security officer and dispatcher. AR 37.

15 On judicial review, Schutz claims the ALJ committed reversible error by failing to properly 16 consider the medical opinion of the state agency physician, David Voss, PhD, and the testimony 17 of the vocational expert. She does not challenge the ALJ's findings regarding her treating 18 physicians, the examining physicians, the weight afforded to the opinions of physicians other than 19 Dr. Voss, or his adverse credibility finding. Accordingly, this order addresses only Dr. Voss' 20 opinion regarding Shultz's non-exertional mental impairments and the portion of the Decision 21 discussing his opinion.

22 Dr. Voss completed a Psychiatric Review Technique Form for Ms. Shultz on April 17, 23 2012. AR 422–35. Dr. Voss reviewed the medical evidence of record, including treating and 24 consultative sources. AR 434. The doctor noted that Shultz had been seen by a psychiatrist, Eden 25 Santiago-Lee, M.D., from July 2007 to August 2011 and was diagnosed with bipolar disorder.
26 AR 434 (citing AR 311–22). Dr. Voss also noted that a disability determination services 27 physician, Rochelle Hawkins, M.D., completed an internal medicine consultative examination on 28 Shultz on March 23, 2012, diagnosing Shultz with bipolar disorder and depression. AR 434 (citing

1 AR 411–21). The Psychiatric Review Technique Form further addressed Ms. Shultz’s credibility 2 issues. AR 434. Dr. Voss found that Shultz’s “impairments could reasonably be expected to 3 produce the alleged symptoms, but their intensity and the effect on functioning are not consistent 4 with the total file of evidence.” Id. The doctor opined that her statements were only “partially 5 credible.” He found Shultz had the following functional limitations: (i) mild limitation in activities 6 of daily living; (ii) moderate difficulties in social functioning; (iii) moderate limitation in 7 maintaining concentration, persistence, or pace; and (iv) no episodes of decompensation. AR 432.
8 Dr. Voss assessed her functional limitations finding her “mental impairments do not interfere with 9 ADLs, social interactions and/or cognitive capacities to such an extent that claimant meets or 10 equals a listing.” Id. He opined a mental residual functional capacity assessment was needed to 11 assess her residual functional capacity. AR 434.

12 Dr. Voss also completed a Mental Residual Functional Capacity Assessment, (“MRFC”), 13 on April 17, 2012. AR 436–39. Dr. Voss determined Ms. Shultz was not significantly limited in 14 the ability to remember work locations and procedures or to understand and remember very short 15 and simple instructions. AR 436. These abilities would allow her to complete “multi-step tasks.”
16 AR 438. In the areas of sustained concentration and persistence, he found she was not significantly 17 limited in the ability to sustain an ordinary routine without special supervision, work in 18 coordination with or proximity to others without being distracted by them and make simple work-19 related decisions. AR 436. She was moderately limited in her ability to carry out detailed 20 instructions, maintain attention and concentration over extended periods and perform activities 21 with a schedule, maintain regular attendance and be punctual with customary tolerances. Id. He 22 found she was also moderately limited in her ability to complete a normal workday and workweek 23 without interruptions from psychologically based symptoms and to perform at a consistent pace 24 without an unreasonable number and length of rest periods. AR 437. Dr. Voss found that Shultz 25 was not significantly limited in the areas of social interaction and adaptation. Id.

26 Dr. Voss’ functional capacity assessment was based on the medical evidence of record. AR 27 438. Although Schultz had the limitations noted in his MRFC Dr. Voss concluded her prior history 28 and medical evidence “does not indicate the presence of functional limitations severe enough to

1 prevent employment in all work environments.” Id. He opined she could “maintain the attention, 2 concentration and persistence necessary to carry out simple work tasks at a consistent pace over a 3 regular 40 hr workweek, within [her] physical limitations.” AR 438. Based on Ms. Shultz’s 4 medically determinable impairments and mental RFC assessment, Dr. Voss determined she was 5 “capable of unskilled work.” AR 438. The ALJ gave Dr. Voss’ opinion significant weight because 6 he found it was supported by the medical record and consistent with Shultz’s testimony during the 7 administrative hearing that she was actively looking for work. AR 35.

8 Here, the Decision demonstrates that the ALJ thoroughly considered the treatment records, 9 opinions, consultative examinations, and findings of Drs. Puskarski, Zamirowski, Santiago-Lee, 10 Gotanco, Hawkins, Mack, Cremerius, and Voss. AR 26–38. Dr. Voss opined that Ms. Shultz was 11 moderately limited in certain areas. AR 436–37. However, the doctor also opined that she had 12 the ability to understand and remember very short and simple instructions, which would allow her 13 to complete “multi-step tasks.” AR 436, 438. According to Dr. Voss, the medical evidence 14 indicated she could “maintain the attention, concentration and persistence necessary to carry out 15 simple work tasks at a consistent pace over a regular 40 hr workweek, within [her] physical 16 limitations.” AR 438. Thus, she was “capable of unskilled work.” Id. The ALJ expressly relied 17 on Dr. Voss’ opinion to formulate Shultz’s RFC and the hypothetical he posed to Mr. Preston.
18 AR 71. The ALJ found that Shultz had the RFC to “perform a full range of work at all exertional 19 levels but ... she is limited to performing no more than simple work tasks and following simple 20 work instructions.” AR 28.

21 Schultz does not explicitly challenge the ALJ’s residual functional capacity assessment at 22 step three of the sequential evaluation process. Rather, she argues the ALJ erred at step five by not 23 properly considering the opinion of Dr. Voss that she was moderately limited in certain areas, and 24 by not incorporating those moderate limitations in the hypothetical the ALJ posed to the vocational 25 expert. Schultz also maintains that the hypothetical posed by her counsel incorporated those 26 moderate limitations, and that the ALJ erred by failing to properly consider the expert’s response 27 to counsel’s hypothetical. The court finds the ALJ’s residual functional capacity assessment
28 properly accounted for the moderate functional limitations Dr. Voss found. The ALJ’s RFC

1 accounted for Shultz’s difficulties in maintaining concentration, persistence and pace. The court 2 also finds the ALJ did not err in failing to give significant weight to the testimony of the vocational 3 expert which responded to counsel’s hypothetical which was based on a faulty premise. As the 4 ALJ pointed out at the hearing the opinion Dr. Voss reached in his psychiatric review technique is 5 not a residual functional capacity assessment. The ALJ’s RFC considered and relied on Dr. Voss’ 6 opinions in finding Schultz had the RFC to perform work at all exertional levels with the non-7 exertional limitations to performing no more than simple work tasks and following simple 8 instructions.

9 The ALJ assesses a claimant’s RFC based on all the relevant evidence in the record.
10 Laborin v. Berryhill, 867 F.3d 1151, 1153 (9th Cir. 2017) (quoting 20 C.F.R. § 416.945(a)(1)).
11 The “ALJ’s assessment of a claimant adequately captures restrictions related to concentration, 12 persistence, or pace where the assessment is consistent with restrictions identified in the medical 13 testimony.” Stubbs-Danielson, 539 F.3d at 1174. “[T]he ALJ is responsible for translating and 14 incorporating clinical findings into a succinct RFC.” Rounds v. Comm’r Soc. Sec. Admin., 807 15 F.3d 996, 1006 (9th Cir. 2015) (citing Stubbs-Danielson, 539 F.3d at 1174).

16 Schultz concedes that a finding of moderate non-exertional limitations does not impose 17 limitations that satisfy the step three analysis. However, she argues that a moderate impairment 18 “does impose significantly severe limitations that may impact on the ability to perform 19 ‘substantial’ gainful activity at steps four and five of the sequential disability analysis, as opposed 20 to step three’s more stringent demand that no gainful work actually be performed.” Motion (ECF 21 No. 21) 7:19-24. Schultz claims that the vocational expert provided a definition of the word 22 “moderate” and testified that moderate limitations would eliminate all work activity, citing AR 71.
23 She contends the ALJ committed reversible error in rejecting the vocational expert’s testimony in 24 this regard, and merely substituted his own lay opinion for the opinion of the vocational expert.
25 She maintains the ALJ’s hypothetical incorporated the limitations of simple work tasks and simple 26 work instructions into the RFC assessment, but failed to incorporate the moderate limitations 27 described by Dr. Voss. The court disagrees.

1 Citing an unpublished Ninth Circuit decision of Brink v. Comm.'r Soc. Sec. Adm., 348 F.
2 Appx. 211, 212 (9th Cir. 2009), she argues that “a limitation to simple, repetitive work by itself
3 does not adequately encompass difficulties with concentration, persistence, or pace.” Motion 4 (ECF No. 21), 10:22 – 11:8. Unpublished dispositions or orders of the Ninth Circuit may not be 5 cited as precedent, except when relevant under the doctrine of law of the case or rules of claim 6 preclusion or issue preclusion. See Ninth Circuit Rule 36-3(a); Hart v. Massanari, 266 F.3d 1155, 7 1180 (9th Cir. 2001). However, unpublished dispositions and orders issued from 2007 forward
8 may be cited as persuasive authority. Animal Legal Def. Fund v. Veneman, 490 F.3d 725, 733 (9th 9 Cir. 2007) (citing Ninth Circuit Rule 36-3(b)); Fed. R. App. P. 32.1(a). The court agrees with the 10 Commissioner that the Brink decision misread the Ninth Circuit’s holding in Stubbs-Danielson.
11 More importantly the court finds Stubbs-Danielson is controlling authority supporting the 12 Commissioner’s position.

13 Schultz contends the Ninth Circuit’s holding in Stubbs-Danielson v. Astrue, 539 F.3d 116 14 (9th Cir. 2008) is inapposite because the medical testimony in that case did not establish any 15 limitation in concentration or pace. Here, however, Dr. Voss opined that Schultz does have 16 difficulty with concentration, persistence, and pace. Again, the court disagrees.

17 In Stubbs-Danielson, the Ninth Circuit addressed a claimant’s denial of disability benefits 18 in the context of claimed mental and physical limitations. Evaluations were conducted by two 19 physicians and one psychologist. Dr. McCollum evaluated Stubbs-Danielson and diagnosed her 20 with borderline intellectual functioning and said she showed good persistence, but slow pace in 21 thought and action. Id. at 1171. Dr. McCollum found Stubbs-Danielson could follow three-step 22 instructions. Dr. McCollum made other findings with respect to her intellectual functioning, verbal 23 comprehension, perceptual organization, abstract thinking and the like. Dr. McCollum also did 24 a Mental Residual Functional Capacity assessment which found Stubbs-Danielson moderately 25 limited in several other functioning areas. Id. at 1173. He did not, however, assess whether Stubbs-26 Daniels could perform unskilled work on a sustained basis. Id.

27 Dr. Eather, a state agency reviewing psychologist, assessed whether Stubbs-Danielson 28 could perform unskilled work on a sustained basis. Id. Dr Eather found Stubbs-Danielson

1 functioned at “a slow pace, both in thinking & actions” and had several moderate limitations in 2 other mental areas. However, he concluded she had the ability to “carry out simple tasks” as 3 evidenced by her activities of daily living. Dr. Eather opined Stubbs-Danielson could perform 4 simple work without public contact. Id.

5 At the administrative hearing the vocational expert testified that a person with more than a 6 mild limitation in pace would be precluded from employment except in a sheltered workshop. Id.
7 at 1174. The ALJ refused to lend any weight to this assessment because it did not address Stubbs-
8 Danielson’s RFC and was not based on the record as a whole. The ALJ denied Stubbs-Danielson’s 9 application for disability benefits. He found at step three of the sequential evaluation process that 10 Stubbs-Danielson’s conditions did not meet or equal a listed impairment and that her allegations 11 regarding her limitations were not entirely credible. He determined that she had the RFC to 12 perform simple, routine, repetitive, sedentary work requiring no interaction with the public.

13 On appeal, Stubbs-Danielson claimed that the ALJ improperly rejected the opinions of the 14 treating and examining doctors as well as Stubbs-Danielson’s own subjective complaints. Id. at 15 1173. More specifically, she argued that the ALJ’s RFC assessment did not capture her deficiency 16 in maintaining pace and other mental limitations identified by Dr. McCollum and Dr. Eather. Id.
17 The Ninth Circuit disagreed finding that the ALJ appropriately “translated Stubbs-Danielson’s 18 condition, including the pace and mental limitations, into the only concrete restrictions available 19 to him—Dr. Eather’s recommended restriction to ‘simple tasks.’” Id. at 1174. The Ninth Circuit 20 explicitly rejected Stubbs-Danielson’s argument that the ALJ’s RFC assessment restricting 21 Stubbs-Danielson to “simple tasks” constituted a rejection of Dr. McCollum’s opinion. Id. The 22 Ninth Circuit also found that Dr. Eather’s assessment was consistent with Dr. McCollum’s mental 23 RFC assessment which found Stubbs-Danielson was not significantly limited in her ability to carry 24 out very short simple instructions, maintain attention and concentration for extended periods, and 25 sustain an ordinary routine without special supervision. Joining two sister circuits, the Ninth 26 Circuit found that “an ALJ’s assessment of a claimant adequately captures restrictions related to 27 concentration, persistence, or pace where the assessment is consistent with restrictions identified 28 in the medical testimony.” Id.

The Ninth Circuit also rejected the argument counsel for Schultz advances in this case concerning the ALJ’s failure to give significant weight to the opinion of the vocational expert that a person with more than mild limitations would be precluded from employment. The court found that the ALJ’s hypothetical which included the claimant’s ability to perform simple, routine, repetitive tasks “adequately captured claimant’s deficiencies in concentration, persistence or pace.” Id. The Ninth Circuit found the ALJ’s failure to give the vocational expert’s testimony any weight about the hypothetical relied on by Stubbs-Danielson “represents the type of credibility determination charged to the ALJ which we may not disturb where, as here, the evidence reasonably supports the ALJ’s decision.” Id.

At step five, the ALJ must consider four factors to determine whether a claimant can work—age, education, work experience, and RFC. 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520(a)(4)(V), (g). Schultz does not claim the ALJ made any erroneous findings concerning these factors. She does not claim that the ALJ erred at step three in assessing her RFC. Rather, she claims the ALJ committed reversible error by failing to incorporate Dr. Voss’ non-exertional, moderate limitations into the hypothetical the ALJ posed to the vocational expert because a limitation to simple work and simple instructions does not adequately address difficulties in persistence, concentration and pace. The court finds the Ninth Circuit’s decision in Stubbs-Danielson forecloses this argument. The ALJ’s hypothetical to the vocational expert limited the hypothetical claimant to simple, routine tasks with simple instructions and therefore adequately captured Schultz’s deficiencies in concentration, persistence and pace. The ALJ was not required to give any weight to the testimony of the vocational expert in response to the hypothetical posed by counsel for Schultz because the hypothetical was not supported by the ALJ’s RFC and the medical record.

The ALJ considered Dr. Voss’ opinion concerning Schultz’s moderate, non-exertional limitations in reaching his RFC assessment. AR 72. Dr. Voss made the moderate limitations findings in his psychiatric review technique form which the ALJ used in reaching his RFC assessment. Dr. Voss’ mental RFC assessment was that Schultz “can maintain the attention, concentration, and persistence necessary to carry out simple work tasks at a consistent pace over

1 a regular 40 hr workweek” despite her moderate limitations. AR 438. (“... the claimant’s history 2 and evidence in the MER does not indicate the presence of functional limitations severe enough to 3 prevent work in all work environments.”) Id. Dr Voss concluded Schultz was capable of unskilled 4 work despite her non-exertional moderate limitations. Id.

5 The ALJ translated Ms. Shultz’s medical conditions, including limitations in persistence, 6 concentration and pace, and mental limitations, into a concrete and succinct RFC based on Dr.
7 Voss’ opinion as required. Stubbs-Danielson, 539 F.3d at 1174. His RFC accounted for the 8 moderate limitations Dr. Voss found because the ALJ restricted her to unskilled, simple work with 9 simple instructions. Stubbs-Danielson is controlling. The vocational expert’s opinion has no 10 evidentiary value if the assumptions in the hypothetical are not supported by the record. Stubbs- 11 Danielson, 539 F.3d at 1174; Embrey v. Bowen, 849 F.2d 418, 422 (9th Cir. 1988). The ALJ may 12 properly reject opinions that do not “include specific functional limitations.” Wilson v. Berryhill, 13 732 F. App’x 504, 506 (9th Cir. 2018) (citing Stubbs-Danielson, 539 F.3d at 1174) (unpublished).

14 If the record will support more than one rational interpretation, the court must uphold the 15 Commissioner’s interpretation. Trevizo v. Berryhill, 871 F.3d 664, 674 (9th Cir. 2017). The ALJ’s 16 findings in this case are amply supported by the record and inferences reasonably drawn from the 17 record. The ALJ did not err by finding someone with Schultz’s RFC could perform three 18 representative jobs that exist in significant numbers in the national economy. The ALJ properly 19 relied upon Medical Vocational Rule 204.00, which directed a finding that she was not disabled.

20 CONCLUSION

21 Judicial review of a decision to deny disability benefits is limited to determining whether 22 the decision is based on substantial evidence reviewing the administrative record as a whole. It is 23 the ALJ’s responsibility to make findings of fact, draw reasonable inferences from the record as a 24 whole, and resolve conflicts in the evidence and differences of opinion. The ALJ’s hypothetical to 25 the vocational expert which limited Schultz to performing simple, routine tasks with simple 26 instructions adequately captured her deficiencies in persistence, concentration and pace. Stubbs- 27 Danielson, 529 F 3d at 1174. The ALJ’s refusal to give the vocational expert’s testimony in 28 response to counsel for Schultz’s hypothetical significant weight was not error because the

1 testimony was not based on the RFC determination or the record as a whole. As such, the ALJ's 2 rejection of this testimony "represents the type of credibility determination charged to the ALJ" 3 which may not be disturbed on judicial review where, as here, the record reasonably supports the 4 ALJ's decision. Id. The ALJ's decision is supported by substantial evidence under 42 U.S.C. § 5 405(g).

6 Accordingly,

7 IT IS ORDERED:

- 8 1. The Clerk of Court shall SUBSTITUTE Nancy A. Berryhill for Carolyn W. Colvin as 9 the defendant in this suit.
- 10 2. Plaintiff Debra A. Shultz's Motion for Reversal and/or Remand (ECF No. 21) is 11 DENIED.
- 12 3. The Commissioner's Cross-Motion to Affirm (ECF No. 24) is GRANTED.
- 13 4. The Clerk of Court is instructed to enter judgment accordingly and close this case.
