5	DISTRICT OF NEVADA
6	* * *
7	ERLING OLMERO LOPEZ POLANCO,	Case No. 2:15-CV-1234 JCM (VCF)
8	Plaintiff(s),	ORDER
9	v.
10	LORETTA E. LYNCH, et al.,
11	Defendant(s).
12
13	Presently before the court is plaintiff Erling Olmero Lopez-Polanco's motion for summary
14	judgment (ECF No. 17). Defendants Loretta E. Lynch, Jeh Johnson, Leon Rodriguez, Ron
15	Rosenberg, and Laura B. Zuchowski's filed a response and cross-motion for summary judgment
16	(ECF Nos. 21, 23). Plaintiff filed a response to defendants' cross-motion (ECF No. 24), and
17	defendants filed a reply. (ECF No. 25).
18	I. Background
19	The present case arises from plaintiff's attempt to establish nonimmigrant status through
20	United States Citizenship and Immigration Services ("USCIS"). Plaintiff, a native and citizen of
21	Guatemala, entered the United States without inspection sometime between 2004 and 2006. (ECF
22	No. 14-1 at 374, 578, 000). On rebruary 22, 2012, the Department of fiomerand Security initiated
23	removal proceedings against plaintin at the Las vegas miningration Court. (Id. at 000). The
24	immigration court stayed the proceedings in order to allow plaintiff to adjudicate a Form I-918
25	petition with USCIS. (Id. at 162).
26	Plaintiff submitted a Form I-918 petition seeking "U" nonimmigrant status, commonly
27	known as a U-Visa, under 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(U). (Id. at 374). In order to meet the
28	requirements set forth by section 1101(a)(15)(U), pla	aintiff submitted a Supplement B form that

James C. Mahan U.S. District Judge Lieutenant James Weiskopf certified in support of his petition. (Id. at 403–05). The supplement indicated that on July 19, 2011, plaintiff was a victim of burglary and robbery, suffered from mental anguish and instability as a result of the crime, and is being or is likely to be helpful to officials. (Id. at 403–04). The supplement also includes a brief account of the events on July 19, 2011, which corroborate the official police narrative. (Id. at 405).

According to the police narrative, which the parties do not dispute, the events on July 19, 6 7 2011, took place at plaintiff's apartment at 7:00 in the morning. (Id. at 384). Jose Guzman came 8 in from the front door, hit plaintiff in the head and back, and knocked plaintiff to the ground. (Id.). 9 Guzman subsequently took plaintiff's wallet, stole a debit card, and threw the wallet back at 10 plaintiff. (Id.). While leaving Guzman stated, "I will be back to kill you." (Id.). The case report 11 identifies a knife as Guzman's primary means of attack and describes the suspected action against 12 plaintiff as "cut/stabbed," "forced entry," and "hit/assaulted during act." (Id. at 450, 454). The 13 report also indicated that the criminal activity included domestic violence because Guzman is a "relative by marriage." (Id. at 454). 14

The USCIS issued a notice instructing plaintiff to submit further evidence in support of his petition because the crimes indicated on the Supplement B form were not sufficient to establish nonimmigrant status. (Id. at 390–91). In response, plaintiff submitted a second Supplement B form that Lieutenant Weiskopf certified, indicating that plaintiff was also a victim of felonious assault. (Id. at 395).

On March 11, 2014, the USCIS denied plaintiff's petition on the grounds that he failed to establish that he was the victim of a qualifying criminal activity. (Id. at 371). The agency explained that the Supplement B form did not include crimes that are specifically listed in 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(U)(iii) or criminal activities that are similar to those crimes. (Id. at 370).

On November 20, 2014, plaintiff filed an appeal of USCIS's decision with USCIS's Administrative Appeals Office ("AAO"). (Id. at 152, 203). Plaintiff argued that the USCIS failed to consider whether he was a victim of felonious assault, an offense enumerate in section 1101(a)(15)(U)(iii), and that the agency had made a mistake in its domestic violence analysis. (Id. at 207–09). The AAO, in a non-precedential decision, affirmed USCIS's decision. (Id. at 144, 150). The AAO held that invasion of the home (burglary) and robbery are not similar enough to a qualified crime enumerated in 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(U)(iii), specifically felonious assault. (Id. at 149). The AAO further held that plaintiff was not a victim of domestic violence because he did not establish a familial relationship with Guzman or indicate that Guzman was a member of his household during or before the assault. (Id. at 150).

On June 30, 2015, plaintiff filed a complaint to this court challenging the AAO's denial of his Form I-918 petition. (ECF No. 1).

a. Summary Judgment

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provide for summary adjudication when the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that "there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the movant is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a). A principal purpose of summary judgment is "to isolate and dispose of factually unsupported claims." Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323–24 (1986).

In determining summary judgment, a court applies a burden-shifting analysis. "When the party moving for summary judgment would bear the burden of proof at trial, it must come forward with evidence which would entitle it to a directed verdict if the evidence went uncontroverted at trial. In such a case, the moving party has the initial burden of establishing the absence of a genuine issue of fact on each issue material to its case." C.A.R. Transp. Brokerage Co. v. Darden Rests., Inc., 213 F.3d 474, 480 (9th Cir. 2000) (citations omitted).

In contrast, when the nonmoving party bears the burden of proving the claim or defense, the moving party can meet its burden in two ways: (1) by presenting evidence to negate an essential element of the nonmoving party's case; or (2) by demonstrating that the nonmoving party failed to make a showing sufficient to establish an element essential to that party's case on which that party will bear the burden of proof at trial. See Celotex Corp., 477 U.S. at 323–24. If the moving party fails to meet its initial burden, summary judgment must be denied and the court need not consider the nonmoving party's evidence. See Adickes v. S.H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 159–60 (1970).

If the moving party satisfies its initial burden, the burden then shifts to the opposing party to establish that a genuine issue of material fact exists. See Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 586 (1986). To establish the existence of a factual dispute, the opposing party need not establish a material issue of fact conclusively in its favor. It is sufficient that "the claimed factual dispute be shown to require a jury or judge to resolve the parties' differing versions of the truth at trial." T.W. Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Pac. Elec. Co*ntractors Ass* 'n, 809 F.2d 626, 631 (9th Cir. 1987).

In other words, the nonmoving party cannot avoid summary judgment by relying solely on conclusory allegations that are unsupported by factual data. See Taylor v. List, 880 F.2d 1040, 1045 (9th Cir. 1989). Instead, the opposition must go beyond the assertions and allegations of the pleadings and set forth specific facts by producing competent evidence that shows a genuine issue for trial. See Celotex Corp., 477 U.S. at 324.

At summary judgment, a court's function is not to weight the evidence and determine the truth, but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial. See Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 249 (1986). The evidence of the nonmovant is "to be believed, and all justifiable inferences are to be drawn in his favor." Id. at 255. But if the evidence of the nonmoving party is merely colorable or is not significantly probative, summary judgment may be granted. See id. at 249–50.

b. Review of Administrative Judgment

Under 5 U.S.C. § 706 of the Administrative Procedure Act ("APA"), a court may set aside any agency action that is arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law. 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A). See Young China Daily v. Chappell, 742 F. Supp. 552, 554–55 (N.D. Cal. 1989) (finding an abuse of discretion where agency relied on irrelevant factors and failed to consider relevant factors in denying a petition). As the Ninth Circuit has explained, a district court's review of an administrative action must be made on the basis of the administrative record. Tongatapu Woodcraft Hawaii Ltd. v. Feldman, 736 F.2d 1305, 1308 (9th Cir. 1984). An

1	agency's decision is arbitrary and capricious if it "offered an explanation for its decision that ran
2	counter to the evidence before the agency." Sw. Ctr. for Biological Diversity v. U.S. Forest
3	Serv., 100 F.3d 1443, 1448 (9th Cir. 1996) (brackets omitted).
4	In Chevron the Supreme Court established a two-pronged framework for judicial review
5	of an administrative agency's interpretation of the statutes and regulations that it administers:
6	If congressional intent is clear, both the court and the agency must
7	give effect to the unambiguously expressed intent of Congress. If, however, Congress has not directly addressed the exact issue in question, a reviewing court must defer to the agency's construction
8	question, a reviewing court must defer to the agency's construction of the statute so long as it is reasonable.
9	Garcia-Quintero v. Gonzales, 455 F.3d 1006, 1011-12 (9th Cir. 2006) (citing Chevron U.S.A.,
10	Inc. v. Natural Res. Def. Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 842-43 (1984) (internal quotation marks and
11	citations omitted).
12	However, in United States v. Mead Corp., 533 U.S. 218, 226-27 (2001), the Supreme
13	Court held that Chevron deference applies only "when it appears that Congress delegated authority
14	to the agency generally to make rules carrying the force of law, and that the agency interpretation
15	claiming deference was promulgated in the exercise of that authority." The Ninth Circuit has
16	interpreted Mead as placing "crucial limits on Chevron-deference owed to administrative practice
17	in applying a statute, clarifying that agency interpretations promulgated in a non-precedential
18	manner are beyond the Chevron pale." Garcia-Quintero, 455 F.3d at 1012 (internal quotation
19	marks omitted); see also Hall v. EPA, 273 F.3d 1146, 1156 (9th Cir. 2001) ("Interpretations of the
20	Act set forth in non-precedential documents are not entitled to Chevron deference."). "In light
21	of Mead, the essential factor in determining whether an agency action warrants Chevron deference
22	is its precedential value." Garcia-Quintero, 455 F.3d at 1012 (internal quotation marks omitted).
23	Here, the AAO states that it has delivered a "non-precedent decision." (ECF No. 14-1 at
24	144). Accordingly, the court will not apply Chevron deference. Nevertheless, under the section
25	706(2)(A) standard, a court may not "substitute its judgment for that of the agency." Northwest
26	Motorcycle Assoc. v. U.S. Dept. Agriculture, 18 F.3d 1468, 1471 (9th Cir. 1994). Instead, a court
27	'must consider whether the decision was based on a consideration of the relevant factors and whether there has been a clear error of judgment.' "Id. (citing Citizens to Preserve Overton Park v. Volpe, 401 U.S. 402, 416 (1971)).
28

III. Discussion

Plaintiff argues that the AAO erred in affirming the USCIS's denial of the Form I-918 petition because the AAO failed to consider whether plaintiff was the victim of felonious assault. (ECF No. 17 at 18). Defendants argue that the AAO's affirmation of the USCIS decision was appropriate because the agency's decision included a de novo review of all the materials in the petition, including any records that might indicate that plaintiff is a victim of felonious assault. (ECF No. 23 at 14).

"U" nonimmigrant status pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(U) is an immigration benefit for victims of crimes who have, are, or are likely to assist law enforcement in the investigation or prosecution of a crime. The USCIS, before deciding whether a party qualifies for a U-Visa, has an obligation to conduct a de novo review of all the evidence that the parties submit in connection with the Form I-918 petition. 8 C.F.R. 214.14(c)(4).

15 In determining whether a party qualifies for this U-Visa, agencies or courts must conduct 16 a two-part test. First, agencies or courts must either find that the party is admissible to the United States or waive grounds for inadmissibility. 8 C.F.R. § 214,1(a)(3)(i). Second, agencies and courts 17 18 must find that the party meets the following requirements: (1) the alien has suffered substantial 19 physical or mental abuse as a result of having been a victim of qualified criminal activity, (2) the 20 alien possesses information concerning the criminal activity, (3) the alien has been helpful, is 21 helpful, or is likely to be helpful to officials investigating or prosecuting the criminal activity, and 22 (4) the criminal activity violated the law of the United States or occurred in the United States. 8 23 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(U)(i)(I)-(IV).

A party can be a victim of a qualified criminal activity by being a victim of a crime enumerated in 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(U)(iii) or by being a victim of any "similar activity." 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(U)(iii). Section 1101(a)(15)(U)(iii) lists felonious assault and domestic violence as qualifying crimes, but does not list burglary or robbery. See id. Alternatively, criminal activity qualifies as "similar activity" when "the nature and elements of the offenses are substantially similar to the statutorily enumerated list of criminal activities" rather than the facts of the crime. 8 C.F.R. § 214.14(a)(9).

The AAO held that the elements of burglary and robbery are not substantially similar to 3 4 felonious assault and, therefore, are not qualifying crimes. (ECF No. 14-1 at 148–49). The AAO 5 also held that plaintiff was not a victim of domestic violence. (Id. at 150). However, the AAO's 6 decision and the administrative record do not indicate that the AAO considered whether plaintiff 7 was a victim of felonious assault, which is a qualifying crime. Furthermore, the defendants do not 8 bring forth any facts or arguments explaining why the AAO did not specifically address plaintiff's 9 felonious assault argument. Instead, defendants make a conclusory claim that the AAO conducted 10 a de novo review, which prevents the decision from being "arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of 11 discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law." See 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A).

The record does not clearly indicate why the AAO did not address whether plaintiff was a victim of felonious assault. The court sees two possible explanations. First, the AAO may have conducted a review of plaintiff's felonious assault argument, found that the plaintiff was not a victim, and failed to create a record of the analysis in its decision. Second, the AAO may have excluded felonious assault from their analysis because it was not an investigated crime. See (ECF No. 14-1 at 149).

The USCIS's failure to address the felonious assault argument was one of the central reasons for plaintiff's appeal. See (ECF No. 14-1 at 207–08). The AAO should have addressed or at least acknowledged plaintiff's argument. Instead, the record before the court contains no indication that the AAO, in its supposedly de novo review, considered whether plaintiff was a victim of felonious assault.

The AAO's failure to address one of plaintiff's central arguments in its decision or, alternatively, failure to assess the felonious assault argument at all constitutes a clear error of judgment because by doing so the AAO left out relevant factors in its analysis. Cf. Young China Daily, 742 F. Supp. at 554–55 (finding an abuse of discretion where agency relied on irrelevant factors and failed to consider relevant factors in denying a petition); see Northwest, 18 F.3d at 1471. Furthermore, the AAO's decision offers an explanation that runs counter to the evidence, specifically the felonious assault content in the second Supplement B and case report. See generally Sw. Ctr. for Biological Diversity, 100 F.3d at 1448. Because the USCIS did not strike these documents, the AAO cannot ignore them. To do so would be a failure to consider evidence before the agency and would constitute a clear error of judgment. See id.; see also Northwest Motorcycle, 18 F.3d at 1471.

Conclusion

7 The court finds that the AAO committed a clear error of judgment when it did not address, 8 consider, or give sufficient reason to not consider whether plaintiff was a victim of felonious 9 assault. In fact, the decision never even mentions plaintiff's argument. The AAO's decision is non-10 precedential and, therefore, the court can set aside the decision upon finding a clear error of 11 judgement. See Garcia-Quintero, 455 F.3d at 1012; see also Hall, 273 F.3d at 1156; see also 12 Northwest Motorcycle, 18 F.3d at 1471.

13 The AAO is more acquainted with the record and relevant laws than this court, making it 14 the appropriate venue for resolving plaintiff's dispute. Therefore, the court vacates the AAO's 15 decision and remands this case back to the AAO for an appropriate consideration of plaintiff's 16 felonious assault argument.

17 IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, ADJUDGED, AND DECREED that plaintiff Erling Olmero 18 Lopez-Polanco's motion for summary judgment (ECF No. 17), be, and the same hereby is, 19 GRANTED in part and DENIED in part, consistent with the foregoing.

20 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that defendants Loretta E. Lynch, et.al., cross-motion for 21 summary judgment (ECF No. 21), be, and the same hereby is, DENIED.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the AAO's judgment be, and the same hereby is, 22 23 VACATED, and the appeal of plaintiff's petition is REMANDED for reconsideration, consistent 24 with the foregoing.
