Petitioner Mohammad Al Falahi is a Lawful Permanent Resident who originally came to the United States as a refugee from Iraq and applied to the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) in 2014 to naturalize as a U.S. citizen. USCIS denied Al Falahi's application, finding that he failed to demonstrate that he was "a person of good moral character"¹ because he had "given false testimony" during the application process "for the purpose of" gaining citizenship.² Al Falahi petitions for review of his naturalization application under 8 U.S.C. § 1421(c), which allows a district court to "conduct a hearing de novo on [an] application." Both parties have moved for summary judgment, asking me to determine whether Al Falahi gave false testimony—a question that hinges on whether Al Falahi, in giving the answers he did, "had a subjective intent to deceive [immigration officials] for the purpose of obtaining" citizenship.³

4 Legal standard

5 Summary judgment is appropriate when the pleadings and admissible evidence "show 6 there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the movant is entitled to judgment as a 7 matter of law."⁵ When considering summary judgment, the court views all facts and draws all
8 inferences in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party.⁶ If reasonable minds could differ
9 on material facts, summary judgment is inappropriate because its purpose is to avoid unnecessary
10 trials when the facts are undisputed, and the case must then proceed to the trier of fact.⁷

11 If the moving party satisfies Rule 56⁸ by demonstrating the absence of any genuine issue 12 of material fact, the burden shifts to the party resisting summary judgment to "set forth specific 13 facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial."⁹ "To defeat summary judgment, the 14 nonmoving party must produce evidence of a genuine dispute of material fact that could satisfy 15 its burden at trial."¹⁰

1 Discussion¹¹

2 In denying Al Falahi’s application, USCIS determined that he falsely testified under oath
3 during his naturalization interviews that he has never “been associated with, or a been a member 4 of, any organization, association, . . . party, [etc.] outside of the United States” because he 5 revealed in his refugee application years earlier that he was required during high school in Iraq to 6 sign a loyalty pledge to the Ba’ath party.¹² USCIS also determined that Al Falahi testified 7 inconsistently about the events leading up to him fleeing Iraq, including whether he was 8 personally threatened.¹³ In moving for summary judgment on Al Falahi’s pending petition, 9 USCIS advances these same conclusions and also argues that Al Falahi falsely testified during 10 his application process about whether he ever lived in Syria.¹⁴

11 Al Falahi argues that he had no intention of lying during his naturalization interviews and 12 that any inaccuracies in his responses were the result of “unartful and confusing questions” asked 13 by USCIS officers.¹⁵ For instance, he contends that he stated that he was never a member of an 14 organization because he never considered himself a Ba’ath party member.¹⁶ He explains, as he 15 did throughout the application process, that he was forced to sign a loyalty pledge to obtain his 16 high school degree and that failing to sign would have placed him and his family in danger.¹⁷ Al

19 ¹¹ The parties are familiar with the facts of this case, so I recount them only as necessary.

(administrative appeal affirming denial).

1 Falahi attests that he “never attended any Ba’ath Party Meetings, never made any payments to 2 the Ba’ath party, and never engaged in any activities relating to the Ba’ath party.”¹⁸

3 Both parties parse the administrative record and highlight portions of the discovery in this 4 case to “prove” whether Al Falahi intended to lie. For example, USCIS points to the fact that he 5 disclosed the Ba’ath party issue years earlier during his refugee application when asked on a 6 form to list any “[p]olitical, professional[,] or social organizations” he had been a member of 7 since turning 16.¹⁹ Al Falahi counters that he provided that response because he was orally
8 asked during his refugee interview about his involvement specifically with the Ba’ath party.²⁰
9 He similarly points to his second naturalization interview, where the USCIS officer first asked 10 the generic membership question—to which Al Falahi answered no—and then followed up by 11 asking specifically whether he was Ba’ath party member— to which Al Falahi again answered 12 no but explained the mandatory pledge.²¹ He argues that the fact that he volunteered additional 13 information demonstrates that he had no intention of lying and that he subjectively believed he 14 was not a “member” of the party.²² But USCIS points to this same response and portrays it as Al
15 Falahi attempting to cover once he was caught in a lie.²³

16 The parties’ arguments are effectively a battle of inferences. Because Al Falahi’s intent 17 is a question of fact and the evidence does not foreclose the possibility of either a truthful or 18 deceitful intent—as to the membership question and the other responses flagged by USCIS—I

1 find that summary judgment is improper. Only after assessing Al Falahi’s credibility will I be 2 able to determine whether he gave inaccurate answers with “a subjective intent to deceive 3 [immigration officials] for the purpose of obtaining” citizenship.²⁴ Indeed, in the decisions that 4 Al Falahi primarily cites to, the district court ruled only after holding, at the minimum, an 5 evidentiary hearing.²⁵ I therefore deny both summary-judgment motions. This case will proceed
6 to a bench trial, so I direct the parties to submit a joint pretrial order.

7 Conclusion

8 Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the parties’ motions for summary
9 judgment [ECF Nos. 25–26] are DENIED. The parties must file a joint pretrial order by May 10 1, 2019, that complies with Local Rule of Practice 16-4. When offering potential trial dates in 11 the joint order, the parties should identify dates in late spring or early summer.
