Jacques Barzun	Born in 1907, Jacques Barzun grew up in Paris, where his parents' house was a center of the new movements in the arts, and Grenoble. His earliest friends included the poet Apollinaire, who taught him how to read time on his watch, and Marie Laurencein, who made his portrait, among visitors such as the Cubist painters Gleizes and Duchamp, the musician Varése, and foreigners like Richard Aldington and Stefan Zweig. His early education was taken at the Lycée Janson de Sailly, after which he experienced life behind the lines in the First World War. After visiting the United States on a diplomatic mission, in 1920 his father enrolled him at Columbia University, where Jacques's upbringing in the arts led him to the study of cultural history, a new field at the time. After graduation he became lecturer and, in 1937, professor. In 1955 he was named Dean of the Graduate Faculties and in 1958 Dean of Faculties, Provost, and Seth Low Professor of History, with a concurrent appointment as Extraordinary Fellow of Churchill College at the University of Cambridge. He resigned from administrative work in 1967 to teach, then, in 1975, retired early to turn to writing and lecturing exclusively, but soon accepted a consulting editorship at Scribner's and membership on the editorial board for Encyclopaedia Britannica, at both of which he served for the next 18 years. From Dawn To Decadence: 500 Years of Western Cultural Life was published by HarperCollins in 2000 and HarperPerennial in 2001 and is the summa of his study and reflection in cultural history. About half of his forty-two books, authored, edited, or translated, are still in print, including: A Stroll With William James (1983); Classic, Romantic, And Modern (1961); The Modern Researcher (with Henry F. Graff; 1957; 1962; 2nd ed. 1970; 3rd ed. 1977; 4th ed. 1985; it has sold more than one million copies); Berlioz And The Romantic Century (1950; 3rd ed. 1969); Darwin, Marx, Wagner (1941; 1958); Simple

	And Direct: A Rhetoric For Writers (1975; 1984; 1994); Teacher In America (1945; 1954; 1971); and A Catalog Of Crime (with Wendell H. Taylor; 1971). Mr Barzun was awarded the Gold Medal for belles lettres and criticism by the American Academy of Arts and Letters as well as a "lifetime service to the crime fiction genre" award from the Mystery Writers of America. He is a member of the Académie Delphinale in Grenoble and a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts and of the Royal Society of Literature. He belongs to the Society of American Historians, the American Philosophical Society, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and the American Academy of Arts and Letters, of which he was twice president.
