1 Hauenstein.

2 THE COURT: Okay. This is a motion for preliminary 3 approval of a settlement and for certification of the class.
4 I've read the papers.

5 There are some issues in dispute which I'm prepared to 6 hear from counsel on briefly. Perhaps one of the three 7 proponents for the motion might briefly address it.

8 MR. DRURY: May I use the podium, your Honor?

9 THE COURT: Yes, feel free.

10 MR. DRURY: Thank you.

11 Please the Court, counsel, as I said, my name is Larry 12 Drury. I'm here on behalf of plaintiff Vedral and the putative 13 class.

14 Your Honor, having stated that you've read all of the 15 materials, I'd just like to briefly highlight a few points if I 16 may.

17 THE COURT: Yes.

18 MR. DRURY: As the Court is aware, this case has to do 19 with the book known as A Million Little Pieces, which was 20 written by one James Frey. It was published in hard cover form 21 in 2003, and in 2004 and five came out in paperback form.

22 One of the questions that arose as a result of this 23 book was the misrepresentations or embellishments or however 24 the Court deems appropriate as to what was said. For example, 25 there were statements in the book as to Mr. Frey having been in

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 jail for three months, when it was three days; his girlfriend 2 having died, when she didn't; having a tooth removed without 3 any anesthetic.

4 As time went on, it became clear that, indeed, that 5 was not the fact, and as disclosed in the smoking gun in 2006
6 in the Larry King show, and in January 26 of '06 on the Oprah 7 Winfrey show, with tears in her eye, James Frey came forth and 8 said that it wasn't exactly accurate.

9 Now, that's a very brief background what gets us here
10 today. As a result of that, there were lawsuits filed all over 11 the country. They were eventually gone to the MDL and they 12 were consolidated and transferred to your Honor.

13 The matter's now before you for preliminary approval
14 of the settlement, approval of notice, approval of class 15 counsel and class representatives.

16 Interestingly, your Honor, that since all of this took 17 place, the book itself still remained on the best seller list 18 for some 26 weeks subsequent to January of '06. There was also 19 sales that exceeded some 93,000 books. And the comments that 20 came in, as we've seen with respect to the books, were more on 21 the favorable side than critical. And I think it's important 22 to note that, indeed, it remained on the best seller list. And 23 why I mention that and these 93,000 in sales and less than 250 24 returns of the book is one of the reasons that we're here for 25 settlement, because there is a lot of questions as to how the

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

1 public and the class, which we seek to represent, has reacted
2 to all of this. And the reaction seems to be, in some part,
3 that they weren't substantially concerned. There was only 250
4 returns of the book.

5 Now, a little additional background, your Honor. We 6 formed the plaintiffs' group early on, and it consisted of some 7 12 firms. Now there's two that are no longer with. One is on 8 the phone, Mr. Taylor, and Mr. Bonnor is here also. And we had 9 meetings with the defendants. I attended them personally. Mr.
10 Smith was there on one occasion; he was there telephonically.
11 We negotiated at arm's length what we considered a fair, 12 reasonable and adequate settlement.

13 We met in Chicago many many times. We went back and 14 forth. We had numerous disputes as to where we stand and where 15 we stood with the position. We insisted on confirmatory
16 discovery. And the confirmatory discovery consisted of sales 17 returns, pricing, royalties, review of some 2,000 documents and 18 declarations from three or four sources as to the sales of the 19 books, the returns of the book and the royalties which Mr. Frey
20 took into place. These negotiations began in around April 21 or -- March or April or so, and we entered into an MOU, a 22 memorandum of understanding July 26, '06.

23 In between, we've done substantial work in drafting 24 the pleadings, responding to would-be objectors, going over the 25 notice, continual discussion with the defendants in attempt to

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

1 resolve the case.

2 We believe we have put before your Honor what we 3 consider to be a fair, adequate and reasonable settlement well
4 within the range of reasonableness which would allow the Court
5 to grant the preliminary approval so that notice could go out 6 to the class and the class could be made aware of what the 7 settlement is, have an opportunity to respond, to exclude 8 themselves, to object, to make a claim, and/or attend the final 9 fairness hearing if your Honor decides to preliminarily 10 approval the settlement today.

11 What does this settlement consist of? I'm going to 12 just highlight a few matters. One, there's a total fund of 13 $2,350,000 that is the settlement fund. That fund is available
14 for all class members to make their claim. And their claim 15 consists of a claim for the refund of the price of the book 16 regardless of what format it's in, hard cover, CD, paper back, 17 they will get a full refund, including taxes and if it was by 18 internet, shipping charges I believe are also included in that.
19 The maximum amount --

20 THE COURT: They'll get a full refund if there are 21 only a limited number of claimants, right? If all purchasers 22 were to file claims, their recovery would be something in the 23 range of 75 cents.

24 MR. DRURY: Well, if there -- if the claims exceed the 25 total value of the fund, yes, there would be a pro rata

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 reduction in the value of the claims that each class member 2 would get, that's correct.

3 And the $2,350,000 doesn't only include the refund
4 possibilities for the class, but also includes any attorneys 5 fees, costs, administrative costs and any other items such as 6 that, which is set forth in our moving papers which would be 7 deducted off the top of that $2,350,000. So we don't know, and 8 I don't know as I stand here, what the take rate is going to 9 be; in other words, how many claims are going to be for class 10 members, but the way it's structured that is the full fund that 11 is available to the class. As part --

12 THE COURT: Tell me, then, why the Court should 13 consider this amount to be within a range, a reasonable range 14 for settlement.

15 MR. DRURY: Our review of the financial records and 16 sales and returns and items such as that, your Honor, reveals 17 that the gross sales for these books would be around $55 18 million; generally discounted at 20 percent would be about $44 19 million. It's our understanding from our discovery with the 20 defendants that that gross price is the price that's being sold 21 to the consuming public, but the price that the defendant, 22 Random House, for example, would have received would be 23 one-half of that. So when they saw it on the market it's 24 double. So that would take the 55 down to 22, or on the 25 discounted side if it was 44, it would take it down to --

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

1 excuse me -- 27 would be 22 on the 44, 27 on the 55. Then 2 there would be the royalties that are involved, which were some 3 $4 million, which take it down to about 23, five on the gross 4 sides and about 18 on the discount side.

5 Then we'd have to calculate -- and we did as best we 6 could -- what the profit would have been for the defendant 7 based on those numbers, and we were looking at a profit of 8 around 25 or 30 percent. So that drops the number on the gross 9 side from 55 million to $5,825,000. On the discount side on 10 the 44 million, it would take it down to about 4,500,000.

11 Now to that equation, in looking to the risk involved 12 in litigation as opposed to resolution by settlement, balancing 13 those risks, weighing them, the possibilities of appeals, 14 possibility of a prolonged trial and lengthily discovery, we 15 had to put that into the equation the possibility of winning 16 and the possibility of losing. I believe that 50-50 down the 17 middle is where we would be. And if you apply that 50 percent 18 to these net numbers, that takes us down to the two million 19 seven, two million nine, two million four range. That's how we 20 got to the $2,350,000 your Honor.

21 There's also another factor which I didn't include 22 into that calculation, but the defendants contend that we 23 should really take off maybe 10 percent from these numbers 24 because only 10 percent of the book was embellished by 25 falsities and misrepresentations -- of course those aren't

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

1 their words, their words are embellishment, my words are 2 misrepresentation -- as made in the book by Mr. Frey, and that 3 would reduce it further.

4 So, considering all of those criteria, at this 5 juncture of the proceeding we feel as advocates for this 6 settlement that it would be in the best interests of the class
7 to settle it at this time for this amount of money.

8 Now, included in the settlement -- your Honor I'm sure 9 saw that there's a cy-pres provision, I'm not going to go 10 through all the details, and of course that will be up to your 11 Honor to finally approve, should you approve this settlement, 12 where the cy-pres distribution should go.

13 We've provided for notice. The notice to the class is 14 by way of direct mail for those persons that Random House has 15 the addresses for. We've also provided for publication notice 16 in Parade and U.S.A. Weekend. There will be two publications 17 which will reach 50 states, 962 papers, and about 55,400,000 in 18 circulation.

19 We also looked at the fact that there's been a lot of 20 publicity and public attention to this. And as we noted in our 21 moving papers there were comments on CNN, the Wall Street 22 Journal, the New York Times and the web sites that are 23 currently in place have for the settlement alone, over a 24 1,090,000 hits already of people showing interest in what's 25 going on here. So we have mail, we have publication, we have

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

1 the internet site.

2 THE COURT: How many purchasers would --

3 MR. DRURY: Excuse me?

4 THE COURT: -- receive direct notice?

5 MR. DRURY: I don't have an exact number. I believe 6 the defendant is going to address the total amount in there. I
7 don't know whether it was a thousand -- I really don't recall.
8 It's not that I don't know whether it was a thousand or under a 9 thousand that will receive the direct mail notice from Random 10 House.

11 THE COURT: Did the plaintiffs consider a more 12 expansive direct notice?

13 MR. DRURY: Of course, your Honor. We considered all 14 aspects of what would be the best notice practicable under the 15 circumstances.

16 And while we're on the subject, I know that one of the 17 concerns expressed by the objector was, well, maybe we should 18 have sent subpoenas out to third parties to get their customer 19 list. And I know of no cases or any law that would insist or 20 that would require any of the parties, plaintiffs or 21 defendants, to impose upon third parties by way of subpoena to 22 disclose their customer list, which they probably watch over 23 very closely and are protective of, it's business, it's their 24 customer lists or, alternatively, to require them to have to go 25 and make those lists and then first send them out. This is not

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

1 like a securities case, which was referred to by the objectors.
2 In the securities case we're dealing with brokerage houses and 3 records and nominees, and fiduciary relationships and 4 regulations where there's a requirement to keep such records.
5 In this instance with retailers, for example, there is no 6 requirement that they must maintain lists and --

7 THE COURT: There are some non parties -- there are 8 some parties, rather, defendant parties who are retailers.
9 They're not parties to the settlement agreement, but --

10 MR. DRURY: Yes.

11 THE COURT: -- are they still parties to the 12 litigation?

13 MR. DRURY: Yes. There's a -- some of the numerous 14 complaints joined retailers as parties, and the release in this 15 case would absolve them. They would be considered released 16 parties. But that's one of the prices that when you're 17 negotiating a settlement that you literally must consider to 18 purchase peace. And in order to bring closure to this case in 19 a res judicata effect when the notice goes out and the class 20 responds, and to bring this matter to a conclusion, that was 21 one of the issues that we negotiated. It's not as if, your 22 Honor, that if the defendants said we're not going to do it, 23 plaintiffs' counsel said okay. Far from it. We fought long 24 and hard with these defendants and their counsel to get where 25 we were at today.

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.
(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 But in the end, sending out subpoenas to third parties 2 was just something that we feel is unreasonable, it would be 3 overly burdensome, and it would create probably chaos in the 4 courtroom considering that maybe all of these retailers will 5 then have counsel coming in here and objecting, probably for 6 some of the very same reasons that I'm now advocating to the 7 Court.

8 So, publication, as in the cases Agent Orange that we 9 cited and Compact Disk in our reply brief, and that type of 10 notice and the Malane, that even though it may be possible that 11 you could have some type of a direct notice, in the whole 12 sphere of things, publication, as those cases indicated, was 13 the way to go, and they did not require notice. And I suspect 14 that the number of people with agent orange, for example, were 15 more than the number of potential class members in this case.

16 Additionally, your Honor, I would like to note that 17 with respect to the settlement, I want to go back, that there's 18 a disclaimer that will be in the books that states, not all 19 portions of the book are factually accurate, which will now be 20 in the Random House books, as well as a publisher and author's 21 note which is already in there in the books.

22 We've provided for claim forms. They can download it, 23 they can call into an 800 number.

24 I've discussed the bases why the Court, we believe, 25 should approve it. And really the criteria at this stage is,

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 of the proceeding is is it within the range of fairness and 2 reasonableness. We believe that it is. And, again, we weighed 3 the factors, we weighed the risk, appeals, litigation, et 4 cetera, and this is what we're advocating.

5 Lastly, your Honor, class certification. Why should 6 this class be certified. The elements of numerosity 7 commonality, typicality, adequacy of representation, 8 superiority, manageability, and that this is the best vehicle
9 with which to proceed with this case I believe are all here. I 10 don't think numerosity is a dispute.

11 THE COURT: I don't think anyone, at least for 12 settlement purposes, contests the fact that this should be a 13 class action.

14 MR. DRURY: All right. Then the only other matter 15 that I have, Judge, is this, and your preference of course will 16 prevail. I can respond, and I have, in part, to the comments 17 and objections, if you will, by Mr. Bonnor and his client, or 18 preferably I could wait to hear what he has to say and then I 19 would like the opportunity to reply, if that suits the Court.

20 THE COURT: All right. Thank you, Mr. Drury. I think 21 I'll first hear from the other supporters of the settlement, 22 the defendants to see if there's anything they wish to air now.

23 MR. DRURY: Excuse me, your Honor. I'm sorry. I 24 would like to present --

25 THE COURT: Yes.

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.
(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 MR. DRURY: -- to the court, if you approve the -- 2 preliminarily approve the settlement, suggested dates for 3 claims, exclusions, opt outs. There's the notices are also 4 attached, as well as an order of preliminary approval.

5 THE COURT: Thank you.

6 MR. DRURY: Thank you. Amended notice. I'm sorry.

7 THE COURT: Thank you.

8 Do defendants wish to add anything to the comments of 9 Mr. Drury?

10 MR. BLOCKER: Judge, we don't wish to add anything. I 11 would just point out one thing. The motion for preliminary 12 approval is actually brought by the plaintiffs. We have 13 actually taken no position with respect to preliminary 14 approval. We're leaving that totally up to your Honor.

15 With respect to your question about how many 16 purchasers would get direct mail notice, it would be a small 17 fraction of the class, but that's because those are all the 18 addresses that we really have.

19 THE COURT: Yes, I understand.

20 All right, Mr. Bonnor, would you like to address the 21 motion?

22 MR. BONNOR: I would, your Honor. Thank you very 23 much. As I said, my name is Jim Bonnor. I'm with Shalov Stone 24 Bonnor & Rocco. We represent plaintiff Sarah Rubenstein. With 25 my co-counsel Kalcheim firm.

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.
(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 My firm's here today and our client in order to 2 protect the interests of the millions of class members that Mr.
3 Drury has described, who will not receive any practical notice
4 at all of the settlement.

5 THE COURT: Let me ask you whether you're objecting or 6 your client's objecting to the amount of the settlement. I 7 didn't really see that in the papers, but I wanted to confirm 8 or to make explicit your client's views on the adequacy of the 9 settlement, leaving aside notice issues.

10 MR. BONNOR: I think, your Honor, if you were to 11 approve the notice campaign in the shape that it's currently 12 in, settlement would be an adequate settlement because no one 13 is going to respond to the notice.

14 However, if we undertake an adequate notice campaign, 15 we're going to get many many class members to respond to that 16 notice and there are going to be a large number of claims.
17 They're providing for a hundred percent recovery, as Mr. Drury 18 said, on behalf of the class members, and in that circumstance
19 if you were to adopt the notice campaign, which I'll advocate 20 here today, your Honor, I think that the settlement would be 21 inadequate under those circumstances.

22 THE COURT: All right. Proceed.

23 MR. BONNOR: There are two guiding principles of 24 course as to what constitutes adequate notice in class action.
25 There's Rule 23(c)(2), which says that you're supposed to give

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 adequate notice what's reasonable under the circumstances. And 2 what's reasonable under the circumstances means personal notice 3 to everybody who can be identified with reasonable efforts, 4 your Honor. That's the exact words of the rule.

5 And in addition to that, the Supreme Court has told us
6 over and over again in Eisen and Schuts and other cases that it 7 is a constitutional right of the class members to be informed 8 personally of the terms of a settlement and their right to make 9 a claim in a settlement in the event that they can be 10 identified.

11 And the MLP group would have you think, your Honor, 12 that there was no way for them to identify who the members of 13 the class are, other than the 1,000 or less class members who 14 purchased their book directly from Random House. But that's 15 obviously incorrect, your Honor. That is absolutely untrue.
16 You've already pointed out today that there are parties in this 17 litigation, parties in this litigation who undoubtedly maintain 18 lists of their customers.

19 THE COURT: They're not parties to the settlement
20 agreement.

21 MR. BONNOR: I'm not sure why they're not parties to 22 the settlement agreement, your Honor, but --

23 THE COURT: Well, they're not parties to the 24 settlement agreement, I think it's fair to conclude, because 25 they don't believe they have even sufficient exposure to

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 plaintiffs' claims to warrant their signing a settlement
2 agreement.

3 MR. BONNOR: But that's all well and good, your Honor.
4 They don't to have contribute to the settlement. The issue is 5 whether it is easily available to the parties in the litigation 6 so the plaintiffs in this litigation, and for your Honor to 7 order the parties in this litigation to provide the notice that 8 is mandatory, mandatory under Rule 23 and a constitutional 9 right under the Supreme Court.

10 THE COURT: Well it begs the question. What's 11 mandatory is what's reasonable.

12 MR. BONNOR: What's reasonable, your Honor. It's -- 13 the rule says what's reasonable, but the rule also, your Honor, 14 explicitly says that what's reasonable is personal notice, not 15 publication notice, personal notice to every class member who 16 can be identified with reasonable efforts.

17 Now what reasonable effort would be required to turn 18 to Barnes & Noble or to Anchor Books, who are defendants in 19 this litigation, and to say here, you're going to do the same 20 thing that the people at Random House are going to do, you're 21 going to provide notice to those people who bought directly 22 from you.

23 THE COURT: And who is going to pay Random House to do 24 this -- I mean, Barnes & Noble, rather?

25 MR. BONNOR: Well, your Honor, my guess is that it

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 would cost very little money to -- as a starting point. But 2 we're stuck with the terms of their settlement. Under my 3 world, the way things are usually done in consumer class 4 actions is the defendants pay for this notice. That's 5 typically what happens. In fact, I can't remember any 6 settlement -- and I've been doing this for 15 years now, in a 7 consumer case where the defendants didn't pay for notice, and 8 where the costs of that notice --

9 THE COURT: Let's assume that the Court concludes that 10 the settlement amount of 2.35 million is very beneficial to the 11 class members, given the risks that the claims might be 12 dismissed on a motion to dismiss or the class might not be 13 certified due to individual issues of reliance. Assume I reach 14 that conclusion, then the question becomes if there's $2.35 15 million in a pot, how much money do you believe should be spent 16 on notice in this case?

17 MR. BONNOR: First of all, your Honor, I don't know 18 exactly how much would be required to provide notice. My guess 19 is it would be very little. Because most of these people have 20 e-mail addresses for their customers, and so we could do 21 something that's a little bit innovative in this case where the 22 settlement amount that you're talking about is relatively 23 small, and we could provide people with personal notice by 24 e-mail. It's a perfectly legitimate form of providing people 25 with notice. You could direct them to the website that Mr.

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 Drury has spoken about today, and for a very minimal amount of 2 money, we could identify hundreds of thousands, if not millions 3 of class members who purchased this book and have a right to 4 make a claim in this settlement. So that's a very small amount 5 of money, your Honor. In addition to that --

6 THE COURT: Now, are you talking about a campaign that 7 would require retailers who are not even parties to this 8 litigation to join this program?

9 MR. BONNOR: Yes, your Honor. And --

10 THE COURT: And how would you do that?

11 MR. BONNOR: Well, there are two ways. We could do it 12 voluntarily, which often happens in class actions -- and I'll 13 go through some cases that talk about that if you like, your 14 Honor. In addition, we could easily subpoena these customer 15 lists. We could simply get, for example, from Amazon.com, it's 16 one of the most sophisticated retailers in the universe, they 17 have all of these people's e-mails.

18 THE COURT: So you don't think there are any First 19 Amendment concerns in subpoenaing Amazon.com's customer lists 20 for a particular publication?

21 MR. BONNOR: No, I don't, your Honor. I don't think 22 that there is a legitimate First Amendment concern. In fact,
23 if you were to read the Tattered Cover case, which is the case 24 that the defendants relied upon most heavily in advancing this 25 argument -- which I would note was not mentioned at all in the

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 papers that were supplied in support of the settlement, didn't 2 come up until after we had raised this issue -- but in any 3 event, in the Tattered Cover case the Court explicitly decided 4 that it had to turn to Colorado law in order to find that there 5 was some protection for the list of purchasers or the 6 individual who purchased the book that was at issue in Tattered 7 Cover, because the Tattered Cover case points us to a number of 8 Supreme Court cases which have said, essentially, that First 9 Amendment rights of the various individuals have to give way in 10 appropriate circumstances to other legitimate interest that 11 litigants may have. And I would point out, your Honor, that 12 there are --

13 THE COURT: And so here you're weighing the rights to 14 privacy, if you will, and the rights to, I suppose, to read 15 what you like without advertising it, against the adequacy of 16 notice. Those are the two considerations you're weighing here, 17 right?

18 MR. BONNOR: That's exactly right, your Honor. Those 19 are the two considerations.

20 And what the Tattered Cover case told us is Supreme 21 Court precedent dictates that in these circumstances -- in the 22 circumstances at issue in that case where they were looking to 23 find out why a certain person read the content of that book, 24 that even in those circumstances where the issue was the 25 content of the readers, the book that they read, the Court said

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 that the First Amendment would not, in all likelihood, provide 2 any protections in those circumstances. The Court had to turn 3 to Colorado law. And interestingly again, your Honor, in the 4 Tattered Cover case, what the Court said, again applying
5 Colorado law, was that in circumstances where we were searching 6 for a book purchaser, in circumstances where we're not really 7 interested in what the subject matter of the book is, we're 8 just interested in the identity of the person who purchased 9 that book, that in those circumstances, even under Colorado law 10 there would be very very low interest in protecting the 11 identity of that individual; that the First Amendment or the 12 privacy issues that were raised in those circumstances where 13 we're searching for the identity of a person, not the contents 14 of the book that they read, it would not be a protected 15 interest.

16 And what has the Supreme Court said about this issue?
17 There have been many cases in the Supreme Court balancing First 18 Amendment rights against the rights of litigants.
19 Interestingly, your Honor, there's certainly no case in which a 20 constitutional right, a constitutional right to due process by 21 class members, and when Congress and the Supreme Court have 22 dictated people are entitled to individual notice, no case
23 decided that in those circumstances that a First Amendment 24 right to remain private --

25 THE COURT: You seem to be premising your argument on
SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.
(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 the assumption that individual notice is the only way, only 2 constitutional way to provide notice of a class action. That's 3 just not the case.

4 MR. BONNOR: But it is the case, your Honor. In 5 circumstances where, with reasonable effort you can identify 6 the class members, Rule 23(c)(2) says absolutely, positively, 7 unequivocally that if you can identify those class members you 8 are mandatory, you have to provide them with personal notice.
9 And the Supreme Court has told us in Eisen, they've told us in 10 Schuts, that that is a due process right, it is a 11 constitutional right of the class members. If they can be 12 identified through reasonable efforts, they are entitled to 13 personal notice in those circumstances.

14 THE COURT: All right.

15 MR. BONNOR: Now, the Supreme Court -- getting back to 16 the First Amendment issue -- there's a Zercher versus Stanford 17 Daily News I believe is the case. That's a case that's 18 mentioned in the Tattered Cover case. There the Supreme Court 19 said that when you have a search warrant, we can force a 20 journalist to provide photographic evidence that was not 21 published publicly. That's a very important First Amendment
22 right, the right of freedom of the press. And the Court said
23 in those circumstances, the right of the government to find out 24 the individuals who perpetrated certain violence at a 25 demonstration, outweighs the First Amendment right. There is

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 another case called Branzburg versus Hayes, it's a venerable
2 old First Amendment case. And in that case the Supreme Court 3 said, we have a circumstance where we have journalists with 4 confidential sources who have not been made public, and the 5 Supreme Court says in that circumstance the government is 6 entitled to find out the identities of those confidential 7 sources.

8 THE COURT: And what was the reason that this was 9 disclosed?

10 MR. BONNOR: The reason why --

11 THE COURT: Countervailing reason.

12 MR. BONNOR: The Court said in those circumstances
13 that the Government's interest --

14 THE COURT: What was the Government's interest?

15 MR. BONNOR: It's in prosecuting these individuals.

16 THE COURT: Yes, I mean that's a little different than 17 the situation we have here. Don't you think that a 18 hypothetical class member in a situation in which he's 19 purchased, say, a quite controversial book, either of a 20 political nature or perhaps a moral nature, would be hesitant 21 to have his purchase made public for the purpose of protecting 22 his right to get a notice that he might have a claim against 23 the publisher?

24 MR. BONNOR: There is no doubt, your Honor, that there 25 may well be circumstances in which a class member might prefer

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 not to have his or her name disclosed in those circumstances.
2 This is not, however, one of those circumstances, and --

3 THE COURT: Well it may be. People may be quite 4 sensitive about whether they're drug users, whether they've 5 been in rehabilitation, whether they're reading this book for 6 those types of reasons.

7 MR. BONNOR: This is the runaway best seller of 2004, 8 2005, your Honor. I believe it was the second --

9 THE COURT: It's a good book?

10 MR. BONNOR: Well, I don't think it was a good book.
11 But behind one of the Harry Potter books, the most highly sold 12 book of 2004, 2005. There really is no negative connotation 13 that comes along with being one of the masses I believe, your 14 Honor.

15 THE COURT: Okay.

16 MR. BONNOR: So when we have a weighing test, I think 17 your Honor points out a good point. If you take the Tattered 18 Cover case, for example, your Honor, there they were looking 19 for someone who had purchased the book about making 20 methamphetamines. Now certainly if you're the, you're the 21 defendant in that circumstance, that's a private matter. You 22 don't want anyone to know that you're out purchasing books 23 about making methamphetamines.

24 This is not that circumstance, your Honor. The courts 25 have weighed the interest in those circumstances and they've

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 come out consistently, consistently in favor of disclosure.
2 And I'll point out --

3 THE COURT: I understand your argument. I would point 4 out you're weighing, on one hand here, the adequacy of notice 5 of a class settlement as opposed to many of these cases we're 6 talking about state's rights to prosecute wrongdoing.

7 MR. BONNOR: And --

8 THE COURT: It's a little bit different.

9 MR. BONNOR: What I would point out in that 10 circumstance is there are many many circumstances in which the 11 state's right or the Government's right to prosecute 12 individuals has to give away to constitutional rights.

13 THE COURT: I understand.

14 MR. BONNOR: We have Fourth Amendment rights, and the 15 courts have said over and over again we can't violate Fourth 16 Amendment rights in order to prosecute people.

17 We have Seventh Amendment rights, and the courts have 18 said, of course we can't violate those rights in order to 19 prosecute people.

20 Here, your Honor, we have a constitutional right. We 21 have a Fifth Amendment right to due process we have a 22 Fourteenth Amendment right to due process. And the Supreme 23 Court has told us that what those constitutional rights mean is 24 that class members are entitled to individual notice.

25 So I think that in doing the weighing that we're

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 talking about here, the very minimal, minimal imposition that 2 we have on First Amendment rights here, where we have a best 3 seller, the most highly sold book in 2000 -- second most highly 4 in 2004, 2005, the very minimal imposition on First Amendment
5 rights. And, your Honor, what I would say also is --

6 THE COURT: Why don't you -- I think I understand your 7 First Amendment argument. Why don't you address any other 8 objections you have to the settlement.

9 MR. BONNOR: If I could just very briefly on the First 10 Amendment point, your Honor. I don't mean to take up your 11 time, but just very briefly. I'd like to say Random House is 12 sending individual notice to the people who purchased from 13 them.

14 THE COURT: Yes, they voluntarily agreed to do that as 15 a party to the settlement. That's a little bit different from 16 requiring non parties to the settlement to either divulge their 17 customer lists with respect to specific books that have been 18 purchased, or in some manner to require them to distribute a 19 notice.

20 MR. BONNOR: The --

21 THE COURT: So I think I understand your First 22 Amendment issue. Let's move to the other ones.

23 MR. BONNOR: The First Amendment right in those 24 circumstances belongs to the customer, your Honor. It doesn't 25 belong to Random House. The issue is they're willing to --

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 THE COURT: Yes, that's --

2 MR. BONNOR: -- send out notice to their customers.

3 The customers are in the very same position, vis-a-vis 4 Amazon.com.

5 THE COURT: Yes, of course Random House isn't 6 divulging anything to anybody else by sending a notice to their 7 customers. That wouldn't be the case if you took the little 8 shop around the corner and said give me your customer list 9 because we're going to send a notice to your customers.

10 MR. BONNOR: And in those circumstances, your Honor, 11 what courts generally do; for example, there was a recent case
12 here against Jenkins & Gilchrist. It arises out of the KPMG
13 tax frauds. And what the court did in that circumstance is it 14 required the defendants in that case to send out notice to the 15 customers. And what your Honor is certainly empowered here to 16 do and what is done in every single securities class action, 17 hundreds every year, thousands in the course of history, is you 18 require the people who are in possession of these customer
19 lists to send out notice. And you could look at the web site 20 of any claims administrator and you're going to find hundreds, 21 hundreds of cases in which people are being required to send 22 out notice, if they want to keep confidential their customer 23 lists, which is certainly a legitimate reason for them to do 24 that, but that does not interfere, your Honor, with your 25 ability to require them to do it, or an absolute minimum, at a

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 absolute minimum, the champions of the class should undertake 2 some effort to try to get those people to send out notice to 3 the class.

4 THE COURT: All right. Thank you for addressing First 5 Amendment issues. Let's move on to the other ones.

6 MR. BONNOR: The other issue, your Honor, is this 7 question about whether we can require third parties or somehow 8 or other ask third parties to participate in the notice 9 campaign. And the most recent case that I could find, the best 10 example of this, your Honor, is Judge Gleeson's decision in the 11 Visa check, Master money litigation. You probably remember 12 that case. It was brought by Walmart, it was an antitrust 13 case. They were alleging that there was certain price fixing.
14 And what Judge Gleeson required in those circumstances was for 15 the plaintiffs to go out and subpoena records from 81, 81 16 different entities that issued Visa cards or Master cards to 17 retailers. The Court required the plaintiffs to do that in 18 order to provide notice to the class members. And what the 19 court also said is, the defendants will send a letter to every 20 one of those 81 entities and they will ask them for their 21 cooperation in providing notice to the members of the class.
22 And in addition, what the court said was reasonable in those 23 circumstances was for the plaintiffs to fight up to 20 motions 24 to compel --

25 THE COURT: I'm sorry, is this the same point or is
SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.
(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 this a different point?

2 MR. BONNOR: This is the point, your Honor -- they say 3 you can't possibly ask third parties to provide any information 4 that will assist us in providing notice to the class. And what 5 I'm saying is in that case the Court required them to --

6 THE COURT: I understand that there is nothing 7 prohibitive in writing a letter to somebody asking them to do
8 something. That act, in itself, is not prohibited.

9 MR. BONNOR: No, your Honor. I'm not saying that the 10 Court -- the Court didn't ask anyone to write letters. What 11 the Court asked or required -- ordered the plaintiffs to do in 12 the Visa Master money case was to subpoena records from 81
13 different entities, required the defendants to write --

14 THE COURT: Yes, the issue to me isn't whether or not 15 it's a burden to issue 81 subpoenas. The question is whether 16 or not it's appropriate in this case given the First Amendment 17 issues that have been raised.

18 MR. BONNOR: I think they're are two separate issues, 19 your Honor. The first issue is whether it's practical under 20 the circumstances to identify class members. And it certainly 21 is practical to identify class members. We know that there are 22 entities out there with long lists.

23 THE COURT: All right, I think --

24 MR. BONNOR: The second --

25 THE COURT: I think we've established -- you've

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 established all your points as helpful as you can. So I think 2 we're simply going at it from a different angle. If there's 3 some other issues that you want to address, please do.

4 MR. BONNOR: What I would like to do -- if your Honor 5 wants to hear, I would like to do this, but if your Honor is 6 sick of hearing from me I'll certainly sit down at this point
7 in time. They cite a number of cases where they said --

8 THE COURT: No. What I simply don't want you to do is 9 repeat yourself.

10 MR. BONNOR: They cited a number of cases, your Honor, 11 the plaintiffs, where they said that courts decided that it was 12 impracticable to provide notice to the class members. And I
13 would say, your Honor, that if we were to read those cases, 14 that every one of them suggests, in circumstances which are 15 similar to the ones that we have at issue here, that the 16 plaintiff should be required to go out beyond the limited means 17 that they have available to them at this point in time and to 18 look outside for other sources of lists of class members in 19 order to provide notice to the members of the class.

20 Mr. Drury cited the Agent Orange case. In that case
21 it was impossible to identify every one who had been in Vietnam
22 and exposed to Agent Orange. We did not know where agent 23 orange had been dropped, we didn't know who had been exposed 24 to. What the court required in those circumstances was to send 25 out notice, your Honor, to hundreds of thousands of class

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 members who had contacted the Veterans Administration and to 2 provide them with notice. It also required the litigants to go
3 to the governors of every single state and to obtain from them
4 a list of people who had contacted various state agencies
5 regarding Agent Orange exposure and to provide those people
6 with notice of the settlement in that litigation. So Agent
7 Orange, that's their case, suggests that precisely the opposite 8 should be done of what's being done here. They cite this the 9 Lucas v. Kmart case. I believe that's a case that Mr. Drury 10 cited, although I may be wrong about that. That was a 11 circumstance in which a class action was brought on behalf of 12 people who were handicapped who utilized either wheel chairs or 13 scooters to get around Kmart. In that circumstance it's 14 impossible to identify everyone in the United States who 15 utilizes a wheelchair or a scooter to get around Kmart. What 16 the court required in that circumstance, and found reasonable, 17 was to go out and find a list of 200,000 people who had 18 registered with various marketing agencies as people who 19 utilized scooters or utilized wheelchairs and required notice 20 to be sent out to all of those people who could be found in 21 that list. That was not a list that was in possession of the 22 parties. It was a list that was in the possession of a third 23 party. The Court found that was reasonable under the 24 circumstances. Another case that they cite, their very own 25 case, your Honor, the Sarasone Products case is a case that

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

1 deals with a drug damages, injuries resulting from exposure to 2 a drug. And what the court did in that circumstance is, we 3 can't determine who it was, every single doctor in America who 4 prescribed this drug to people, but there is a list that's 5 maintained by the government, which is negative occurrences 6 reports. We're going to require notice to be sent out to every 7 single person who is on that list. And, in addition, the 8 defendants in that case had been contacted by thousands of 9 doctors who say that their clients have been injured. We're 10 going to require notice to be sent to every one of those 11 doctors and to require or to request in those circumstances 12 that those doctors identify their clients and send them notice 13 of this class action.

14 So there are many many cases, your Honor, many cases 15 where we're reaching beyond what's available to the parties
16 without doing any discovery and without undertaking any effort 17 whatsoever and requiring them to send notice to the class.

18 And one last thing on notice that I'd like to say, 19 your Honor. They're advocating that they published notice in 20 these publications. It's U.S.A. Weekend and Parade Magazine.
21 And we have a whole room full of people who are involved in 22 prosecuting class actions. And this weekend there was one
23 notice published in Parade Magazine. Now, does anyone know 24 what that notice was? No. No one knows what that notice is 25 because no one's going to read this notice, your Honor. It had

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 to do with seratin, the drug seratin. There is a notice that's 2 set forth right in the middle of this document. It's right 3 next to all the Great All Americans, which was why I was 4 interested in it. You know, I was hoping somebody was going to 5 Rutgers, but no one is. But the point is, your Honor, that the 6 notice that they're proposing in this circumstance is not going 7 to reach anyone. No one is going to read it.

8 I've been involved in many many class actions. Nobody 9 calls up my firm and says I read your notice in the Wall Street
10 Journal today, I read your notice here or there. Those notices
11 are published for due process purposes. It's necessary --

12 THE COURT: You think they're a waste of time, I take 13 it.

14 MR. BONNOR: They're a waste of time and they're a 15 waste of money, your Honor. There are much much more effective 16 ways to reach the members of the class in this litigation. And 17 if the parties had undertaken any effort whatsoever to identify 18 those class members, they could have done it economically and 19 they could have done it much more efficiently.

20 I would point out, your Honor, just the last thing I 21 like to say on this issue is we're dealing with retailers who 22 really could be served well by providing notice to their 23 customers.

24 THE COURT: How many book retailers are there in the 25 country?

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.
(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 MR. BONNOR: This is a very concentrated industry, 2 your Honor. What's reasonable under the circumstances, you've 3 pointed that out, we have, as my little bit of research on 4 this -- the publishers might be able to put some more insight
5 into it -- my researchers indicated Barnes & Noble has a 6 15 percent market share, Borders has about a 14 percent market
7 share, and so we're dealing with a very -- Walmart is a huge 8 book seller, Amazon.com obviously is a huge book seller, just 9 those three, four, five we could probably identify 50 percent 10 of the members.

11 THE COURT: Would that be sufficient in your view?

12 MR. BONNOR: Your Honor, I don't think it is practical 13 in this circumstance to go out and subpoena records from every 14 corner book store. That's not possible. But we're dealing 15 with something that will be infectious. When you get out on 16 the internet this notice and you provide people with e-mails
17 and it says you can get $25 back for buying A Million Little 18 Pieces, they're going to send it to their friends who they know 19 read it and this notice is going to be spread throughout the 20 world, and a lot of class members are going to become aware of 21 it, certainly a lot more than that are going to read it in 22 U.S.A. Weekend. No one is going to read this notice, your 23 Honor. And so as a result of that we have constitutional 24 concerns, we have the unequivocal words of Rule 23(c)(2), we 25 have the Supreme Court saying that people are entitled to

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 individual notice. And I cited to you all these various First 2 Amendment issues. I won't go back and repeat that.

3 And the last thing I would like to say deals with the 4 preliminary approval. Of course your Honor knows that Rule 5 23(g) requires you in a circumstance where you're going to 6 grant approval or certification to a class that you have to 7 choose counsel for the class, and I think you've put off that 8 issue. Previously you made Mr. Mullaney interim lead counsel.
9 We pointed out in our papers that the --

10 THE COURT: No, I appointed him liaison counsel. I 11 haven't ruled on the class counsel issue.

12 MR. BONNOR: We've pointed out in our papers, your 13 Honor, that the papers that were submitted by the plaintiffs in 14 this litigation were filled, every single paragraph, with typos 15 and mistakes. It was something that at my firm would never 16 ever leave the door. I can assure you under absolutely no 17 circumstances would those papers leave the door.

18 And we've also submitted to you, your Honor, our firm 19 resumes. It explains to you the various experience that we 20 have. It is a great deal more experience than these gentlemen 21 have here. And just last week we've obtained a settlement in 22 Massachusetts, $60 million in a securities class action before 23 Judge Saras up there. It's an unusual issue dealing with 24 liability on, under 10(b)(5)(a) and (c), something that's now 25 before the Supreme Court on certiorari. Just two weeks ago in

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 Judge Daniels' courtroom we received approval of a $20 million
2 settlement in the Winstar Securities litigation. And again, 3 your Honor, that's just something that's happened since we 4 submitted our papers. There's a long list of successful cases
5 that we've prosecuted that are set forth in our papers. I 6 won't go through all of those things.

7 But what I would like to close by saying is the class 8 deserves to have a champion in this case who is going to look 9 out to protect their rights. That has not been done thus far.
10 There are hundreds of thousands, if not millions of class 11 members who will receive no notice if what is being proposed by 12 the MLP group occurs, and I think your Honor should take that 13 into consideration in appointing lead counsel and in deciding 14 whether to preliminarily approve this litigation. Thank you 15 very much, your Honor.

16 THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Bonnor.

17 Mr. Drury, would you care to respond?

18 MR. DRURY: Yes, your Honor. Thank you, your Honor.

19 I will be brief.

20 Rule 23 is quite clear. That provides for the best 21 notice practicable. We believe that our notice that we've 22 recommended meets constitutional muster; publication is the way 23 to go, the direct mail and the internet. Simply put --

24 THE COURT: Why would it be difficult for class
25 plaintiffs to provide a form of notice to the major retailers

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 and ask them to distribute it to the customers, their customers
2 whom they're aware of purchased this book?

3 MR. DRURY: Well, first, your Honor, I believe it's an 4 undue burden. It's not one that the plaintiffs with defendants
5 couldn't do, but I think it would be unreasonable, as I 6 suggested before, and burdensome to go to third parties that 7 are not even parties.

8 THE COURT: I'm not talking about issuing subpoenas
9 and getting involved in tangential litigation over subpoena 10 enforcements. I'm simply saying contacting Barnes & Noble or 11 Borders and requesting them, not to hand over your list, but 12 simply to e-mail to their customers a copy of the notice.

13 MR. DRURY: Because I think that is doing indirectly 14 what we say can't be done directly, and we get back to the 15 constitutional question of getting into First Amendment rights.
16 When people read books, when people get books they have the 17 right to receive it, take in the information, and do it being 18 anonymous. Just questions --

19 THE COURT: Yes, they're not anonymous vis-a-vis the 20 seller. They're anonymous vis-a-vis the public, which is a 21 decent argument for not issuing subpoenas to require purchase 22 list to be turned over.

23 It's a different matter where you're asking the 24 publisher, on a voluntary basis, to, without any change in the 25 confidential relationship, if you will, if that's what one

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 could call it, the anonymity, if you will, of the purchaser of 2 having that seller distribute the notice.

3 MR. DRURY: Well first, your Honor, it's highly 4 unlikely, and defendant can address this better than I can,
5 that they are going to do that, unless so ordered by this Court 6 as part of this resolution.

7 As from the plaintiffs' perspective, I have never seen 8 it done where, in a case, in a consumer case such as this, 9 where you would go ahead and send a letter, let alone a 10 subpoena, to the parties that are not parties, the third 11 parties that are not even parties to the litigation itself.
12 Because when you send out a letter, whether it comes from the 13 plaintiffs or the defendants suggesting that they give us 14 information with respect to --

15 THE COURT: That's why I'm not suggesting that you 16 write a letter to Barnes & Noble and ask them to give you 17 anything.

18 MR. DRURY: Well, then what is the Court suggesting?
19 Maybe I --

20 THE COURT: No. I'm suggesting that -- I'm raising a 21 question as to whether it wouldn't be feasible simply to ask 22 Barnes & Noble to forward an e-mail or send an e-mail which 23 contains the class notice to any purchasers that it can readily 24 identify who purchased a book.

25 MR. DRURY: At whose expense, your Honor?

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 THE COURT: Well --

2 MR. DRURY: Who is going to pay? Let's say --

3 THE COURT: Well, you tell me, what is the expense?

4 MR. DRURY: Well, the expense for Barnes & Noble, for 5 example, to e-mail the notice to all persons that they have on 6 their list may, indeed, be considerable, and I believe that 7 it's a --

8 THE COURT: What is it? It may be, it may not be.

9 MR. DRURY: Well, it's labor intensive. They have to 10 get it, they have to retrieve the information. They have to 11 send it out. They have to get it back. They have to report to 12 counsel and to the Court.

13 THE COURT: They certainly have their own customer 14 lists.

15 MR. DRURY: They may, or they may have to create their 16 customer lists. I don't know.

17 THE COURT: I don't know either.

18 MR. DRURY: I don't know that to be the fact. But 19 what I do -- our position is that would be an undue burden and 20 unreasonable and unnecessary under the circumstances of this 21 case.

22 Now, I've heard a lot from Mr. Bonnor about his 15
23 years experience and all the cases he's had. But it seems 24 interesting that in his research he only came up with one case 25 with respect to the subpoena. He's come up with no cases that

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 controvert that we have put forth to the Court the best notice
2 practicable under the circumstances. And simply put, he wants
3 to be part of the case and get in on the settlement. That's 4 the only reason he's here. That's why he's here. All his 5 cases that he talks about -- I have 37 years of experience.
6 I've tried criminal cases, federal cases, criminal and state.
7 I've argued 47 appeals.

8 THE COURT: I don't think I need to hear about the 9 competence of counsel.

10 MR. DRURY: Well, I'm just saying that because he's 11 suggesting that he should be lead counsel based upon his 12 resume. I think his resume falls flat, can't compare to mine 13 or Mr. Smith's. I've been to the United States Supreme Court.
14 I doubt if he has. But I'm not here to pat myself on the back.
15 I don't need to. I believe my resume and my colleagues and 16 people who know me know what I've done and know what I can do.

17 But getting back to his argument, Judge, we believe 18 that the notice that's out there is the best notice practicable
19 under the circumstances. It meets constitutional requirements.

20 The Malane case, Agent Orange and In Re: Compact Disk
21 all say that publication is fine. I don't know where counsel 22 is coming from when he contends and argues that individual 23 notice is mandatory. That's not the law, and that isn't the 24 case.

25 But what I would ask is that your Honor preliminarily

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 approve this settle, approve the notice package, if you will,
2 that we presented to the Court, and appoint myself and Mr.
3 Smith as co-lead counsel, Mr. Mullaney, who is already liaison
4 counsel. And should your Honor decide that at this juncture, 5 for whatever reason -- and I hope this isn't the case -- you're 6 not going to approve the settlement as presented, I would also 7 ask that at this time that in the interim, because it's been 8 six months since we initially asked to be appointed interim 9 counsel, that Mr. Smith and myself, indeed, be appointed 10 interim counsel. Thank you.

11 THE COURT: All right. Does defendant wish to address 12 any aspect of the notice argument?

13 MR. BLOCKER: Yes, your Honor. Can I address three 14 small points, your Honor.

15 First of all, your Honor asked what is the number of 16 book retailers. I don't actually know the exact number, but 17 let me tell you how you can estimate it, your Honor. We turned 18 over a printout to the plaintiffs that is a list of all of our 19 sales of the book by publisher or by retailer, and the list is 20 67 pages long, and I think there are about 50 or 60 entries on 21 every page. So order of magnitude that will give you an idea 22 there are a large number of book retailers throughout the 23 country that we deal with.

24 Second, I want to address Mr. Stone's point that 25 nobody reads the publication notices. First of all, Judge, I

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 don't think that's true at all. I've been involved in a number 2 of settlements where publication notice was the only means of 3 communicating with the class, and those generated a large 4 number of responses.

5 And, second, even if we were to take Mr. Stone or 6 Mr. Bonnor's point, you know, point blank and assume that 7 nobody reads them, this case is different. Because 8 unfortunately for Random House, this case gets a lot of free 9 publicity. The events surrounding the publication and the 10 marketing of A Million Little Pieces have been very much in the 11 press. There was an article published on the internet only a 12 few weeks ago. And once the publication notice hits the U.S.A.
13 Today and Parade, items that in which they're going to be 14 published, you can be sure that even if they are not read by 15 tons of class members -- and I'm sure they will be anyway -- 16 that there's going to be a lot of free publicity pointing out 17 that there is a settlement, people can get cash. And in 18 designing the notice program, your Honor, that was specifically 19 taken into account.

20 One thing the plaintiffs have already pointed out is 21 as part of designing notice program, neither the defendants nor 22 the plaintiffs did this on their own. We got together, we 23 engaged Rouse Consulting, who is an expert at doing these sort
24 of programs. They got another entity involved called Concella
25 Communications, whose whole mission is to design effective

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 publication notice programs. We spent a lot of time with 2 Concella trying to make sure that whatever publication notice
3 program was put in place was reasonably calculated to reach 4 the -- a large percentage of the class. And so this wasn't 5 done on our own, and I'm not standing up and pretending to be 6 an expert on it. But I can assure you the parties did go to 7 somebody we do deem to be an expert and try and do the best job 8 that we possibly could.

9 And the last point, your Honor, is I don't want to 10 belabor the First Amendment issue. If your Honor has any 11 questions, I'm happy to address them. It's an issue that --

12 THE COURT: Well, I don't see a First Amendment issue 13 in the hypothetical category of Barnes & Noble agreeing to 14 distribute the notice to its own customers.

15 MR. BLOCKER: Well, I guess -- I agree with you.

16 THE COURT: I don't know whether that's feasible or 17 practicable. I'm not sure if there's a record on that, that 18 issue. But I don't see a First Amendment issue here.

19 MR. BLOCKER: Well, obviously, your Honor, if they 20 want to do so on their own, if they make a voluntary decision, 21 I guess they're making a First Amendment decision for their 22 customers. My hunch would be, and the reason we filed the --

23 THE COURT: They're not really disclosing anything 24 that they don't already know.

25 MR. BLOCKER: No, but they're telling their customers.

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 THE COURT: That they know.

2 MR. BLOCKER: Yes, that they do know. So there is 3 some of that.

4 But I guess the one concern I have with the program
5 you were describing with Mr. Drury is the following. If the 6 plaintiffs' counsel sends a letter to Barnes & Noble and says
7 we'd like you to do this, that at least has some of the Court's 8 imprimatur on it. It might not be a subpoena. It might not 9 say at the top, subpoena, you must do the following. But if 10 I'm Barnes & Noble, and I'm the in-house lawyer for Barnes and 11 Noble and get that, I'm going to have to make a decision, am I 12 going to be dragged into court if I don't do this, I'm --

13 THE COURT: Well, they may want to do it. They may 14 say this is a service to our customers.

15 MR. BLOCKER: They may want to do it, that's possible, 16 your Honor. But it puts them in a very difficult position 17 because if they don't do it, and it does carry -- when the 18 plaintiffs appointed by the Court ask Barnes & Noble to do 19 that, it carries the imprimatur, even if it's indirect, of the 20 Court and is, essentially, tantamount to the same sort of 21 subpoenas that we're concerned about. And the reason we're 22 concerned about the issue, Judge, is it's not us today, but in 23 the next action down the road, you know, you setting a 24 precedent that this can or should be done, is something that 25 could come back in another class action that we are not a party

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 of and somebody asking us to do exactly the same thing. So we 2 do care a lot about it and I think there is sort of an indirect 3 imprimatur if you even have the plaintiffs' counsel ask the 4 Barnes & Noble of the world to send out --

5 THE COURT: Well, there is a distinction between 6 Barnes & Noble, which is a party to the litigation, and the 7 retailer that's not a party to the litigation.

8 MR. BLOCKER: It's -- there never was a consolidated
9 amended complaint filed, your Honor, because we reached a 10 settlement before that took place. But I have no idea if they 11 would have been part of any consolidated amended complaint.
12 They certainly were named in some of the underlying cases that 13 were transferred to your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Right.

15 MR. BLOCKER: But --

16 THE COURT: Somebody thought it was a good idea to put 17 them in --

18 MR. BLOCKER: Yeah.

19 THE COURT: -- in one release.

20 MR. BLOCKER: But I think your Honor hit the nail on 21 the head. I mean, I think these entities perceive they have 22 absolutely no exposure or at least none that they couldn't lay 23 off on the publisher. And so, you know, that's why we want 24 them out, but they don't really -- they are not parties in the 25 true sense. They're not currently named in any consolidated

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 amended complaint. And at the end of the day, I'm not sure
2 that makes any difference because they're not settling
3 defendants, they're not settling parties. They're not asking
4 to be part of the settlement. We just want them in there 5 because we want to buy absolute peace at the end of the day.

6 THE COURT: All right.

7 MR. BLOCKER: I don't have anything else to add, 8 unless your Honor has any other questions.

9 THE COURT: No. I'll tell you, tell the parties where 10 the Court stands.

11 First of all, the Court appoints Mr. Drury and Mr.
12 Smith as co-lead counsel under Rule 23(g). Based on their 13 prior experience and the work they've done in this case, I 14 think they are best able to represent the interests of the 15 class in this matter, and the Court, for much the same reason, 16 continues Mr. Mullaney as liaison counsel.

17 I think, having reviewed the papers and listening to 18 argument, there is no question in my mind that the amount of 19 the settlement is, on a preliminary basis, within the range of 20 fairness and reasonableness given the very significant legal 21 issues and mountains that the plaintiffs would have to climb to 22 succeed here, first on the class motion, and then on the 23 merits. So I have no problem concluding that the amount of the 24 settlement is within a reasonable range.

25 I also believe that, contrary to Mr. Bonnor's

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 suggestion, that notice can be an effective method of 2 publication, effective method of notice in many cases.

3 I have some hesitancy, however, as the parties may 4 have inferred from my questions, that the plaintiffs -- 5 settling defendants and the plaintiffs have explored the 6 feasibility of expanding the notice program to request large 7 retailers, and I divide them into two categories: Party
8 defendants, such as Barnes & Noble and non-party defendant, 9 probably worthy of separate analysis, but whether or not it's 10 feasible to request of them to distribute notice to their 11 customers. I have no idea whether Barnes & Noble would be 12 willing to do this, what the cost would be and who would 13 shoulder the cost. Those are all relevant factors. As I say, 14 they probably cut differently for parties and non-party 15 retailers, and so I'm not going to rule on the motion for 16 approval of the settlement at this juncture.

17 The class certainly is an appropriate settling class, 18 but I'm going to simply defer, until I receive supplemental 19 submissions by the parties, on the feasibility of retailer
20 participation and notice. I think it's a given that all 21 parties want broad notice that's feasible, and so there really 22 aren't conflicting goals among the parties here, including the 23 party represented by Mr. Bonnor.

24 How much time does counsel want to make a supplemental 25 submission to the Court on this issue?

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.
(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 MR. DRURY: Your Honor, the plaintiffs -- I don't know 2 if defendants -- 14, 21 days would be sufficient.

3 THE COURT: All right.

4 MR. DRURY: Either one, Judge.

5 THE COURT: All right, 21 days it'll be. Which brings 6 us to when, Mr. Donald? Today is the 6th, is that right? So 7 April 27th. And I suggest that the settling parties meet with 8 Barnes & Noble and -- at a minimum, and see where things lie.
9 I form no views as to where I'll come out on the notice issue 10 ultimately, and have no predisposition.

11 Anything further we should address this morning, 12 counsel?

13 MR. BONNOR: Could I just briefly, your Honor, address
14 the issue of who should be contacted. I think that, as I said, 15 it's a very concentrated industry. You have Barnes & Noble at 16 approximately 15 percent, you have Borders at approximately 17 14 percent. I don't know what Amazon.com's percentage is, but 18 it's got to be fairly large, and Walmart's one of the biggest 19 book retailers, and I think at least with these four you could 20 probably cover 50 percent of the class here. It wouldn't be 21 any more burden on these people to meet or to address this 22 issue with those four, and I think that would be very helpful 23 to the members of the class.

24 THE COURT: All right, I'm not going to determine who 25 should contact whom. I'm going to leave it up to the judgment

SOUTHERN DISTRICT REPORTERS, P.C.

(212) 805-0300

746zmdlm

1 of counsel for the settling parties to take a reasonable
2 approach to preparing a response to the Court's inquiry.

3 MR. MEYER: Judge, just so I'm clear in my mind, we'll 4 have a hearing on the 27th?

5 THE COURT: No. I'm asking for a written submission 6 by the 27th, and then I'll advise the parties after reviewing 7 their submissions what the appropriate next step will be.

8 MR. MEYER: Thank you.

9 MR. DRURY: Your Honor, one more point. I didn't hear 10 your Honor mention who the class representatives would be. Mr.
11 Smith and myself are class counsel. Do we need to -- does your 12 Honor wish to address that question now who the class -- all 13 the named plaintiffs or just the named plaintiffs for Mr. Smith 14 and myself.

15 THE COURT: I don't think I need to resolve that.
16 Frankly, I assumed that the class representatives would be the 17 clients that the two of you represent.

18 MR. DRURY: All right, thank you.

19 THE COURT: Anything further, counsel? All right, 20 we're adjourned.

21 THE DEPUTY CLERK: All rise.
