About

Qtrax is the world's first free and legal peer-to-peer (P2P) digital music site. Music lovers can discover new music and legally download their favorite songs while compensating both the artists and the record labels through non-intrusive and relevant advertising. Qtrax has teamed up with record labels and all of their respective publishing divisions. LTDnetwork Inc, a division of Brilliant Technologies Corporation, developed Qtrax.

Management Team

Allan Klepfisz – Chairman & Chief Executive Officer

Allan Klepfisz is the founder and executive chairman of Advantage Australia Group Pty Ltd. Allan is recognized in the Australian business community as a marketing strategist who has extensive experience in establishing new ventures in the technology, marketing, restaurant, textile and retail industries. He is a shareholder of LTDnetwork.

Rick Riccobono – Executive Vice President, Digital Rights Management

Rick Riccobono is a rights expert and pioneer in digital distribution starting with his tenure at Supertacks (a precursor to iTunes) through the implementation of Qtrax, the first fully licensed, legal ad-supported P2P music network. Rick is also integrally involved in establishing distribution agreements in the U.S. and the international market for a number of new mobile entertainment and digital distribution products. Rick has worked for Groove Mobile, QMobile, Audible Magic, Mobile Media Now, M-Wise, SK Wireless/WiderThan, Napster, and Fortune 500 companies like Viacom and Philips/Sony Corporate Alliance Group.

J. Christopher Roe – Chief Technology Officer

J. Christopher Roe comes to Qtrax from Interpublic Group's AFG Interactive, where he managed multiple information and communications programs. Immediately prior to AFG Interactive, Chris served as Chief Information Officer of NewYorkCity.com, the leading site for information on nightlife, tours and events. Additionally, as an executive producer for Vivendi Universal, AOL, IBM and USA Networks, Chris was responsible for the implementation of technology initiatives directly to corporate communications and public relations.

Qtrax has a strategic partnership with Rebel Digital, a digital advertising and sales representation firm. Rebel Digital will lead advertising and sales for Qtrax. The companies include:

Free legal downloads promised by Universal rights

Times Online

Released: May 8th

Universal Music has signed a rights deal with a new music store that promises the first legal download service. The launch was overshadowed by claims that it did not have industry support. The New York-based service had secured the backing of Jay-Z and James Blunt to support it at a £500,000 launch in Cannes in January, celebrating its first legal download and share. Record companies, it said, would be compensated through advertising. Record companies, it said, would be compensated through advertising. Universal Music Pacts with Qtrax

Digital Trends

Released: May 7th

the major labels' music? Here it is May, and Universal looks like they're finally on board.

Universal Music Group has finally struck a deal with online music service Qtrax to enable music to be downloaded for free via the ad-supported service. In a joint statement, Qtrax and Universal Music Group said they would be compensated for the use of their content through a share of advertising revenue, although the share was not disclosed. Users will also be able to purchase "music-related items" from the Qtrax service.

QTrax: Actual Deal With Major Label

Silicon Valley

Released: May 6th

We're going to have to figure out a different way to refer to QTrax, which we normally describe as free, ad-supported music downloads but doesn't have deals with any major music label. QTrax has a deal with Universal Music Group, the world's biggest label. And that means QTrax is providing a swath of music, free of charge, via the service.

Qtrax Inks Deal With Universal for Legal P2P Music

Wired

Released: May 6th

Qtrax, the ambitious free P2P service that took a PR beating in January when it mistakenly placed a deal with Universal's publishing group, seems to be back on track. The P2P service made public a legitimate deal with Universal's publishing group, meaning the company can now legally populate its service with songs.
