EXPERT REPORT OF DR. RICHARD WATERMAN

I. INTRODUCTION

A. Professional Background

1. I am an Adjunct Associate Professor of Statistics at The Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania, and the President and Co-Founder of Analytic Business Services, Inc., a consultancy focused on providing expert advice and opinions in the field of statistical analysis. I received my Ph.D. in Statistics from the Pennsylvania State University in 1993. I have substantial experience designing and reviewing sampling protocols for various large organizations, such as the United States Postal Service, for whom I designed and analyzed a national multi-stage sample for the estimation of operational characteristics. I have also designed sampling protocols involving other filesharing technologies, specifically BitTorrent. I also have substantial experience in designing sampling protocols in the private sector, and have developed market research studies for numerous large corporate clients, which typically involve issues relating to sampling. Further details of my professional history, including a list of publications I have authored during the last ten years, can be found on the resume attached hereto as Exhibit A. I have served as an expert witness in Columbia Pictures Industries, Inc., et al. v. Gary Fung, 06-CV-05578. I am presently serving as an expert witness in Arista Records LLC, et al. v. Usenet.com, Inc., 07-CV-08822.

B. Assignment

1. I have been retained by plaintiffs, through Cravath, Swaine &

Moore LLP, to provide expert analysis and opinions in the matter of Arista Records LLC, et al. v. Lime Wire LLC, 06 Civ. 05936.¹

2. I have been asked to develop a protocol to determine the authorization status of files being offered for download to LimeWire users and the frequency of download requests for those files.

3. The documents that I have specifically reviewed or considered in forming the opinions expressed herein are listed in Exhibit B. I may supplement my analyses and opinions if new information becomes available in conjunction with my ongoing research on the issues involved in this case. I may also develop charts or other visual aids to illustrate my testimony.

4. I am being compensated for my work in connection with this engagement at my standard rates of $450 per hour of testimony and $350 per hour for all other activities. My support analysts are being compensated at a rate of $150 per hour.

II. CONCLUSIONS

1. I estimate that 92.7% of the files available for download through the LimeWire client are not authorized for free distribution on peer-to-peer networks. (43.6% of the available files are owned by one of the four major record companies (EMI Music North America, Sony BMG Music Entertainment, Universal Music Group or Warner Music Group Corp., collectively, the "Record Companies") and are not authorized for free distribution on peer-to-peer networks, and 49.0% of the available files are highly likely to be owned by another entity that has not authorized them for free distribution on peer-to-peer networks.) In addition, 3.2% of the available files are authorized (or highly likely to be authorized) for free distribution on peer-to-peer networks. The identity or authorization status of 4.2% of the available files is unknowable.

2. I also estimate that 98.8% of the download requests for authorized or unauthorized files to LimeWire clients are for unauthorized files. 1.2% of the download requests for unauthorized or authorized files to LimeWire clients are for authorized files.

III. DESCRIPTION OF PROTOCOL

1. I designed a three-phase study to determine the authorization status of (a) the files being offered for download to LimeWire users and (b) the download requests for those files. First, a Master Hash Library of file hashes (the "Master Library") was created. Second, using this Master Library, files were randomly selected for download and subsequent analysis. Third, the files downloaded and analyzed were made available for searching, and user requests for these files were logged.

A. Creation of the Master Hash Library

1. The Master Library was created using the LimeWire Basic Client version 4.12.11 (the "Client"). During Client installation, the team implementing the protocol selected "English" as the language and declined the Client's request to scan the hard drive for files. The Client was configured to display all possible columns of information in the search-result lists, not to share files during and after download, and to proceed with the downloading of files without regard to any dialogue boxes about licenses. The Client's default settings with respect to the number of simultaneous downloads (eight) was not changed. The searches were conducted with the Client's default filters in place. If a client became inoperative for any reason during the execution of the protocol, the Client was restarted and the protocol continued.

2. The protocol was implemented in Los Angeles, CA; Detroit, MI; Little Rock, AR; Columbus, OH and New York, NY.

3. The Client was directed to initiate a search request using the "What's New" function with the default settings enabled. The "What's New" search was allowed to run for 90 seconds.

4. One file was randomly selected from the files returned by the "What's New" search, with each result weighted by its source count. A "browse host" command was issued on the selected result. The "browse host" command was allowed to run for 90 seconds before another file was selected.

5. If the host responded to the "browse host" request, an inventory of all data received in response to the "browse host" request, including hashes, was collected from the host. A hash was recorded by selecting a file, right clicking on it and selecting the "copy magnet link to clipboard" option. This process was repeated until hashes were collected for each of the files returned in response to the "browse host" request. Data from the clipboard was then stored to create the Master Library. If the "copy magnet link to clipboard" option was not available for any reason, then the "Lookup File with Bitzi" option was used to obtain the hash value for the file. No actual files were downloaded at this point in the study. The tab displaying the results of the “browse host” request was then closed.

6. The file selection and hash collection process was repeated nine more times on each “What’s New” results list, such that ten “browse host” requests were issued for each “What’s New” search.

7. After each “What’s New” query, the Client was disconnected from its UltraPeers and then reconnected to a different set of UltraPeers. Software controls prevented any of the Clients from connecting to the same UltraPeer more than once.

8. After reconnecting to a different set of UltraPeers, the Client was directed to initiate a new “What’s New” search request. The process described in Paragraphs 4 and 5 was then repeated. In all, the process was repeated continuously for one week, creating a Master Library of 7,691,324 file hashes.

9. Duplicate file hashes that were captured from the same IP address were then removed from the inventory, leaving 6,908,689 file hashes.

B. Selection and Acquisition of the Sample for Analysis

1. Each hash in the Master Library was assigned an integer.

2. I generated a list of 10,000 uniform random numbers, with a value ranging anywhere from 1 to 6,908,689. Those random numbers were used to select hashes from the Master Library with the corresponding assigned integer value. This selection method ensured that each entry in the Master Library was equally likely to be chosen.

3. Using multiple instances of the Client, the randomly-selected hashes (as magnet links) were used to download the associated files from the network. If a download request timed out and could not be downloaded in ten attempts, the file was deemed undownloadable and replaced with the next hash from the randomly-generated list from the Master Library. Each instance of the Client attempted to download eight files at any one time.

4. The downloaded files were scanned for viruses using AVG Anti-Virus Professional Edition. Files containing viruses were removed. Files that appeared to contain child pornography were also removed from the set.

5. The first 1,800 files appearing in this set were analyzed by Eric German and his team to determine their identity and authorization status.

C. The User Request Study

1. Using the Client, the team implementing the protocol made the files analyzed in Phase III of the study available for download for a period of one week.

2. User requests to download the files were logged. No files were transferred to users. Multiple requests for the same file from the same IP address were excluded from the results.

3. User requests were then analyzed to determine the percentage of requests for unauthorized files.

IV. RESULTS AND CONCLUSIONS

1. I relied upon the classifications of Mr. German and his team.

Mr. German's declaration is attached as Exhibit C. Mr. German and his team's analysis showed that of the 1,800 files analyzed, 774 were confirmed to be infringing by their Record Company owner; 870 were determined to be highly likely infringing; 38 were determined to be highly likely noninfringing; 18 were determined to be part of the LimeWire client itself; 17 were determined to be spam or spoofs; and 9 were determined to be pornographic. Mr. German and his team also reported that the status of 74 files could not be determined either because the file could not be identified or its authorization status could not be determined.

2. Leaving aside the 26 files determined to be spam/spoof or pornography, 43.6% (774 files) of the available files were confirmed to be infringing by their Record Company owners. 49.0% (870 files) of the available files were determined to be highly likely infringing. 3.2% (56 files) of the available files were determined to be highly likely noninfringing (including files containing parts of the LimeWire client). The identity or authorization status of 4.2% (74 files) of the available files could not be determined.

3. Thus, based on the number of files in the sample confirmed by their Record Company owners as unauthorized and the number of files determined to be highly likely infringing, and not considering the files determined to be spam/spoof or pornography, I estimate that 92.7% of the files made available for download to LimeWire clients are either not authorized or highly likely not to be authorized for free distribution on peer-to-peer networks. In addition, I estimate that 3.2% of the available files are authorized or highly likely to be authorized for free-distribution on peer-to-peer networks. The identity or authorization status of 4.2% of the available files is unknowable. The margin of error for this estimate is +/- 1.2% at 95% confidence. This represents a very high level of precision.

4. The above reported percentages are concordant with similar studies I have designed to analyze file sharing activity on a peer-to-peer network. This high level of concordance, in my opinion, lends additional credence to the validity of this study and its results.

5. Of the 1,625 download requests, 1,606 were for confirmed or highly likely infringing files, and 19 were for highly likely noninfringing files (including files containing parts of the LimeWire client). Therefore, I further estimate that 98.8% of the download requests for authorized or unauthorized files to LimeWire clients were for unauthorized files. 1.2% of the download requests for authorized or unauthorized files to LimeWire clients were for authorized files. The margin of error for this estimate is +/- 0.5% at 95% confidence, which also represents a very high level of precision.

6. The protocol described above and adhered to, in my opinion, yielded files that are representative of both the files available to LimeWire clients as well as the frequency of requests for such files. Therefore, I am able to conclude that the vast majority of file transfers executed by the LimeWire client are for infringing files.

ECF CASE 06 Civ. 05936 (GEL)

DECLARATION OF ERIC J. GERMAN

I, Eric J. German, declare:

I. INTRODUCTION

Professional Background

1. I am, through my Professional Corporation, a partner in the law firm of Mitchell Silberberg & Knupp LLP. I am a member of the Bars of the States of New York and California. My practice focuses primarily on entertainment, copyright, and trademark law. I have personal knowledge of the following facts and, if called and sworn as a witness, could competently testify thereto.

2. Since 1999, I have served as counsel for major record companies and other content owners. This work has included assessments of claims arising under the Copyright Act.

Overview and Summary of Analysis

3. I have been asked by the Plaintiffs in the above-captioned action to perform and manage an investigation and analysis regarding the types of files being offered for download to LimeWire users and the character of download requests for those files. To perform this analysis, Dr. Richard Waterman designed a protocol to collect a random sample of files through the LimeWire client (the "Making Available Study") and subsequently make available a random subset of those files for searching (the "Demand Study").

4. Making Available Study: Of the 1,800 files I was asked to classify, 1,644 of them were either confirmed to be infringing by their owners or determined to be highly likely infringing. Only 56 of the files were determined to be highly likely noninfringing or to be a part of the LimeWire client. See RC00004274 - RC00008841 and UMG-LW00942820 - UMG-LW00942875.

5. Demand Study: Of the 1,625 requests for the 1,700 files that I classified as confirmed infringing, highly likely infringing, noninfringing, or a part of LimeWire, 1,606 were for a confirmed infringing or highly likely infringing file. Only 19 of these requests were for a noninfringing file or a part of LimeWire. See Exhibit A (spreadsheet listing the number of requests for each file considered).

II. DESCRIPTION OF ANALYSIS

6. I coordinated an analysis to determine the character of the files collected using the LimeWire client in accord with Dr. Waterman's protocol. Based on that analysis, I provided the classifications for the purposes of the Demand Study.

The Making Available Study

7. After certain illegal and/or malicious content and duplicate files captured from the same user had been removed, my team and I began the process of reviewing the first 1,800 files in the dataset collected using the LimeWire client and randomized in accord with Dr. Waterman's protocol. See RC00008842.

8. Under my supervision, my team and I reviewed the files and attempted to identify them and to determine the ownership, copyright and authorization status for each file.

9. First, under my supervision, each file in the database was scanned by RepliCheck, a copyright identification service created by Audible Magic. RepliCheck checked each file against a database of audio fingerprints of sound recordings. Upon identification of a sound recording, RepliCheck reported the song title, performing artist and releasing label information. Under my supervision, my team verified these results.

10. Files that could not be identified by RepliCheck were further analyzed manually to determine the identity of the file and its owner.

11. Identified files that were confirmed by one of the Record Companies¹ to be owned or exclusively distributed in the United States by them or by one of their respective affiliates and not authorized for free distribution through LimeWire were classified as "Confirmed Infringing."

12. With regard to identified files owned by entities other than Record Companies, further investigation was done to determine whether they were authorized for free distribution.

13. After a thorough investigation and analysis, each of the 1,800 files was assigned one of the following categories:

- "Confirmed infringing," meaning that the file was confirmed by a Record Company not to be authorized for free distribution;
- "Highly Likely infringing," meaning that it was highly likely that the file was not authorized for free distribution;
- "Highly Likely noninfringing," meaning that it was highly likely that the file was in the public domain or authorized for free distribution;
- "Unknowable," meaning that the file could not be identified or its authorization status could not fairly be determined;
- "Spam/Spoof," meaning that the file appeared to have been deliberately labeled so as to mislead users to believe it contained particular content, when it did not in fact contain that content but, instead, (i) served another commercial purpose (spam); or (ii) had characteristics indicative of having been made available for download through LimeWire by a company engaged in anti-piracy operations (spoof);
- "Pornography," meaning that the file was plainly pornographic; or
- "Parts of LimeWire," meaning that the file was a component of the LimeWire client itself.

14. After the files were classified, files in the spam/spoof and pornography categories were removed from the sample. This left 1,774 files.

15. As a result of the above analysis, we determined that 1,644 (or 92.7%) of the files were either confirmed infringing or highly likely infringing. 774 files (or 43.6%) were confirmed infringing by the Record Companies, and an additional 870 files (or 49.0%) were highly likely infringing.

16. Only 56 (or 3.2%) of the 1,774 files obtained through the LimeWire client appear to consist of public domain material, material authorized for free distribution, or part of the LimeWire client. 18 of those files are part of the LimeWire client.

17. As for the remaining 74 files, we were unable to determine the identity of the file and/or its authorization status. These unknowable files constitute 4.2% of the 1,774.

The Demand Study

18. Our analysis revealed that 1,606 (or 98.8%) of the download requests were for confirmed or highly likely infringing files. Of these, 1,082 requests (or 66.6%) were for files confirmed to be infringing by the Record Companies. 524 requests (or 32.2%) were for highly likely infringing files. Only 19 (or 1.2%) of the download requests were for highly likely noninfringing files.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.
