In an interesting marketing technique, I got a cool email from the people producing The Big Heat because they found my blog had a mention of the movie in it. They actually sent me a bunch of pictures from the movie, mostly cool fight scenes, and direct links to some of the video podcast confessionals entries by Jack Black, and told me "Please feel free to feature them on your site." And so I will. I feel very free. Thank you very much. Have I finally sold out to the Big Heat used Machine? I sure hope so! Here are some of my favorites. I dubbed them all over at http://www.updraft.com also. I'm not posting the podcast things, because the links he sent me were not to my favorite ones. Maybe I'll modify them and see if they link to some others later on.

Is that a me and of me not?

Shut. Bitch. Maybe I should consider using

You Can't Make It Up - You Better Watch It - Two Times

<http://youcantmakethisup.blogspot.com/2006/06/you-better-watch-it-two-times.html>

With Nacho Libre coming out this Friday, my friend Alyson e-mailed me to reminisce about the famous Jbles interview, which we hadn't seen in years. But thanks to George Jetson and all of his wacky technology (I literally took a shower on a conveyor belt this morning, go figure), THE JACK BLACK INTERVIEW IS ON YOUTUBE! So, of course, it is my duty to pass it along.

Enjoy.

Jack Black Serves Up 'Nacho Libre'
Veteran comic had to learn to wrestle and produce on his new film

By Daniel Fierberg June 13 2006

There are probably actors who are morning people. Jack Black, however, is not.

"Sorry, I just woke up," Black apologizes. "Today was one of those times where you wake up and ... like sometimes I wake up and I'll be tired and I'll be like, 'Ahhh, I was gonna get up anyway. It's all right.' But today was not one of those days. Today was like, 'Dooohhh, I would definitely sleep seven more hours if I didn't have to get up and go things. Ahhh.' It was actual physical and emotional stress."

It is, in fact, 8 a.m. on a Friday morning and Black isn't the only one yawning to his credit, the "King Kong" star may be groggy, but he's still able to stir up the necessary enthusiasm for his new film, "Nacho Libre." In the film, directed by Jared Hess ("Napoleon Dynamite"), Black plays Nacho, a cook at a monastery who dreams of the wealth and fame that come from being a Lucha Libre wrestler.

• Get Showtimes

"I did a lot of wrestling preparation," Black says. "I had a real instructor who taught me all the moves. His name was Tom and he didn't reveal his secret wrestling identity to me, and he said that I was a natural. I don't know if he was trying to bump up my confidence, but I believed him."
