Re: Strikes against user accounts

Franck,

To make the right call on this, it would be very helpful to understand how often this happens. I do somewhat monitor the daily reports, but they don't really make the trends obvious. Can you provide any stats on how many strikes have resulted from this code change since it went live 2 weeks ago? It seems that audio only claims would go into the audioswap flow, without causing strikes, and that video fingerprinting will also avoid issuing account strikes, so activity here is probably low. I'd be more inclined to prioritize this up the list if and when it starts really affecting our users.

As for implementation, I think it makes more sense to split the "block" claim into two: "block" or "block and strike."

Anyway, a little more data would be helpful, if not too hard to supply.

- Hi guys

I never heard back from you on this email ... but then just read this in the product report: "With v.21 release, takedowns made by partners in CYC tools are now properly connected to the repeat infringer policy. For those managing partners, you can now release CYC access with caveats about the missing 3 strikes policy."

This is actually fantastic news as it comes to a deal we're putting together with Lions Gate. However, I understand that this policy may change in the future. If that's the case, can we pls ensure that the partner can switch strikes count on/off (again: only on the CYC tool, not direct DMCA takedowns)? So no action required ... just putting something on your radar :) Thanks! [p] Philip Inghelbrecht Strategic Partner Development Google Inc Dir > Cel > >
