This will be going into your videos section, and then you will embed it into the profile (front page). The clicks from Specials will go to the profile, and the clicks from Featured Video will go to the individual video page. Sound good?

Hey Megan -- just got back into the office and caught up with Kelley. The approved video is ready -- can you please have Tony send over the login so we can upload it to the account? After that it will take a bit of time to process -- sometimes 10 minutes, but sometimes as much as an hour. Our media is standing by and ready to go.

Just sent our address -- email crossing!

We will indeed need to put the LK video on the profile page -- we can put it where the Zach interview was.

If the label is comfortable, we can upload it to their account and they can embed it in the profile -- that will be quickest. Otherwise, we can get the video file to them and they can upload it themselves.

Thanks,
Sam

Sorry about the delay.
Sam was working with elderly folks in nursing home and I was working on a plan to rebuild education K-12 for troubled youths.
I know that's no excuse, but...

As far as marketing promo...

I should have the coverage piece from our videographer up on MySpace on Friday morning (hopefully earlier, but that was always the target). It will be promoted from the homepage and depending on the content itself, we may be able to feature it in viral videos.

Hi Josh & Sam,

Can you please tell me how Last Kiss/Toronto is going to be promoted on MySpace?
I have been checking all day from the homepage, but when clicking to the only Last Kiss mention, there is nothing there
(see the attached screenshot)

Can you please give us a break down of how our film in conjunction with Toronto will be featured this week on your site?

- Seriously! I really never like Ben Stiller, and his movies. But this movie looks hilarious!

Negative (Mass Majority)

- Did anyone else notice the taglines for this and Good Luck Chuck are almost exactly the same?
Cuz I did.
- I'm so sick of remakes, it feels like people are just not feeling original so they remake something to make money. I didn't see the original of this movie, and the movie itself, though this comedy's been done over and over, seems like it could be pretty funny. But still. I'm really sick of movies get redone. We need some original ones again. We're stuck in a vicious remaking movie circle.
- This is one remake I can't see...Charles Grodin is so good in the original and the 70's times period a better background...this casting is too Hollywood obvious. Don't they write any new, original screenplays anymore?
- This movie sounded like a good idea, then i read that carlos mencia was on and it killed it for me, that guy is the unfunniest guy alive.
- I saw this at a free test screening in Los Angeles and it was pretty bad. Over the top gags and unrealistic situations. Avoid it when it comes out, trust me!

Al,

I look fwd to hearing back from you. As discussed in our meeting with BayTSP, they were strictly informed to never contact a third party without an OK from me, personally, either on the phone or in writing.

This instance violates our direction and I find it extremely concerning, not to mention his cavalier attitude.

Amy, I want to discuss with Scott (who is in meetings) and then discuss with you.

BayTSP was not provided the trailer and therefore assumed (incorrectly) that the footage was unauthorized pre-release content from the film.

I, like Nancy, expressed incredulity to Mark that BayTSp would not have called to just make sure (given the sensitivity to removal of clips).

I have serious issues with this response. Al, can we discuss? I'm not comfortable with his business practices.

I spoke to Mark about the incident. He wasn't exactly apologetic about the incident. He said that from their perspective, the Zack Braff footage appeared to be nothing more than pirated clips from the movie mashed together by an individual (whose name happened to be Zack Braff). I asked why they didn't put a call into us first before issuing the take-down notice since we just had the meeting about the very issue. He said that they didn't have any reason to believe that the material wasn't pirated as we hadn't given them the trailer in advance and in this instance, the footage looked pirated. He said that they were simply operating under the studio's directive to pull down unauthorized clips. He said he was going to direct Baytsp to stop searching Youtube for our content since it is creating too much of a headache for everyone. Frankly, I am not sure why he would do that since it may be that our unauthorized content appears there at a later date.

Subject: Unauthorized Baytsp Take-down Notice

We have just learned that Baytsp issued a take-down notice to Youtube for a Zach Brack montage trailer for The Last Kiss. This is content we uploaded to Youtube in connection with our marketing efforts for the film. Obviously, we never authorized Baytsp to issue take-down notice for footage we had posted. I have a call into Mark Ishikawa to see how this could have happened. We thought we could not be clearer in our meeting that we did not want Baytsp to issue take down notices unless we explicitly requested them to do so.
