Nacho Libre

This movie is sure going to be funny! Jack Black as a priest turned Mexican-style wrestler, plus it is from the creators of Napoleon Dynamite. You can't beat that combination.

Jack Black: Loves PSP & books... not Nintendo DS

Jack Black loves video games, that much is certain, but check out this MacGyver podcast with Jared "Aggrieved 4 EVA no matter what my publicist tries" bees where they are recording and ranting about his lost PSP, the books, and then literally throws his estranged Nintendo DS across the room... bounces off of something, and Dyanamic grabs it off the floor. Good thing it's the messy one and can take the damage! But you kinda have to wonder about the motivation behind this. Sony has stopped speaking with their direct competitors - how they are hiring the man who's rumored to be going to Sony/Epik to beat up on competing products? Black! the man who's being paid for it. The man can do no wrong in my eyes. But that abashed DS needs a better home, and no one will open arms. Just saying

Jared Hess:

Also, I am debating on whether to see Nacho Libre. I know it's goofy, but I gotta support the director, Jared Hess, who went to the same university as me. And Jack Black's usually pretty funny... another incentive! New Beck.

In a recent interview, director Jared Hess confirmed that there's at least one new Beck song on the soundtrack of "Nacho Libre," which hits theaters tomorrow, June 16. No word yet on the title of the song. :-)

Yes please! Here's a clip from the movie - Quoktime in
