Re: Warner Bros. Entertainment, Inc. et. al. v. RDR Books, 07 Cv. 9667 (RPP)

Dear Judge Patterson:

Yesterday Your Honor directed the plaintiffs in this case to produce their new exhibits to my offices by this morning. This morning plaintiffs provided me with 188 pages of new charts, making detailed comparisons between the book defendant hopes to publish (The Lexicon) and the Potter novels. These charts are extremely detailed – it is now three hours since I have received them, and I am not even close to fully reading them.

Defendant intends to move in limine for the exclusion of these charts, which include a volume of material impossible for us to digest over the next few days, and concern (with one exception) issues and materials that have been in the case since the end of October. However, the deadline for such motions is tonight – by which time I may not even have been able to provide the materials to my co-counsel. (Plaintiffs have stated that they will email me these charts later today, so that I can share them with my co-counsel and our witnesses, but it may be the end of the day before I can do so). I therefore ask Your Honor to extend by one day – until tomorrow, March 10, 2008 – the deadline for moving in limine.

I attach to this fax a page from one of the charts to show the flavor of the material I have received.

Sincerely yours,

David S. Hammer
 Attorney for Defendant RDR Books
