Restraining Order placed on Ultimate, Signature Stars, UD Baseball!

Anyone else heard anything about this. My wholesaler(a very large company) told me they were not aloud to sell any of the latest UD baseball products anymore until this lawsuit is settled. Enjoy all these Griffey and Jeter on card autos because you may not see that in the near future? I personally think they should put a restraining order on TOPPS STERLING!! What a joke! Topps previewed a Case and pulled a Richard Nixon cut and my hardworking customers pull Dan Quisenberry and James Ives??? who???? cut sigs that look like Tri-Star Signa Cut cards.

In all honesty, I think a "Cease and Desist" should be issued to upper deck.

They continually do dishonest and criminal activity that is killing this hobby. They care for no one but themselves, and it's clearly evident. I think the authorities should step in and not let them carry on in business because they aren't going to stop cheating people.

Looking for any rare Sportkings cards. I'm buying if the price is right.

As far as I know there is no official cease and desist order, MLB simply requested wholesalers to stop. Nothing legally binding.

I was told they would not be shipping the UD series 1 baseball, so I went elsewhere and got some shipped out before they knew about it.

I find it hard believe someone would knock Ultimate Collection, it has brought several high end baseball buyers back in to my store this week. They have ALL left happy! That's what counts.

Maybe if UD had cared about their customers (high-end or otherwise) when they actually had the license, they wouldn't be in this situation. One semi-decent product doesn't make up for years of incompetence.

Doesn't matter if they break the law, and Upper Deck is seemingly looking for ways to break it.

That's too bad you can't get the ultimate, great product. On card autos, all HOF or quality players, most patch cards are amazing to unreal, not many redemptions. Makes sportkings look like a joke.

still searching for BB 2005 ultimate signatures decades autos, mostly numbered ones.

Unfortunately, this may be the key word

The only joke is on upper deck customers. SK would never stoop to the levels of upper deck.

To quote your qualities you listed above:

- "on-card autos"...SK has 100% on-card autos.
- "all HOF or quality players"...Those are the only types of sports figures SK includes. The best of the best.
- "most patch cards are amazing to unreal"...I haven't seen them all, but SK does a great job in this category WITHOUT violating any contracts, licenses or laws.
- "not many redemptions"...SK has ZERO redemptions for cards that should have made it into the product. Upper deck has not and will not compete with SK in this regard. Talk about a joke!

Do you have any more uninformed comments you'd like to make?

Restraining Order?

A new rumor has just come out on the Blowout Cards Forum.
 Supposedly, a restraining order has been place on all new Upper Deck
 Baseball products related to an infringement on Major League Baseball Properties and Topps exclusive license on the trademarks.

Anyone know more about this?

Has MLBP filed a cease and desist order or have they only, so far,
asked wholesalers to stop selling the product?

As you may know, the newly release 2009 Upper Deck Ultimate includes some cards with photos that clearly show team emblems.
 This would seem to be in violation of the exclusive license signed between MLBP and Topps. See some examples below.
