G. Segura

MS. HENRY: Objection to form.

A. The term significant is a very squishy term. Do they have resources? Yes. Do they expend those resources? Certainly. Are their resources sufficient to the needs of the group to defend their basic interests? That's a different question. Are those resources -- let's see what am I looking for -- comparable to the resources that are arrayed against them? That's a different question.

So taking a more narrow response to your question, gays and lesbians do expend financial resources in their own defense. Those resources have repeatedly proven insufficient to protect their basic interests because the resources arrayed against them are far superior.

Q. Have you studied how much money gay and lesbian advocacy groups have spent on political lobbying?

A. Not specifically. I have not summed up their annual budgets.

Q. If you could turn to paragraph 13,

1 G. Segura

2 page 5, you write "Political power refers to a 3 person's or group's demonstrated ability to 4 extract favorable or prevent unfavorable 5 policy outcomes from the political system."

6 What do you mean by the use of 7 extract in that sentence?

8 A. We want to look at two aspects of a 9 policy outcome. The first aspect is whether 10 or not that policy outcome is consistent with 11 the preferences of the group. The second is 12 whether or not the group themselves are in the 13 position to make that policy outcome happen or 14 if the policy outcome was simply the 15 happenstance of political conditions or a 16 meeting of the minds or an agreement of others 17 who agree with their position.

18 Q. What is the difference between, I 19 think political happenstance is the term you 20 used, and actual extraction of political 21 benefit?

22 A. I think the difference is best 23 illustrated in the following way: If the 24 desirable outcome is not achieved, are gays 25 and lesbians in the political position to more access to the Republican party than the Democratic party.

Would you say that they have limited access to the political process?

MS. HENRY: Objection.

A. So I do not present myself as an expert on pro-life politics. That notwithstanding, I would actually take issue with the supposition.

There is a sizable contingent of quote-unquote pro-life Democrats in the United States Congress. One former Congressman, Bart Stupak actually held up passage of the comprehensive healthcare reform legislation precisely over the issue of abortion. That is, a Democratic legislator held the President's signature policy goal hostage for months over the issue of abortion.

So the idea that pro-lifers only have sympathy in one party I think is actually misrepresenting the facts.

Q. How is what you write there in paragraph 32 in that final sentence different from the normal give and take of politics?

1 G. Segura

2 MS. KAPLAN: Objection to form.

3 A. Let's think about a variety of groups 4 who contest for power in the political system.
5 When we think about businesses and the 6 financial sector, both parties seek the 7 support of businesses. This is a group that 8 we normally think of as associated with the 9 Republicans but not exclusively, and certainly 10 the President has made no secret of his effort 11 to keep Wall Street financial folks on board 12 with the Democratic party agenda. The 13 Democratic party would describe itself as 14 probusiness, even though obviously the 15 Republicans disagree. There is a case of both 16 sides trying to lure a group.

17 The same might be true for 18 Evangelical Christians, even though 19 Evangelical Christians are overwhelming
20 identified with the Republican party, 21 President Obama appeared at Saddleback Church 22 during the campaign, had Rick Warren give the 23 invocation at his inauguration, has made 24 frequent and repeated overtures to try to 25 bring some number of Evangelical Christians

1 G. Segura

2 whose policy preferences might not be quite as 3 conservative as others into the Democratic 4 fold. Both sides seek their votes.

5 Another example might be police
6 unions or all sorts of peace officer
7 associations. Police unions tend to prefer 8 law and order sorts of policies from 9 Republicans, but they tend to prefer the 10 fiscal policies and public expenditure
11 policies of Democrats, and also, by the way, 12 the gun control policies of Democrats. So 13 both Democrats and Republicans seek the 14 support of police unions.

15 That is the rough and tumble of 16 politics, where one group has their support 17 sought from one political party and the other 18 tries to go in there and peel some away or 19 create an alternative narrative to get the 20 group to switch sides. That's what I think of 21 as the rough and tumble of politics.

22 In the case of gay men and lesbians,
23 there is a political party who, by practice 24 and by platform, is affirmatively
25 disinterested in their issues. That literally

1 G. Segura

2 opposes employment nondiscrimination, opposes 3 adoption rights, opposes same-sex marriage 4 equality, opposes service in the military.
5 Opposes essentially every element of equality 6 that gays and lesbians seek.

7 So when gays and lesbian are seeking 8 legislative redress, there is the occasional 9 Republican that they might wish to go to. But 10 by and large, they really only have one party.
11 That sort of party capture is really 12 debilitating to the political power of a 13 group. And I would give you an example 14 outside of gays and lesbians which I think 15 illustrates my point. I think that in recent 16 years, though certainly not in the last year, 17 but in recent years, I think Latinos have been 18 advantaged vis-a-vis African-Americans because 19 African-Americans split 95 to 5 for the 20 Democratic party; whereas, Latinos are about a 21 two-thirds, one-third. And Republicans 22 believe that if they can get up to about 40 23 percent of the Latino vote, then that would 24 make them more competitive and they can win 25 elections. What this means is that at least

1 G. Segura

2 I can't think of a group that has to 3 regularly face legislative and electoral 4 challenges to even the simplest effort at 5 securing protection from social hostility, 6 whether that be valid initiatives to overturn 7 gay rights ordinances that protect employment 8 discrimination, or whether that be the 9 same-sex marriage fight or other issues. So, 10 as I have testified earlier, there is no group 11 that has faced these ballot initiatives or 12 public referendum more frequently than gay men 13 and lesbians. Those things together I think 14 constitute a pretty extreme disadvantage.

15 Q. Earlier you talked about the 16 continuum of political power.

17 Is there a way to determine the 18 dividing line between politically powerful and 19 politically powerless?

20 A. The shorts answer is that the 21 dividing line would be contingent, and I 22 believe this was like one of your first 23 questions when you asked me what is the 50 24 percent mark or what is the threshold or 25 whatever.

question. If you ask me a specific question,
I may have to read the section.

Q. Let me stipulate that this is a letter that was written to President Barack Obama lamenting the fact that his administration was defending DOMA.

MS. KAPLAN: Did you get this off a website? How did you get this?

MR. DUGAN: I got it from Chris Bartolmucci. I presume he got it from a website. I can fill in that gap.

MS. KAPLAN: If you can just let me know.

MR. DUGAN: Sure.

Q. This letter was written to President Obama June 2009. Sometime thereafter, the President and the Attorney General determined that they believe DOMA to be unconstitutional.

Could this be evidence of politically effective power?

MS. KAPLAN: Objection to form.
You can answer.

A. It could, but I am not buying it.

First of all, this letter was written almost two years before the administration changed its policy on DOMA, so maybe in the neighborhood of 21 months.

Second, the President of the United States receives literally tens of thousands of letters a day. He probably receives hundreds of letters a day from leaders of large organizations. So that a letter precedes a policy change would require me to assume that the order of, the temporal order of the events is causal, and I have no reason to believe that. I need a little bit more than a letter.

Q. Fair enough.

MR. DUGAN: Mark this as Exhibit 6.

I will represent that this was taken from the White House website.

(Defendant's Exhibit 6, excerpt from White House website, marked for identification.)

Q. What is this Exhibit 6, Dr. Segura?

MS. KAPLAN: Objection to the form and foundation.

If you know.

A. Based on my observation it appears to
