Henry Farkas As a physician, I should say something conducive to public health here, but, frankly, if I'm ever in one of your cities, I'm probably going to stop in for a burger. This is NOT an endorsement for health. Anyone coming here should probably take a double dose of their cholesterol medication after eating.

Rachael Renee Grove Heart Attack Grill in Chandler, Arizona, is the country's most perilous pig out. Its menu is a killer catalog of the greasiest, fattiest foods featuring one staple ingredient: lard. The Quadruple Bypass is the menu's aptly named deadliest meal: 2 pounds of ground beef soaked in lard and served with all the fatty fixings, including killer french fries. The restaurant's ER-themed décor is a playful reminder that its menu is serious...like a heart attack.
