Find Free eBooks

Most eBook titles cost between $6 and $15, significantly cheaper than the $25 to $30 you pay for the brand-new hardcover treeware versions. But the eBookstore isn't all about the money, all the time. It offers more than a hundred eBooks on its virtual shelves, absolutely free.

To find this Treasure Chest of Free Literature, tap the Featured button at the bottom of the eBooks screen and flick down to the Quick Links section. Tap the Free Books link (circled). All the free titles are listed here. Tap a cover and get the description box to read the synopsis and find out what other people think of the book. Tap the Get Book button to download it; you can also get a sample, but the book itself is free, so just go for it.

Most of these free titles tend to be classic works of literature that have fallen out of copyright and into the public domain. In fact, you may have read some of them in school (or at least the Cliffs Notes guides). The offerings include Middlemarch by George Eliot, The Art of War by Sun Tzu, Washington Square by Henry James, The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes by Arthur Conan Doyle and many of Shakespeare's plays.

You can also download Ulysses by James Joyce. Even though the iPad weighs a pound and a half, it's still probably lighter than paperback copies of this epic Irish novel of more than 700 old-fashioned printed pages.

Free books aren't the fanciest ones on the shelf—on the outside, anyway. But while you don't get colorfully designed mini book covers (they all sort of look like they're covered in plain brown wrappers), you sure can't beat the price.
