J. Boylston Buys Preiss Assets

by Jim Milliot, PW Daily -- Publishers Weekly, 12/14/2006 2:00:00 AM

J. Boylston & Company, Publishers has acquired the assets of the various companies and imprints owned by the late Byron Preiss. Boylston, owned by John Colby and home to the Brick Tower Press imprint, paid $125,000 for the assets, which include more than 500 titles published under the iBooks, Milk & Cookies Press and Byron Preiss Visual Publications names. The Preiss properties were put into Chapter 7 bankruptcy earlier this year.

Colby plans to release 11 books under the iBooks imprint in 2007—all titles drawn from books that had been delayed because of the bankruptcy proceedings. He also plans to add new titles to the Milk & Cookies line and will continue to operate the BPVP packaging operation. As part of the acquisition, Colby will continue to use PGW as the distributor for the former Preiss products and he will move Brick Tower's titles to PGW as well.

I would love to see Betancourt's next Amber series book. The last one was a cliffhanger.
