Hi again, its been a while since my last post. We were very busy readying Verbol VoiceChat for Wave and we reached the Wave extensions gallery the first week of last August when Google announced that Wave would be shut down. So in the spirit of try try again we are now readying our independently hosted Verbol voice using Google gadgets and starting to preview it. Brian.

Now at verbol.com

We are now using the demo.verbol.com for our demo voice system and in process of converting our web pages to reflect this. Our voice system uses Verbol Web Server to store information created by Voicechat.

Wave

We have become very caught up with Google Wave and have a link to our first public wave with VoiceChat and some blog links at demo.verbol.com.

If you have a wave account you can also share a wave with me and I can add our voicechat gadget to the wave so we have a time independent voice conversation.

So much has happened since our last post. I will follow up with a catch up on the news but now, a demo:-

Demo

I am demonstrating a preview of the ibook voice system V3.0 at voice.ibook.com. If you go there and enter br, you reach my ibook identity which tells you how to call me and leave voicechat messages in my daily journal.

Meet you there. Brian.

NB. Please be aware the demo is open without password restriction though not yet publicised. We have licencing and patents so I am OK with this from a technology point of view. More on how to use the system is at Brian Reynolds ibook identity and this tells you how to call or Skype me free of charge. Please do so if it is not obvious how to proceed.

I am looking for help to take this further so we can enable voice to be as ubiquitous as text, see Invitation.

Marketing

I just used our voicechat demo to record my thoughts on network marketing and related subjects stimulated by Ray's question, "Have you thought of using a viral marketing approach?" They are playable from my journal page and the red phone link starting at message 2774 should play them to you through your browser and allow you to reply at any point with your thoughts.

Skype case now resolved so this is here solely for interest

I am working on an open letter to Skype and its founders and owners and my thinking relates to the open cooperative approach I am describing in my voice notes as Family Systems' direct market model for Personal Systems (as opposed to our OEM model for selling add-on features to web services companies which I also describe).

In this case I am considering suggesting that Skype support a cooperative add-on to supplement the Joltid proprietary one so the customer can choose and having the choice allows Skype to revert in reasonable stages to the terms of its agreement with Joltid. If you have any feedback please contact me via the ibook voice system described above or email br@ibook.com.

Interesting background, Computerworld comment, Skype at Wikipedia.

A few things have happened recently.

You may have seen www.brianreynolds.biz and some of the linked pages. Quite a bit has been added to the Voicechat page including an outline of the opportunity to participate now.

I have collected together various design notes into a draft Verbol page which I am in process of editing. The notes were written separately as thoughts occurred to me and I have done some initial editing so they are loosely grouped and have a contents list for navigation so they are OK for briefing and talking over the ideas. I am thinking about implementing Verbol in Javascript and would like to bounce some ideas around with a Javascript expert.

A COOPYtunities page has been started, linked to from Invitation which introduces COOPY and some opportunities to cooperate. Some rationalisation with the other pages is needed, but it should give an idea.

I added more songs to uplay2 and created four song pages in a format I am putting forward for feedback. These include Youtube videos of performances with the uplay2 prompts embedded in lyrics displayed as subtitles. I have been told these are more fun to play along to than games as you are making music with a real instrument. These are in effect a prototype of the Family Systems play-along invention and I am looking for cooperation in implementing it further.

Following the first play-along U.S. Patent 7423214 which was issued in Sept 2008, we have filed two further Playalong continuation patent applications one of which covers the prototype used in Uplay2. We are also working on a response to the examiner's recent rejection of the first Web Collaboration patent filing which he has based on a combination of two separate prior inventions.

If you are interested in contributing, please email me br@brianreynolds.biz and let me know whether you Skype or are available by phone.

Creative Commons

Today I joined CCNetwork  and sent the following open letter to the Creative Commons cc-info email list.

Open letter to Creative Commons from Brian Reynolds.

I endorse open source and Creative Commons and am in process of creating a cooperative commercial license COOPYshare implemented as CC+COOPY on www.coopy.biz.

Contributors to a work offer a CC license for non-commercial use and adopt Cooperative Principles for fair sharing of revenue earned from commercial use. I am using CC+COOPY for musical enhancements at www.uplay2.org and inventions at www.ibook.com.

This is at a preview stage and I would appreciate your feedback at br@coopy.biz. Thanks and respect to all commoners.
