ORDER GRANTING REQUEST FOR
PRO BONO COUNSEL

PHILIP M. HALPERN, United States District Judge:

Plaintiff has filed an Application for the Court to Request Counsel. For the following reasons, Plaintiff's application is granted

LEGAL STANDARD

The in forma pauperis statute provides that the courts “may request an attorney to represent any person unable to afford counsel.” 28 U.S.C. § 1915(e)(1). Unlike in criminal cases, in civil cases, there is no requirement that courts supply indigent litigants with counsel. Hodge v. Police Officers, 802 F.2d 58, 60 (2d Cir. 1986). Instead, the courts have “broad discretion” when deciding whether to grant an indigent litigant’s request for representation. Id. Even if a court does believe that a litigant should have a lawyer, under the in forma pauperis statute, a court has no authority to “appoint” counsel, but instead, may only “request” that an attorney volunteer to represent a litigant. Mallard v. U.S. Dist. Court for the S. Dist. of Iowa, 490 U.S. 296, 301–310 (1989). Moreover, courts do not have funds to pay counsel in civil matters. Courts must therefore grant applications for counsel sparingly, and with reference to public benefit, in order to preserve the “precious commodity” of volunteer-lawyer time for those litigants whose causes are truly deserving. Cooper v. A. Sargenti Co., Inc., 877 F.2d 170, 172-73 (2d Cir. 1989).

In Hodge, the Second Circuit set forth the factors a court should consider in deciding whether to grant a litigant's request for counsel. 802 F.2d at 61-62. Of course, the litigant must first demonstrate that he or she is indigent, see Terminate Control Corp. v. Horowitz, 28 F.3d 1335, 1341 (2d Cir. 1994), for example, by successfully applying for leave to proceed in forma pauperis. The court must then consider whether the litigant's claim "seems likely to be of substance" – "a requirement that must be taken seriously." Id. at 60–61. If these threshold requirements are met, the court must next consider such factors as:

the indigent's ability to investigate the crucial facts, whether conflicting evidence implicating the need for cross-examination will be the major proof presented to the fact finder, the indigent's ability to present the case, the complexity of the legal issues[,] and any special reason in that case why appointment of counsel would be more likely to lead to a just determination.

Id.; see also Cooper, 877 F.2d at 172 (listing factors courts should consider, including litigant's efforts to obtain counsel). In considering these factors, district courts should neither apply bright-line rules nor automatically deny the request for counsel until the application has survived a dispositive motion. See Hendricks v. Coughlin, 114 F.3d 390, 392-93 (2d Cir. 1997). Rather, each application must be decided on its own facts. See Hodge, 802 F.2d at 61.

DISCUSSION

Plaintiff filed a Request to Proceed in Forma Pauperis (IFP), which the Court granted. (See Order dated November 3, 2017, ECF No. 4.) When Plaintiff filed his Application for the Court to Request Counsel, Plaintiff affirmed that his financial status had not changed. (See Application for the Court to Request Counsel, ECF No. 115.) Plaintiff therefore qualifies as indigent.

In the complaint, Plaintiff asserts a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, alleging that he has been confined in involuntary protective custody for an extended period of time without meaningful review in violation of his due process rights. The Court finds that Plaintiff's claim is "likely to be of substance." Hodge, 802 F.2d 61-62. Plaintiff has advanced this case past a motion to dismiss, and it is now ready for trial. At trial, Plaintiff will need to cross-examine witnesses and otherwise present evidence to a jury. Although Plaintiff's case is not especially complex, a lawyer will be better positioned than Plaintiff, who lacks a legal education and is currently incarcerated, to prepare for and present this case at trial. Therefore, the Court concludes that, in this case, representation would "lead to a quicker and more just result by sharpening the issues and shaping examination." Hodge, 802 F.2d at 61.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiff's Application for the Court to Request Counsel is granted.

The Court certifies under 28 U.S.C. § 1915(a)(3) that any appeal from this Order would not be taken in good faith and therefore IFP status is denied for the purpose of an appeal. See Coppedge v. United States, 369 U.S. 438, 444-45 (1962).

The Clerk of the Court is respectfully directed to terminate the motion sequence pending at Doc. 115.

SO ORDERED.
