ConnectU Litigation

24. In a prior unrelated litigation, ConnectU LLC v. Zuckerberg, et al., I testified at an evidentiary hearing in a federal court in Boston on June 22, 2006. The subject of that hearing was my domicile as of September 2, 2004, the date on which that lawsuit was filed.

25. As I explained at the hearing, I was born in White Plains, New York and raised in Dobbs Ferry, New York. I attended Harvard University as a freshman in 2002–03 and as a sophomore in 2003–04. On February 4, 2004, I launched Facebook, which at the time was called “Thefacebook.com,” as an online directory for students at Harvard; after only a few weeks, it had approximately 4,000 users. Students from other schools began asking that we launch at their schools, and by the end of the spring term in May 2004, we had launched at approximately 28 or 29 schools.

26. During the 2004 spring term, I decided to spend the summer in Palo Alto, California, to work on Facebook. I thought Palo Alto would be a good place to spend the summer, especially because of the many start-up companies located in Silicon Valley. I intended to return to Harvard at the end of the summer to start my junior year, and did not intend to remain in California, permanently or otherwise. At the end of the spring term in May 2004, I put my personal belongings in storage at Kirkland House at Harvard, because I was planning to return to school that fall.

27. From approximately mid-June 2004 to mid-September 2004, I subleased a furnished house in Palo Alto with friends. During that period, my friends and I worked to develop and expand Facebook. By the end of the summer, we were prepared to launch at more than 100 schools.

28. By August 2004, I decided to take a temporary leave of absence from Harvard and to stay in California temporarily to work on Facebook. I thought it would be difficult to balance my work with my academic studies at that particular juncture, but also believed that the website's growth would stabilize and I would be able to run it from Harvard. At that time, I intended to stay in California for only one or two terms, return to Harvard in the spring or fall of 2005, and complete my undergraduate degree. I did not intend to remain in California indefinitely.

29. During the next few months, Facebook grew rapidly. In late summer 2004, the company received an investment of $500,000 from Peter Thiel. By December 2004, Facebook had reached nearly one million active users. In 2005, Facebook received $12.7 million in funding from Accel Partners, grew to support more than 800 college networks, expanded to add high school and international school networks, and reached more than 5.5 million users.

30. Facebook's significant growth continued during the next few years. In 2006, Facebook raised $27.5 million from Greylock Partners, Meritech Capital Partners, and others, and reached over 12 million active users. In 2007, Facebook sold a $240 million equity stake to Microsoft, and reached over 50 million active users. In 2008, Facebook reached over 100 million active users, and in 2009, it reached over 350 million active users. As of July 21, 2010, Facebook had more than 500 million monthly active users. Facebook users spend over 700 billion minutes per month on Facebook, which is available in more than 70 languages.

31. In 2008, Facebook employed approximately 440 people. Today, Facebook employs approximately 1,600 people.

32. Although I cannot pinpoint the exact date, at some point prior to 2006, I decided not to return to Harvard University to complete my studies or to New York to live with my parents. Instead, because of Facebook's significant growth and success, I made the decision to remain permanently in California. California has been my permanent home ever since that time, and I intend to continue living and working here for the indefinite future.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed in Palo Alto, California on August 25, 2010.
