Thoughts?

Posted by Tyler on September 13, 2007  Comments\(1\)

I get this email from this person claiming to be a banker who wants to access money in an account he can't touch. Hmm. Should I pretend to be interested and string him along? Or should I just delete this message? Here it is:

My humble pleasure to write you this important letter since you have the same surname with my late customer which is suitable for this deal,I was able to get your contact through an international profile in my earnest searching for a reliable and trust worthy person that can handle this confidential transaction with me.

I am a top management staff in a bank here in Nigeria. I have been working in this bank since the year 2000.I have urgent and very confidential business proposition for you. In January 2002, A Gold Merchant (Mr. Elliot Winter) made a numbered-time (fixed) deposit for twelve calendar months in a Domiciliary Account in my Branch running into a very large sum of money. At the time of opening this account, he did not name a next of kin promising to do so in his next visit to Nigeria. He never came back and nobody heard from him. Upon maturity, I sent a routine notification of Account Status to his forwarding address but got no reply. In February 2005, we sent a reminder of same letter and finally we discovered that Mr. Elliot Winter died of heart failure.

After further investigation in Oct 2006, I found out that he did not leave a "WILL" and all attempts to trace his Next-of-kin were fruitless. I therefore made further investigation and discovered that the late Mr. Elliot Winter did not declare any Next-of-Kin in all his official documents, including his bank deposit Papers. This sum of money is still floating in our Bank and the interest is being rolled over with the principal sum at the end of each year. No one would come forward to claim it. According to the local Laws, at the expiration of 6 (six) years, the money will revert to the ownership of our bank if nobody applies to claim the funds.

Consequently upon the above, my request is that I would like you to stand in as the Next-of-kin to the late Mr. Elliot Winter since you have the same surname with him, I would document you in our records here as the next of kin to the man so that you can make claims to the deposit. With me here your claims will be approved without delay and the funds transferred to your nominated bank account. Though we need to discuss in detail as to our participation and modalities. Be assured that I am in charge and there will be no problem but I'll not fail to beg you to observe religiously the high level of secrecy required in this deal for us to succeed.

Please I await your urgent response.

Yours faithfully.

Mr. Obi Julius.

So basically, Work 7-3, School 4-5:15, Exercise, Study. So, where's the fun part of my day? Well, I spend 2 hours out of the 6 I should be sleeping playing Tourist Trophy: The best racing simulator ever. Check it out:

Oh, I also bought a Wii which is practically still boxed. Here's my Wii number: 1420 1281 6502 7443
