activities will be required; however, the court declines in its discretion to mandate them immediately following the conference August 15, 2013. Defendants' motion seeking court ordered mediation is denied. At said conference, among other things, the court will engage the parties attending about settlement timing and techniques which may be considered in aid to settlement efforts, including utility of a special master.

This matter also comes before the court on certain defendants' motion to compel attendance of the United States Environmental Protection Agency ("EPA") at the pending conference.² The court directed the EPA to respond, which response informs it will consider participating in court-sponsored mediation but that it cannot be compelled so to do. It argues against any mandatory duty to offer de minimis settlements at the Ward site unless "practicable and in the public interest." CERCLA Section 122(g)(1). The EPA also discloses settlement methodology, concluding that:

While the United States cannot be compelled to appear at the August 15, 2013 Status Conference nor be made to explain in court its decision regarding de minimis settlements, should the Court decide to sponsor settlement discussions in the future, EPA will consider attending those discussions voluntarily as it continues to seek a resolution of its claims, including obtaining a commitment of parties to perform the ongoing and future work at the Site.

court having noticed that it will be sponsoring some form of a required technique in aid to settlement efforts at a later date, which reasonably will be a topic of discussion at the pending conference, does encourage the EPA to send its representative, to inform as to its position concerning how those efforts may be made effective.

SO ORDERED, this the 12th day of August, 2013.
