"MY SPACE® ship MOBILE"

Donnell Mitchell returns to the newsstands to review the history of the "MY SPACE" mobile service. "2003 really will be the year of the spaceship," said British entrepreneur Sir Richard Branson.

"MY SPACE® ship Mobile Returns" says Donnell Mitchell

The Puff Daddy of Bail Bonds.

The Business of being Donnell Mitchell

by David W. Martin

Published April 12, 2003

Another hour has passed. Time to fire up "the spaceship".

Walter Novak

The world -- or at least West Third Street -- is Donnell Mitchell's.

Every weekday for the last six months, Donnell Mitchell's Ford Aerostar has idled on West Third Street across from the Justice Center. By order of the city, he moves the van every hour, sometimes only as far as the next parking meter.

More billboard than transportation, the van is sheathed in noisy advertisements for Mitchell's bail bond business. Its shell is a thin vinyl adhesive that features enlarged photographs of Mitchell standing arm in arm with Jennifer Lopez and turking behind Sean "Puff Daddy" Combs's shoulder. One of the slogans reads, "We keep the stars free."

"We just call it the spaceship," Mitchell says, toolpick in one hand, cell phone in the other. "We've taken up bail bonds one more notch."

Like espionage or performance art, the bail business attracts off-kilter characters. It's a hustler's game. Large men in porkpie hats and gold-rimmed sunglasses troll the Justice Center corridors. "Need a bond?" they ask passersby, as if scalping Tribe tickets. Perhaps the most flamboyant was the late Sylvester "Sonny" Wilcox, a former prizefighter who wrote bonds in the '60s and '70s. Wilcox drove a pink Cadillac, wore pink suits, and flashed a fist of diamond rings. "People were terrified of him," Presiding Cuyahoga County Court Judge Richard L. McMonagle says.

Though Mitchell prefers charm to intimidation, he may be the principal heir to this tradition of flash. The 29-year-old West Tech grad has an associate's degree in insurance from Cleveland State, but shows little interest in deskwork or actuarial tables. He's in the business of Donnell Mitchell. True to the word, it's mine spirit of hip-hop, he offers the services of private investigator, bodyguard, and casual promoter in addition to writing bonds. A few weeks ago, he and his partners wore orange jumpsuits to show their solidarity with the county's incarcerated. He has also shown a penchant -- if not a fondness -- for twacking the nose of the system.

"This young man is a master entrepreneur," says bondsmen Reggie Crosby, who sponsored Mitchell. People in the bail bond business aren't accustomed to this.

"I'm just trying to be part of the American dream," Mitchell says. Writing bonds may not be as glamorous as owning a nightclub or promoting musicians, but criminal justice is a steady, recession-proof industry that runs on cash. "This is a beautiful game," Mitchell says. "If you commit yourself to this game, you can make two, three thousand dollars a week. Everybody who comes into this building has a problem, and if you can help them, you make money."

Or, as Puff would say, "It's all about the Benjamin's." The van is Mitchell's trademark, it's especially ingenious, considering that bondsmen are forbidden from loitering in the Justice Center. They were kicked out in 1999 for creating an "atmosphere of violence, hostility, and tension" in the words of the court order. Judges and clerks wanted to remove a trace in the turf wars bondsmen fought for clients. "It's almost like treating them like kids, because they act like kids." McMonagle says. The battle ended in a haze of pepper spray.

So how, you ask, Mitchell moves his mobile advertisement to stay a step ahead of the law, he got the idea through his occasional work for Premiere Marketing, a Cleveland promotions company. He saw a similar van a record level used to tour artists and decided to put his wheels to work for him. "I need a 24-hour promotion for myself," Mitchell says of the $7,000 customization.

And once they get a gift card, teens are ready to spend. Sixty-two percent of teens say that they hold on to their gift cards for one month or less before using them. Only one in 10 (11 percent) says that they keep a gift card for more than two months before using it the first time.

When using gift cards, teens also spend more than the card's value. Eighty-nine percent of teens add some of their own money when making a purchase with a gift card.

Once they've depleted the funds on their card, some teens are going back for more. While still a growing trend, one in five teens has reloaded a gift card — on average with $24.

"Cards are being reloaded for future use and convenience," said Mitchell. "From a parent's perspective, it's a great way to control where your teen spends his or her money. From our young people's perspectives, it's a way to maintain financial freedom when making purchases — especially when they don't have their own credit or debit card yet."

Other key findings from the survey:

Among teens who have purchased gift cards, three-quarters (76 percent) have purchased cards for others. Two in five teens (42 percent) have purchased cards for themselves. Young men (46 percent) are more likely than young women (38 percent) to have purchased gift cards for personal use.

Gift card malls, a collection of various retailers' gift cards typically found in convenience or grocery stores, continue to gain acceptance. Forty-five percent (up from 29 percent in 2006) of teens say they have purchased a gift card at a gift card mall and 21 percent (up from 11 percent in 2006) say they prefer to buy them there.

If the gift card a teen wished to purchase was not available at a gift card mall, almost half of teens (40 percent) would have gone to the specific retail store to purchase a gift card. Two in five teens (42 percent) would have simply chosen to purchase a different gift card at the gift card mall.

Respondents report that approximately four in 10 gifts they receive (43 percent) are gift cards. On average, teens report that the gift cards they receive are loaded with $25 per card.

Teens surveyed reported spending an average of $101 yearly on gifts.

The survey was conducted online between June 29 – July 2, 2007 involving (527) 14 – 19 year-old students who plan to attend college or are currently attending their first year. They have also previously purchased or received a gift card.

Parents should, however, be aware that if their child is not a dependent, coverage for auto theft, fire and damage to a child's vehicle may not be included. Depending upon the insurance policy, home coverage may be limited and/or excluded. Exclusions may need to be added to a parent's home owners' policy.

CEO of Ohio providers of MY SPACE™ Bail Bonds & Insurance offered the following Driving Tips and FREE Bail Bonds Services to it's existing clients during the Holidays.

1. Get Online www.MySPACE.sr22.com - the new and safe drive tips website.

PHENOMENON LICENSING - Be on the lookout for people who are not licensed to drive. In the state of Ohio, you can be fined for driving a vehicle without a license. The CEO of Ohio providers of MY SPACE™ Bail Bonds & Insurance offers the following tips based on licensed driver's advice.

Before getting into the car, check the engine oil, maintenance, fluid levels, and tire pressure. If you notice anything wrong, get it fixed before you start driving. Also, check the tires and make sure they are properly inflated.

When you are driving, always wear your seat belt. If you are driving with a passenger, make sure they are wearing their seat belt as well. Also, don't drink and drive. If you are drinking, don't drive.

When you are driving, always use your turn signals. This will let other drivers know what you are doing and help you avoid accidents. Also, don't tailgate. Give people enough space around you.

1. Do NOT drink and drive. "In OHIO, the legal limit is .08%. However, if you have had a drink, do not drive home. You are always safer taking a taxi and getting your car in the morning," according to Mitchell.
2. Buckle up.
3. Pay attention.
4. Do not speed. Speed is deadly and causes many accidents.
5. Do not ignore stop signs and red lights. This is something so simple, but causes so many accidents. Stop when the light is red.
6. Avoid the blind spots of big rigs. "These are professional drivers and many of them are safe, but you need to give them ample room and make sure they can see you," Mitchell said. He suggested using your lights when you are near big rigs, even during the day.
7. Slow down at night.
8. Plan your trip. Make sure you know where you are going and you have a map or directions.
9. Read the rules of other states. If you are going to drive in another state, make sure you know their laws. Some states have differences and you need to be aware of these.
10. Avoid potential road rage situations. "It is not worth the risk. Drive on and let the other person be mad," Mitchell said.

After seeing thousands of accidents, Mr. Mitchell believes that following these tips, especially during this busy holiday season, will reduce the number of accidents and save lives. If you are involved in an accident, Mitchell has a list of things you must do after an accident that are essential to you before filing your claim.

As a Christmas reward to our loyal customers we will post any surety bail bonds for qualified customers up to $10,000.00 FREE OF CHARGE if they cannot make bail between the dates of December 24th and 26th.

c.1300, "an area, extent, expanse, lapse of time," aphetic of O.Fr. espace, from L. spatium "room, area, distance, stretch of time," of unknown origin. Astronomical sense of "stellar depths" is first recorded 1667 in "Paradise Lost."

"Space isn't remote at all. It's only an hour's drive away if your car could go straight upwards." [Sir Fred Hoyle, "London Observer," 1979]

Typographical sense is attested from 1676 (typewriter space bar is from 1888). Space age is attested from 1946; spacewalk is from 1965. Many compounds first appeared in science fiction and speculative writing, e.g. spaceship (1894, "Journey in Other Worlds"); spacesuit (1920); spacecraft (1930, "Scientific American"); space travel (1931); space station (1936, "Rockets Through Space"); spaceman (1942, "Thrilling Wonder Stories;" earlier it meant "journalist paid by the length of his copy," 1892). Spacious is attested from 1382.
