Top 3 Registry Cleaners

From the desk of Senior Tech Editor, Robert Upchurch.....Updated: July, 2009

Why Is My Computer Slow And Sluggish?

The reason that your PC computer is slow and not performing to the full capacity is one or more Windows Registry Errors. If you have ever uninstalled an application on your computer, chances are that it was not entirely uninstalled properly and has left entry keys on your Windows Registry. These entries can build up and cause your system's performance to become slow and unstable. Even if you have uninstalled applications properly, the Registry can become overloaded and some traces of old programs can hurt your system's performance. Have you ever deleted a program, downloaded new software or changed your PC settings? You have most likely done all of these things and they can all cause your registry to be filled with errors. The most common symptoms of Windows Registry Errors are system crashes, a slow response to input commands, system error messages, a slow internet connection and many more. All of these problems can turn your computer using experience into a nightmare. Fortunately, the nightmare can end today.
