AP Members and Subscribers

Governing Law

1. Only U.S. members and World Services subscribers of The Associated Press in good standing may have access to the AP Photo Archive under the terms described on this page.

2. AP members and subscribers who download or copy images from the AP Photo Archive are obtaining only a license to use the image(s) as further described below. The Associated Press and its licensors retain all ownership and copyright privileges connected to the image(s).

3. For AP members who receive the AP PhotoStream service, this agreement supplements the AP PhotoStream agreement. For AP World Services subscribers, this agreement supplements the World Services contract. Photo service members and subscribers may use images downloaded from the AP Photo Archive subject to the same terms and conditions that apply to images delivered as part of their Photo service.

4. For AP members who do NOT receive an AP Photo service, and for AP PixL subscribers, downloading an image from the AP Photo Archive confers a license to publish that image ONE TIME ONLY in the AP member publication whose account will be billed for the license. The image may not be saved after publication in any form, whether in hard copy or on digital storage medium, that would permit the unauthorized republication, transfer, or any other use, private or commercial, of the image.

5. Any member or subscriber may only display an image downloaded or copied from the AP Photo Archive at an online (Internet or BBS) site if there is an active "Member Newspaper Online Service Agreement," or for World Services subscribers, an "Supplemental Online Service Agreement," with AP. For AP members who do NOT subscribe to the AP PhotoStream service but who do have active "Online" agreements, the ONE TIME ONLY license conferred by downloading or copying an image from the AP Photo Archive will include a ONE TIME

ONLY license for online reuse of the image.

6. A member or subscriber's license to use images from the Photo Archive expires immediately upon termination or suspension of the AP contract. At such time, the member or subscriber must immediately destroy all electronically stored copies of the images in its archives, as well as any prints, and confirm this to AP in writing within seven days.

7. Members and subscribers who download high-resolution images from the AP Photo Archive will be charged for each download. An invoice or draft, depending on current member/subscriber preference, will be issued monthly detailing by user each photo downloaded.
