ORDER

Having conducted a Hearing consistent with the Circuit’s guidance (see Doc. 525), the Court finds as follows. The only competent evidence, unrefuted by Plaintiffs, establishes that “Process[ing] to Ontrack Inview” was the means by which native files were converted to TIFF format. See Hearing Tr. (Doc. 540) at 48-49.¹ Although Defendants’ witness indicated that the process also entailed “load[ing]” the TIFF’ed data into the Inview platform, id. at 58, there is no indication that the loading-function entailed additional energy, effort or expense.

To the contrary, Defendants’ witness testified that the costs/charges associated with TIFFing, versus TIFFing plus loading, were “very similar,” if not identical. Id. at 59-60. The witness stated that, within the context of Camesi, differentiating between TIFFing and TIFFing-plus-loading was inconsistent with the “contemplated workflow,” and that, as a result, parsing “line item” distinctions did not fit “the context of this case.” See id. at 60.

These conclusions are bolstered by the broader context. Defendants retained their ESI-vendor, Kroll, no later than October 2010,² and the billings in question were generated roughly sixteen (16) months prior to the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit’s decision in Race Tires Amer., Inc. v. Hoosier Racing Tire Corp., 674 F.3d 158 (3d Cir. Mar. 16, 2012). Race Tires involved matters of first impression, see id. at 159; and, its general theme of narrow-construction notwithstanding, this Court has no reason to believe that the decision endorses, let alone commands, hindsight-driven “ex post facto” dissections of Kroll’s pricing-structures.³ In any event, the only competent evidence of record indicates that presumed distinctions between TIFing and TIFing-plus-loading are conjectural, rather than grounded in existing-reality.

For these reasons, the Court finds that Defendants’ costs for “Process[ing] to Ontrack Inview” are recoverable under Race Tires.⁴ Given the possibility of further appellate review, however, the Court believes that any remaining information regarding the salient issues, now identified, should be made part of the trial-court record.

² See Kroll’s “UPMC Project Data Map,” created October 25, 2010 (attached as Ex. A to Defs.’ Hr’g Ex. D-1, as memorialized in Hearing Exhibit List (Doc. 539)).

To the extent that additional, potentially-relevant information exists,⁵ by necessity, it would be in the primary possession of Defendants and/or their vendor. Thus, Defendants are afforded until December 4, 2017 to supplement the record. Plaintiffs may respond to Defendants' supplemental information by December 19, 2017. Their response shall refrain from making further arguments regarding matters already decided – explicitly and implicitly – herein. Plaintiffs' compliance with this limitation, however, is without prejudice to their advancing on appeal any previously-stated arguments or positions.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

⁵ Among other things, this may include information/explanations regarding ESI-related service and billing negotiations, documents and instruments, and the efforts and resources required of Kroll to execute the TIFFing versus TIFFing-plus-loading functions.
