Joseph claims that beginning in 1967, he was subjected to repeated childhood sexual abuse by Elder Richard Joseph White while White was a missionary serving the Defendants on an assignment to mission work in South Dakota. Joseph alleges that the Defendants knew or should have known that White was a pedophile but did nothing to supervise or otherwise protect Joseph from childhood sexual abuse; Joseph further alleges that the Defendants fraudulently concealed information pertinent to Plaintiff's claims in order to protect itself from civil liability. Plaintiff asserts that he has suffered permanently emotional and spiritual injuries as a result of the childhood sexual abuse he endured.

Defendants deny that Plaintiff was abused, deny that they were responsible for any abuse if it did happen and deny that Elder Richard Joseph White abused the Plaintiff. Defendants raise a number of affirmative defenses including the affirmative defense that Plaintiff's case was not timely brought.
