numbers tell the story

sorry it took so long for me to respond. easi is on a hunt so its good to cautious.

all one has to do is the numbers. look at all the figures that are public knowledge or have even been reported by easi. figure out how many do they recruit each year and then extrapolate. the bottom line is the figur now the above is using figures for easi dealers. now extrapolate the nu professional engineering companies and electrical firms there are out from this alone you can see there is a very limited business here.

bottom line is you can start this business without having to outlay all t to easi. you need a shoulder to lean on. find an electrician. Capacitors purchased from a number of outlets and in many cases they will spec t required. (why do you need easi) there are lots of lighting products out that do the same thing and some are more efficient. easi's light produc only one and that is the euroliner. it weighs a lot and structurally you h think about fabrication in many locations. try a lighting conditioner tha conditions a whole lighting panel (which by the way is more cost effect than installing individual units on each circuit.

do i know something about the business. YES. do i need easi or have t been there thru my learning curve NO. well maybe they held my hand. i expensive hand holding mistake on my part. don't have experience in t area... dont do it. if you do have experience... you don't need them

EASI's Response

As corporate counsel for Energy Automation Systems, Inc. ("EASI"), I am compelled to respond to the untrue and defamatory postings on this website. Over the past eighteen months, a small group of individuals who seek to disparage and destroy Energy Automation Systems, Inc. ("EASI") have posted derogatory and defamatory messages on this website. EASI does not make a habit of responding to every inaccurate, inflammatory misstatement. However, there is a point at which our dealers and customers deserve to have widely disseminated false statements publicly corrected.

These postings have been made, in large part, by a few disgruntled former EASI dealers. To create the appearance that numerous dealers are un-with EASI, those few former dealers frequently post messages under many different pseudonyms. In fact, our investigation has shown that those few posters actually respond to their own messages under different names. Do those individuals provide their true identities in the posted messages? Many times, the posters use names and/or initials designed to give the impression that they are affiliated with EASI. Under the cloak of anonymity, posters are essentially free to say whatever they please, regardless of whether their statements have any factual support. More importantly, the content of the postings is never checked for accuracy and simply amounts to unfiltered, unverified "cybersmearing." (See http://www.bizmonthly.com/2_2001_focus/jordan1e.html for more on "cybersmearing"). We find it informative that the messages that support the allegations are almost always made by individuals willing to identify themselves.

For example EASI is currently a party to pending litigation involving the few disgruntled dealers described above. In fact, EASI initiated several of those lawsuits and, in one case, was forced to obtain injunctive relief from a former dealer who made thinly-veiled threats of violence against EASI's shareholder. As for many of the other litigants, many of them were dealers who had less than one year and never attempted to complete, much less complete the installation of an EASI system. EASI remains confident that it will prevail on the merits of those cases.

EASI was founded in 1982. EASI has been selling dealerships since 1982 and had received very few complaints until last year, which suggests that the current Internet disparagement campaign and the pending litigation originated by a few disgruntled and unsuccessful dealers blamed their lack of success on EASI and its employees. However, even after that campaign commenced, EASI has still kept the door open to those former dealers in the event they still would like to make their dealerships successful, as other dealers have. EASI continues to strive to provide good business opportunities to motivate and help working people. EASI cannot, however, sit idly by while anonymous dealers disparage the company's reputation.

I would not be surprised to eventually learn that EASI threatened the BBB the BBB left that one entry telling people inquiring about EASI to call it opt for the operator. That probably fired Joe up and he probably stuck lawyers on the BBB.

I had no idea about Joe's other history. Interesting!!!

Energy Automation Systems Inc. Fraudulent inducement to buy fraudulent business promises practices Don't buy into EASI!! It's a sure bet you lose your shirt. Hendersonville Tennessee
Consumer Comment ..Understanding Business: you can't make it take your lumps and move on EASI - Energy Automation Systems, Inc.

 Address:
 145 Anderson Lane
 Hendersonville Tennessee 37505
 U.S.A.
 Phone Number:
 615-822-7250

Energy Automation Systems, Inc fraudulently induces you to buy a deal by promising that you will be able to make 6 and 7 figure incomes by selling their energy efficiency products. What EASI doesn't tell you is that only one in twenty of their dealers attains any kind of success at all.

The vast majority of EASI dealers fail in the first few months because they lack the specific electrical engineering knowledge required to work in this business. When our dealer class posed this question to Joe Merlo, he stated that no specific electrical knowledge was required, because we would be doing financial transactions with business owners, not installing equipment. That statement was patently false.

EASI Dealers need specific electrical knowledge to understand how the products work for two reasons: (1.) business owners and their plant managers want to know what you're going to do their electrical system, and (2.) You want to know how to correctly install the equipment. If the installation is done incorrectly, it can damage the business owners' equipment. It then becomes your responsibility as a 'highly trained consultant' to fix the damage, at a cost of thousands of dollars to repair/replace.

Joe Merlo claimed, without offering any documentation, that EASI dealers have done over 80,000 installations worldwide. When asked to produce any kind of documentation to validate his claims, he refused. When asked for a list of the names of other dealers so that we could check out his claim about their success, he refused. When, after purchasing a dealership for $30,000, and discovering that I had bought a bad deal, I asked for my money back, Joe refused. Joe refuses anything that makes him look bad, give away scammed money, or come anywhere near telling the truth about himself or EASI. Whatever he says is always painted up to make EASI and Joe Merlo look like the best thing since slice bread.

There is little or no money to be made for the vast majority of EASI dealers. The few that are making money are doing so mostly on their own. Don't get into EASI!! It's a sure bet you'll lose your shirt.

It takes hard work, determination, planning, money and the desire to succeed. If you are looking for someone to do it for you should not even try.

Go into this business with your eyes open and understand what is being offered. No successful business is going to be easy. If it were there would be employers and no employees.

If you can't make it take your lumps and move on.

This company is filled with highly intelligent people, when you listen to you realize that this cannot be faked. Character assassinations that don't address the issues can not change the facts!!

"Dave" I see that you're not interested in addressing the real issues at here: Fraudulent inducement to buy, Misrepresentation of material fact questionable, if not Fraudulent business practices. You can attack a person's character all you want; but it doesn't change the facts.

Let's review your statements. Yes, "it is common knowledge that 80% of new businesses fail within a very few years." However, when Joe Merle president of the company leads you to believe that most of his dealers succeed, and actually the truth (based on my contacts and experience) 95% fail, that's misrepresentation. When the president of the company knowingly does not divulge that 95% of his dealers fail within the first 6 months, that's concealment. When the president of the company claims his company has made over 80,000 (eighty thousand) installations worldwide and the facts show otherwise, that's material misrepresentation of fact.

Given that set of facts up front, who in his right mind would buy into EAS? Nobody!!

You stated "It takes hard work, determination, planning, money and time to succeed. If you are looking for someone to do it for you, you should even try." I agree. But I wasn't looking for someone else to do my business for me. Nor were the 25 other people in my class who were similarly ripped off. We were looking for what we were promised, a turn-key business opportunity with virtually no competition in a market that was wide open. That's not what we got.

What we received was a misrepresented business opportunity that has a high failure rate. From what I hear through other dealers, the other 5% either don't even use EAS anymore, or are struggling to make it with EAS.

You also stated "This company is filled with highly intelligent people, and if you listen to them you realize that this cannot be faked." If you are a dealer, you realize after having bought EAS just how intelligent those people are. They faked you into buying their only really profitable product – the EAS dealership.

Your character assassination attempts aside, the facts remain. The EAS dealership is not a good buy for the vast majority of businessmen. I did not have the benefit of the facts. Joe Merlo made sure that we could not contact other dealers before we bought our dealerships; he would not provide phone numbers, emails, or any information on his supposedly successful dealers. In my opinion, it was nothing more than an elaborate con.

And, by the way, I am "taking my lumps" and moving on. But there's no reason for others to have to get scammed by an unscrupulous business whose only real profit comes from selling their dealerships to unsuspecting entrepreneurs.

It's Still A Business Opportunity ...my money back what was promised

I'm fairly new to the EASI business, but would tell you that my money bought what was promised: excellent, comprehensive training by highly educated brilliant individuals, and an opportunity to start a business of my own in my field of energy conservation. My limited experience with EASI has given me the need for a reference letter for a particular industry, at which time I sent an e-mail to the President of EASI. He responded immediately and within 24 hours I had a scanned, legitimate reference letter, signed by a real person with a phone number.

EASI did not answer all of my questions prior to my going thru training either ... but my experiences with EASI's support (once I was 'in the business') have been impressingly positive. If EASI had been open with their financial information and with their dealer list and with installation references, I would think that those lists and that information could have been easily 'contrived' and were of a mind to be crooked. A crook will be a crook in every situation because EASI has not provided you with what you consider to be verified information as to installs, dealers, etc., doesn't mean that the information is non-existent. Maybe there aren't 80K installs out there ... maybe they do have more dealerships than product ... maybe they hold their dealer lists in confidence ... and maybe I can't offer a customer a 2 year return, and my profit margin won't be quite 50% ... but I still have a business to run, calls to make and demos to present and savings to offer and equipment to install and money to make. I thank EASI for the opportunity.

I do not see where I assassinated anyone's character, The only character assassination seems to be by the few here that are complaining. You have the right to complain but when you use an open forum where anyone can say anything and the forum sponsors don't require any substantiation of fact you have to be careful what you write in order to be believed. I am sorry if your experience was negative but there are those that have done well and are pleased with the results. What more can one say. Open eyes equals an informed decision.

Suggestions to Salvage Your Investment

1- EASI states very clearly in training that it is essential to establish a relationship with an electrical contractor - preferably one who believes technology of saving costs through reducing distribution system losses

2- EASI offers a small but growing list of active reference accounts and a small fee splitting arrangement that the customer, dealer and EASI Administrator benefit from.

3-EASI offers excellent support to their affiliates through the help desk site, newsletters, and most importantly direct access to key personnel.

I do appreciate that many, if not most, fail at this business and it is not EASY as EASI presents it to potential investors. That unfortunately is the nature of marketing business opportunities but not a indictment for fraud

If you made 20 cold calls and were put off every time and quit then you are not making a serious attempt. If you never did a walk-through survey or a direct sales call then you have not made a serious attempt.

In SOCAL with $0.15/kwh electricity costs there are innumerable companies trying to reduce them. It takes much effort, persistence and forming of relationships. If you do that, find an electrical contractor to help with sales and installs, and use the resources provided by EASI you have a chance to be successful(a much better chance than had you invested in a restaurant, coffee house, stocks or the lottery).

If 80,000 is not true - Then that is fraud

Yes, business opportunities are just that business opportunities. How most of them are not nearly as expensive. BUT, saying you (or those who purchased the opportunity) have done something 80,000 is a material representation. If it is knowingly untrue, then that is FRAUD. You defend never address that point (nor many others that get to the heart of the fraudulent misrepresentation).

Some Facts About EASI

My name is Chris Daniel and I am the former Marketing Manager for Energy Automation Systems, Inc., headquartered in Hendersonville, Tennessee 2002 through May 2003). For months now the character of EASI, its own employees has been debated and the reputation and businesses of has truly been harmed in the process. I want to take this opportunity to address a few issues.

As a former employee, I know without a doubt that EASI employs some hardest working, finest individuals I have ever met. Yet, each and every employee's name was added to this site under the label "crook.". Other postings have been unfairly critical of Mr. Merlo, the owner of EASI.

I have worked alongside John Medina, Tyler Bloomfield, Kathy Harris, I Gilbert, Bill Thiessen and Carol Machado. They care about their jobs and to make EASI and its dealers successful each and every day. Then you Bob Depalo, Rafael Larios and Joelle Frasca. These individuals have done much to improve EASI and to help dealers in the field that it is ludicrous to say anything negative about them. Philip Rastocny and Joey Frasca are probably the hardest working and dedicated people I know. Philip truly about energy conservation/the environment and about improving the company. And you will find no one who cares more about doing quality than Joey.

Then you have Joe Merlo. I can honestly say that I have never met a more personable individual. Yes, Mr. Merlo is a shrewd business man. Yes, Mr. Merlo sells business opportunities and some people do not succeed. But Mr. Merlo is very good at selling. But, I have witnessed countless times he has given so much of his time and energy to help dealers and their customers. No, he is not perfect and neither is his company. But I do know that he cares about his employees, his dealer network and about making improvements.

EASi is constantly working to improve its infrastructure, the tools it can make available to dealers in the field and the training/support for new and existing dealers. Mr. Merlo continues to spend a great deal to develop software, establish relationships with other companies and explore new energy conservation products to add to his product mix. He also continues to invest heavily to improve existing products.

My point then is this. By blindly making accusations, many individuals are not only damaged, but they affect every individual associated with energy conservation including successful EASi dealers around the world and other companies involved in the industry. I urge anyone with a complaint to contact EASi directly and try to work with them to resolve any issues you may have. I believe the management team is open to feedback and they try to address problems once they are made aware of them.

One final note. I have been informed that my name has been used or misidentified by individuals distributing bogus information via e-mail on various web sites. Hopefully this public statement will set the record straight. I do not condone nor support any measures that could harm the reputation of EASi or individuals associated with the company. This statement is made of my own volition without compensation or request from EASi or its employees.

One Final Point to Ponder

After having posted my first response in defense of EASi's employees and owner, I failed to make mention of a few other individuals working for the company. Alvin Juma, an EASi dealer from Kenya, recently joined the company to learn more about the energy conservation industry. As a dealer, he was successful in a relatively short amount of time. Since joining the EASi company, he has become a remarkable asset as the Help Desk Coordinator. Not only does he work long hours during the week answering questions for customer service dealers, you will likely find him in the office most of the weekend. He is a tireless learner and a genuine spirit. Also, I forgot to make mention of another individual who has gracefully handled the unfair criticism of EASi. Dr. I. Bleiweis, also a former dealer with numerous sales throughout the United States, joined the company as the new president late in 2002. He immediately began addressing a number of problems leftover from a former management team member. In addition, he instituted voluntary manager meetings on weekends to bring together a team of individuals to identify and correct problems internally and to brainstorm on ways to help dealers in the field. Practically the entire office showed up for these meetings and Dr. Bleiweis Merlo and Mr. Rastocny have been very proactive in implementing con-improvement efforts. He also can be found working throughout the we the corporate office.

My final point is addresses the "issues" a number of dissatisfied deale made mention of here in the www.ripoffreport.com forum. While I have of how many installations have been completed in EASI's 25-year histo have seen the file room containing the completed proposals and it is extensive. Also, I have personally worked with new dealers whose first netted a significant profit. One individual with a sales background sold energy system and cleared over $150,000. Another with an engineering background sold his first job and netted a profit of over $70,000. While was not typical for the first sale, I want to make clear that these individ not take the typical approach. I have also seen a number of new dealer never tried to approach larger companies...instead opting to stay with small facilities...each dealer is trained to work a few small facilities to process before moving on to larger prospective clients. Yet, many, for reason or another, would not or could not make themselves advance th careers/industry knowledge. They continued to work with really small accounts and grew frustrated when the project was not as financially lu as they hoped.

I would hope as people read the dissatisfied comments posted on this that they try to think about the responsibility that one assumes as a sta business owner. We do not know how hard certain individuals worked their start-up energy conservation businesses successful. We also can determine how they presented themselves to customers (they may not made good impressions, may have seemed desperate for a sale, who k
But I do know that the percentage of EASI dealers who are successful i individuals have a right to ask questions, but is it fair to blast EASI in a forum when the readership is presented with only one side of the story don't believe so. And the number of satisfied EASI dealers and custom wouldn't either.

Again, if you have a problem, contact EASI and explore all the options.
haven't done this, you should give it a try. I know the management fear they do work with people all the time to help them become successful.

I wish all of the new and existing EASI dealers all the success in the we

HAVE YOU WASTED YOUR TIME AND MONEY

EASI?

In the last newsletter, Dr. Paul Bleiweis spoke of a couple of disgruntle dealers who have been unsuccessful in their efforts to make a go of the opportunity. Evidently they expected to be able to walk into any business anywhere, do the demo, and start taking orders. When that didn't happen immediately blamed EASI. They attacked the EASI business opportunity, the EASI name, and through that attack – you and me. They claim they are engaged in their vendetta for the benefit of other 'scammed' EASI Affiliates everywhere. Sounds altruistic doesn't it? But in my opinion, nothing could be farther from the truth.

The way I see it, they refuse to admit their own failures and inadequacies. They are engaged in the age-old practice of 'misery-loves-company' recruiting. By doing so, they are causing direct harm to those of us who are committed to making the most of the EASI opportunity and profiting from the multi-billion dollar energy conservation business.

Before I got into the energy conservation business, I was engaged in the most possible, (according to EASI literature), occupation for a potential EASI affiliate – SALES! After 15 years as a Project Director and troubleshooter in the timeshare industry, and 12 years as a marketing and sales consultant for business owners in 26 states, I KNEW that I had the skill set to succeed with EASI – my way! I understood clearly that EASI is a 'financial concept' and I had been doing that for almost thirty years – my way!

So, for FIVE MONTHS after going through Affiliate training I WASTED TIME AND MONEY ON EASI – my way! Didn't make one sale. Didn't blame EASI, though. Blaming EASI would have been too easy. After all, I made a self-conscious choice to waste my time and money every day during those months. EASI hadn't been in any of those meetings with me, how could I possibly blame EASI? Instead, I self-analyzed why I hadn't made a sale and what I had done differently than the EASI sales system teaches?

I dug through my closet, found the Dealer Manual, actually studied it front-to-back cover-to-cover this time, and discovered EXACTLY what I had been doing wrong – just about everything! I didn't use the script they provided to secure a 'non-appointment'. I only did half of the demonstration – the quick and easy half. I also didn't always start with the decision-makers – they were too hard to get through to. They had professional gatekeepers who had heard it all and were not amused by my wit and charm. (See below for the names of the books that changed all that).

I needed a paradigm shift! I FINALLY realized that with EASI, I'm not 'selling' anything. I am the bearer of good news. I am a problem solver. I am the decision-makers' partner in improving their bottom line. I have information and ideas that will be of benefit to the people I call on – because these ideas will allow them to be heroes and benefit their companies. By helping them benefit their companies, I am making a positive difference in the lives of shareholders. By making a positive difference in the lives of their shareholders, and by helping them conserve a significant amount of energy, I am benefiting – ultimately – our Nation. Now that's altruistic, achievable and highly motivational!

Nobody promised to run my EASI business for me. What they promised delivered – an opportunity for me to be trained to enter the exciting and profitable energy conservation business. EASI provides an overview of terrain, a road map if you will, to success. As with any road map, there are multiple routes to reach your destination. You have the freedom to choose to take side roads and even exit along your way. You also have the freedom to choose to get back on the highway and speed to a successful completion of your journey. Many have gone before me since 1978. Many have been successful by staying on the highway and many have been lost by straying from the path. We all share one thing in common – we all have the freedom to choose. We can choose to stay on the highway, or, we can choose to stray and waste the time and money that we have invested in EASI. We can choose success and we can choose failure – it's up to each one of us to decide. For me, I choose success, and EASI is the vehicle I choose to get me there.

We now have a national bank with 27 data processing centers and over 100 branches, an international plastics company with 46 plants worldwide, a 47-unit hotel chain on our plate. We have also secured an alliance with a local power company and the Federal power authority for our region. The conservation manager at the utility told my sales manager that he was going to take him around town and 'watch you make a living' selling the EASI systems to their electrical customers. A local consortium of 9 water treatment plants is installing systems in all of their facilities – we pick up the check for the first one of the nine next week. We recently installed Fridge-Tech and some other electrical products in a 5-restaurant mini-chain – they averaged 31% savings the first month!

As with any business, continuing education is a MUST. The two greatest books I have ever read on the semantics of understanding and thereby getting through to more customers are: Selling to VITO: the Very Important To Officer by Anthony Parinello; (I would have been millions of dollars ahead in my sales career if I had discovered this book about 30 years ago), and, Successful Cold Call Selling by Lee Boyan. We applied the techniques from Selling to VITO, and secured an easy conversation with VITO, a referral from Seemore with an admonition from VITO to give us full access and, an appointment after the walk-through to report our results, in 4 out of 10 calls. The psychology of decision-makers and our inter-relationship is laid out in Successful Cold Call Selling. Both books are mandatory reading for our staff and, in my opinion, should also be included on the EASI road map to success.

Now – stop wasting the time and money you've invested in EASI and get back on the highway. There is a whole world out there that desperately need help.

Happy journey!

Does VITO know where the 80,000 systems are installed?

VITO may help you sell something. Who knows? Maybe VITO will help 80,000 of these energy conservation systems. But, does VITO know where existing 80,000 actually are? Why would such a great company have to put up such a figure and not be able to explain it?

SO, do you think VITO has any idea where the systems that EASI has sold are actually installed?

I cant believe all these ex dealers with EASI could not make a go of this opportunity. I have been a dealer for six months now and am having in success. Yes my first three months or so nothing happened, I was doir twenty or thirty demos with not a lot of positive enforcement from pros but I did not give up. Ive been in sales for twenty years and if any of yo numbskulls think you can just go out there show something and they v buy, you are very wrong my friends. Anyway I am ready to close my fo EASI deal with incredible profits just like EASI told me,honestly. Ive ha nothing but support from EASI and these guys are a wonderful group c people who honestly want to see me succeed, I cant say enough about People when you sign up for a dealership it is up to you to make it wor you have no sales experience then I would say stay away from this. Energy Automation Systems, Inc. - Rebuttal Challenge -

"Maybe everything is not what EASI said it would be"

Where are the 80,000 project installations? I have already established v challenge that this means that 4,500 projects are installed annually. If a projects were small (say $20,000)(even though EASI would claim very l project sales), then equipment sales would be atleast $34 million dollar year(more likely in excess of $100 million).

ASK EASI to open their books. What are new dealership revenues, new supply purchases, new dealer support services purchases and actual PRODUCT sales?

"Maybe EASI is trying to sell dealerships to the wrong people"

If you ever get the answer to the above question, then you will know th answer to this one. The only WRONG PEOPLE are those that cannot af dealership.

Subject: SINGER - Message from Ford to Jaburg & Wilk FW: Sandra Singer

Sandra,

I got this message from your neighbor, Michelle Ford. How would you like me to respond?

I suggest that I politely reply and let her know that she should send you a letter U.S. Mail to raise this type of concern. I could tell her that I do not represent you on all general matters, so she should communicate with you directly, by U.S. Mail, and that you will contact me if you wish to involve me.

Or, if you like, I will agree with you to receive and relay these communications. However, it could get pretty expensive using me as a mailbox. I have to bill 0.1 hours minimum (about $25.00) to every correspondence I receive and send.

I don't have enough information to tell if you have an easement right that she is trying to cut off. If you need help defining and defending your access rights, please let me know.

Mr. Kunz.

Please be advised that Sandra Singer's pest control company drove through by backyard this morning to access the inaccessible areas of her property. The sheriff was called. The field report number is 06-211810, Officer RT Bierwaller. Please advise your client this will not be tolerated in any way. I have previously expressed to you, as Ms. Singer's counsel, that neither Ms. Singer, her contractors nor her visitors are to ever use my property in any way to access the areas of her property which she has made inaccessible.

We really do care!

Evidentially you know each of us by name, first and last, yet you cower behind only a first name, which may not even be true and possibly a false location. If you felt free enough to reveal us then feel free enough to reveal yourself. Take issue with us in person or on the phone, certainly not on website with postings intended to spread poison. Certainly nothing can come of your complaining.

First of all EASI did not wrench your money from your dead hands. You are a conscious, hopefully informed, adult decision. Yes, it is a big investment that obviously you didn't take seriously enough. You may know us by name but you don't really know us. We all spend our days doing whatever it takes to help our affiliates be successful, at least the dealers who are trying. No wonder it is so easy for them and yes, it would be easy for us to sit behind our desks and let them do everything, but that isn't the case. We have formulated personal relationships with many of our affiliates and their successes become ours as well as their disappointments.

We do employ several people that were once EASI affiliates but they are here because of their commitment to energy conservation and are willing to sacrifice so that other affiliates can glean from their experience. Rather critize from the sidelines they jumped in to make EASI a better compan many of us at EASI we have lived and breathed the business. We are committed and we care.

Why don't you spend your time utilizing your investment. Call us! Give chance to support and encourage you, any way we can.

What exactly is your complaint with EASI? You publish a message stat those people are all crooks, but you provide no additional information substantiate your claim.

If what you say about the people listed in your message is true, where proof against each person listed? What documentation, evidence, or witnesses do you possess to corroborate your claim?

If you have the courage of your convictions, why didn't you provide a f accurate description of your grievances against EASI? Why did you ch publish a blanket character assassination against each employee in th company? Why did you not list your real, full name when you signed y message? Considering that we have no dealers named Larry in Texas, you really?

I can only surmise three facts based on your message:

- 1 - You have no real, factual, legitimate complaint
- 2 - You have no proof
- 3 - You have no courage, convictions or character

I call the employees of this firm not only my business associates but friends.

Gentlemen, I take personal offence at the things I have read here. To ca this company and it's employees in this manor should be, if not, crimin have been an EASI dealer since 1986. I call the employees of this firm r my business associates but friends.

It appears, as my son so aptly put it, that "somebody was looking for a "EASI" way to make money and when they found they had to take the s the top they wanted out. Sucess does not come without hard work."

I was ten months in this business before the first sale. This first sale pr my EASI investment with change left over. When I started I had a partn whose responsibility was to do all of the selling. It was only when I too the business as a sole owner did it succeed. My first source of busines customers my partner had called on. After I was able to make the sale I why they bought from me and not my ex partner and I was told "they ju didn't like him OR his attitude". People buy, and don't buy for many rea You might ask if I ever sold a survey and not the job and the answer wa yes, in fact If I was playing baseball, my batting average would be so lo wouldn't even make the minors. But, the ones I have been able to close paid me well. In ever case, the staff at EASI has given me all of the sup asked for.

The Proposals have been professionally prepared. The orders 100% fill suggest that the people that are complaining and whinning about EASI did, get up from behind their computers, put on there boots, grab there case, load it down with brochures and get out and make about eight de day. If they do this for about ten months I feel certain they will be as pr to be an EASI Dealer.
