

of his detention.” 28 U.S.C. § 2255. A petitioner bears the burden of proving the inadequacy or ineffectiveness of the remedy provided by Section 2255. Jeffers, 253 F.3d at 830. A prior unsuccessful motion to vacate filed pursuant to Section 2255 does not make Section 2255 inadequate or ineffective. Tolliver, 211 F.3d at 878.

The United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit has set forth two requirements a petitioner must satisfy to demonstrate that the remedy provided by Section 2255 is inadequate or ineffective. The petitioner must establish that his grounds for review: (1) are based on a retroactively applicable Supreme Court decision which establishes the petitioner may have been convicted of a nonexistent offense and (2) were foreclosed by circuit law at the time when the ground for review could have been raised in petitioner’s trial, direct appeal or initial motion to vacate. Reyes-Requena v. United States, 243 F.3d 893, 904 (5th Cir. 2001). In order to satisfy the first prong of the test, the petitioner must show that, based on a retroactively applicable Supreme Court decision, he was convicted for conduct that did not constitute a crime. Jeffers, 253 F.3d at 830-31.

Petitioner asserts numerous reasons in support of his contention that he should not be imprisoned. However, as petitioner has not demonstrated he was convicted of a nonexistent offense or that his grounds for review are based on a retroactively applicable Supreme Court decision and were foreclosed by circuit law when they could have been raised, he has failed to satisfy either prong of the Reyes-Requena test. Petitioner's grounds for review are therefore not cognizable in a petition filed pursuant to Section 2241.

Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, this petition for writ of habeas corpus will be dismissed. An appropriate final judgment shall be entered.
