Antonio – Sorry for the oversight, but we had previously agreed not to assert Claim 20 of the ‘183. Please use Claim 18 of the ‘183 instead.

Justin, is Rockstar still contending that a dispute exists with respect to “user preference edit input”? The term only appears in claims 5, 14, and 22 of the ‘245 patent, none of which were listed in Rockstar’s November 6 disclosure.

Antonio – We disagree with you on claims 22 and 23 of the ‘969. With respect to the two claims that you claim were not asserted, you recognized that they were asserted in your responsive brief. See Pages 11, 26. Regardless, to avoid any dispute, we agree to substitute Claim 20 of the '183 and Claim 38 of the '970 for claim 7 for Claim 7 of the '970 and Claim 21 of the '183. We agree that the antecedent basis issue of "the communications interface" and "the search term" are no longer in dispute in this case, along with the order of Claim 12 of the '178. The remainder of the disputes you list still exist.

Best Regards,

Subject: RE: Rockstar v. Google

Justin,

We do not agree that Rockstar can drop claims 22 and 23 of the '969 patent now and yet reserve its rights to assert these and other claims later. Also, Rockstar agreed it was not asserting claim 7 of the '970 and claim 21 of the '183 patent before, and cannot add those claims to the case now.

The parties should notify the court today that in light of Rockstar's dropped claims, several of the claim construction disputes no longer require resolution. Please see the attached filing and confirm we can file it jointly.

Regards,

-Antonio
