Alex,

There are several other issues raised in Jeff Randall's June 24 letter, beyond the issue of the number of claims that Mirror Worlds plans to assert at trial. None of these other issues are addressed in your June 30 email. Please respond to those issues today, so that we can have a meaningful discussion tomorrow.

Thanks,
Allan

Allan,

Our position is the same as in our June 30 email response. We are willing to cut down the claims, but we believe that the effort is premature at this stage. We will be happy to revisit this discussion after the Summary Judgment briefing.

Best regards,

Alex

Alex,

It's been two weeks and we still do not have a response to Jeff Randall's June 24 letter. I understand the parties have been busy, but we need a response. Please respond in writing by the close of business today, so that we can understand your position prior to tomorrow's meet and confer.

For tomorrow's meet and confer, please let us know if 3 pm EST works for you and your team.

Thanks,
Allan

Joe/Alex,

We still do not have a response to Jeff Randall's June 24 letter (attached). With motions for summary judgment due tomorrow (July 1), we need to know if Mirror Worlds is willing to limit the number of claims that it intends to pursue going forward, given that the present number (approx. 50 claims) is unwieldy and inappropriate, as explained in Jeff's letter. As we discussed during our meet and confer last Friday (June 25), Apple plans to move the Court to limit the number of claims, if Mirror Worlds is unwilling to do so.

While we would appreciate a prompt response to all of the points in Jeff's June 24 letter, please respond today on the issue of the number of asserted claims.

Thanks,
Allan
