

Exhibit 7

Claim Chart For Adobe Showing Infringement Of The '985 Patent By Adobe Search Buddy***

Claim	Claim Language	Evidence from www.adobe.com (Search Buddy)
36pre	A method for running an application program in a distributed hypermedia network environment, wherein the distributed hypermedia network environment comprises at least one client workstation and one remote network server coupled to the distributed hypermedia network environment, the	Users of Adobe's Search Buddy feature located on the website www.adobe.com (and other Adobe owned pages which use the Search Buddy feature), the websites themselves and/or the servers hosting those websites (and/or the combination thereof) each operate in a hypermedia network environment that includes client workstations executing browsers and comprise a method for running an application program in a distributed hypermedia network environment, wherein the distributed hypermedia network environment comprises at least one client workstation and one remote network server coupled to the distributed hypermedia network environment, the method comprising the following claim elements. The Adobe Search Buddy application program runs inside of a Web browser as well as on Web server computers maintained by Adobe. The application is automatically invoked while a browser loads and displays an HTML-based search page from a Adobe server from a URL such as http://www.adobe.com. The browser running on the client workstation and remote Adobe Web servers communicate via the World Wide Web, a distributed hypermedia network environment. The Adobe Search Buddy application provides to a user a list of suggested search terms as a user enters a search string into the search string field of the Adobe search form. The suggested search strings are shown as a menu below the search field. For example, for the search string "fla", the Adobe Search

* Allegation not limited to the browser in use