Matt,

Amazon, eBay and Yahoo! have produced and/or made available for inspection the source code that implements the functionality those parties understand was accused of infringement in Eolas' infringement contentions, as explained in the Dec. 9, 2010 email from Joseph Lee. After a reasonable and diligent search in light of your requests, we do not understand that source code implementing the accused functionalities is missing from the source code already produced and/or made available. In addition, at this point we are unable to determine whether the Yahoo! Maps code that responds to the URL you have identified in your request to Yahoo! has been produced and/or made available. We continue to investigate this matter and are willing to work with your technical team to ensure that we understand your request and are able to timely supplement, if necessary.

Best,
Andrew

Counsel for Amazon, eBay, and Yahoo,

As you know, Eolas will be inspecting Amazon, eBay and Yahoo's source code beginning on Monday April 18. Despite repeated requests for a response, none of Amazon, eBay or Yahoo have indicated whether they will be producing the code Eolas detailed in its March 30 correspondence to each of these defendants.

I ask once again for a response to my correspondence to each of Amazon, eBay, and Yahoo from March 30. Thank you.

Thanks Andrew.

Please further advise regarding Amazon, eBay, and Yahoo's production of source code, as detailed in my March 30 correspondence separately sent to each of Amazon, eBay and Yahoo. These issues have been outstanding for two weeks. As inspection of source code will occur next week your prompt attention to this matter is required.

Best,

Matt

Matt, we will make available for inspection the previously produced source code for Amazon, eBay and Yahoo! on April 18-22 at our Silicon Valley offices. We are looking into your requests for supplemental source code from each of the parties and will get back to you regarding those requests.

Our paralegal Joanna Lahtinen (joanna.lahtinen@weil.com, 650.802.3107) will be your reviewers' contact for the inspection.

Best,
Andrew

Counsel for Amazon,

Please advise, as we have yet to hear from Amazon in response to my correspondence of March 30, 2011.

In particular, please respond to indicate whether Amazon will produce the source code requested in my correspondence for Eolas' inspection on April 18-22. Please also respond to provide an on-site contact for our reviewers during their inspection.

Thank you.
