Counsel,

It has come to our attention that Google has just released a new infringing product, Google Music. From the information available at <http://music.google.com/about/>, this is yet another infringing product created by Google. We request that Google supplement its discovery to include this new infringing product, including production of documents related to Google Music and supplementation of Google's Interrogatory Responses to include Google Music.

It is also our understanding that Google Music currently requires an invitation from Google in order to access the functionality. Eolas requests invitations be arranged for various attorneys and experts to be designated by Eolas so that the infringing functionality may be examined and Preliminary Infringement Contentions drafted directed towards Google Music.

Please advise on when Google will be able to provide this discovery supplementation and invitations.
