Opinion on Dismissal

The Court of Appeals did not understand a record that included two things: an order that said, "[f]or a variety of reasons, including res judicata and want of jurisdiction, this complaint is dismissed with prejudice;" and a sixty-three page complaint. A casual glance at it reveals its manifest lunacy.

Charles Stringer sued under at least ten statutes, from stalking to the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, against thirty-nine defendants. These include:

- Six district attorneys and their assistants;
- Six private attorneys;
- Seven police officers and one FBI agent;
- Three Hinds County Court judges and their clerk;
- Two workers for the Texas Attorney General;
- Two federal judges;
- One municipal court judge;
- An Assistant Attorney General of Mississippi and a worker there
- The governor of Mississippi;
- The mayor of Jackson, Mississippi;
- The director of Mississippi's Bureau of Narcotics and one of his agents;
- Stringer's former girlfriend;
- Ten unknown border patrol agents; and, most bizarrely,

- An "unknown drug agent, acting as his biological son."

In Stringer's general complaint, he requests both procedural and specific relief. He asks for:

1. The court to appoint him an attorney;

2. The FBI and Marshals to find and serve the defendants;

3. Seizure of the defendants' assets;

4. Compensation for stolen funds;

5. Statutory compensation; and

6. An injunction preventing the defendants from spying on him.

Stringer describes near data, but he does not have facts that are recognizable as a claim at law under the most generous reading. It cannot be amended to cure what is completely irrational. The court dismisses this case with prejudice.

Signed on March 21, 2012, at Houston, Texas.
