This is a Registered E-mail[®] message from Ian Imrich.

Dear Mr. Demond:

Please be advised that this office represents Tiltware LLC, a California limited liability company.

My client has not been properly served in this matter to date. However, this office will discuss a Notice of Lawsuit & Request For Waiver of Service with local Texas counsel and thereafter advise your office if Tiltware LLC will authorize such informal service of process in this case or not. I expect to have that answer from the client by week's end.

In the meantime, Defendant Michael Mizrachi and his representatives have relayed to me that Deliverance Poker, inter alia, failed to capitalize the company before August 24th 2009 as expressly called for within the operative agreement. I am investigating that state of affairs and other pertinent facts for my client Tiltware LLC. So far, that information of failed capitalization has been confirmed as correct.

Please provide my office with any information it has on this threshold issue of the Effective Date and Automatic Termination of the agreement your client claims it still has with Defendant Mizrachi. Failure to do so at this juncture will be at the legal peril and jeopardy of your client.

Additionally, your office has Rule 11 obligations as you are well aware. Please govern your conduct accordingly.

The USDC in this matter appears to have similar issues with your client's curious request(s) for relief thus far. See attached Court Order Denying Deliverance Poker's request for a TRO as stated therein which was issued yesterday.

By all means, should your office have any questions or comments with respect to the foregoing, please contact my offices.

In the meantime, I remain,

Cordially yours,
Ian J. Imrich, Esq.
