Petitioner, §

v. §

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, §
Respondent. §

EP-15-CV-131-DB

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

This matter is before the Court on Petitioner Feliciano Ortiz’s petition for a writ of error coram nobis under 28 U.S.C. § 1651(a). In his petition, Ortiz asks that the Court allow him to withdraw his guilty plea to an information charging him with conspiring to bring aliens into the United States for profit and to vacate the judgment in cause number EP-13-CR-795-DB-2. Ortiz, a citizen of Mexico accorded lawful permanent resident status in the United States at the time of his arrest, notes that the Supreme Court held in Padilla<sup>1</sup> “that counsel must inform [his] client whether his plea carries a risk of deportation.”<sup>2</sup> Ortiz maintains that his counsel provided constitutionally ineffective assistance when he failed to advise him of the immigration consequences of his guilty plea. Specifically, he claims his attorney:

(a) failed to investigate the immigration consequences of pleading guilty to the instant offense, (b) failed to seek an immigration safe disposition of Mr. Ortiz’s case, and (c) failed to advise Mr. Ortiz of the “succinct, clear, and explicit” legal consequences Mr. Ortiz would encounter if he was convicted of the immigration offense.<sup>3</sup>

Ortiz adds that, as a consequence of his conviction, an immigration judge ordered his removal from the United States to Mexico.<sup>4</sup> After reviewing the record and for the reasons discussed below, the Court finds that Ortiz is not eligible for relief through a writ of error coram nobis. Accordingly, the Court will deny his petition and dismiss his cause without prejudice.

“The writ of coram nobis is an ancient common-law remedy designed ‘to correct errors of fact.’ ”<sup>5</sup> “[T]he authority to grant a writ of coram nobis is conferred by the All Writs Act, which permits ‘courts established by Act of Congress’ to issue ‘all writs necessary or appropriate in aid of their respective jurisdictions.’ ”<sup>6</sup> The writ of coram nobis provides “an ‘extraordinary remedy’ . . . to a petitioner no longer in custody who seeks to vacate his conviction in circumstances where ‘the petitioner can demonstrate that he is suffering civil disabilities as a consequence of the criminal convictions and that the challenged error is of sufficient magnitude to justify the extraordinary relief.’ ”<sup>7</sup> “The writ will issue only when no other remedy is available and when ‘sound reasons exist[ ] for failure to seek appropriate earlier relief.’ ”<sup>8</sup> Therefore, a petitioner seeking coram nobis relief must demonstrate (1) he is no longer in custody, (2) there are circumstances compelling the granting of the writ in order to achieve justice, (3) sound reasons exist for his failure to seek appropriate earlier relief, and (4) he continues to suffer legal consequences from his conviction which may be remedied by granting the writ.<sup>9</sup> “In addition, a petitioner bears the considerable burden of overcoming the presumption that previous judicial proceedings were correct.”<sup>10</sup>

As was discussed above, “[t]he writ of coram nobis is an extraordinary remedy available to a petitioner no longer in custody who seeks to vacate his criminal conviction.”<sup>11</sup> A defendant who is subject to parole or to supervised release is still in custody for the purposes of a writ of habeas corpus or a motion to vacate.<sup>12</sup> In this case, the Court sentenced Ortiz to three years’ supervised release on October 25, 2013.<sup>13</sup> Ortiz concedes he is “now serving his sentence

<sup>12</sup> See Jones v. Cunningham, 371 U.S. 236, 240–43 (1963) (“While petitioner’s parole releases him from immediate physical imprisonment, it imposes conditions which significantly confine and restrain his freedom; this is enough to keep him in the ‘custody’ of the members of the Virginia Parole Board within the meaning of the habeas corpus statute[.]”); see also United States v. Essig, 10 F.3d 968, 970 n.3 (3d Cir. 1993) (“Essig was still subject to a three year period of supervised release. Therefore, the district court had jurisdiction when the petition was filed because Essig was still ‘a prisoner in custody’ within the meaning of § 2255.”).

As was also discussed above, “[t]he writ will issue only . . . when ‘sound reasons exist[ ] for failure to seek appropriate earlier relief.’ ”<sup>16</sup> The appropriate method for a federal prisoner to challenge a sentence is through a motion to vacate, set aside, or correct sentence, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255.<sup>17</sup> Such a motion is governed by a one year statute of limitation.<sup>18</sup> A federal

'in rare and exceptional circumstances.'<sup>25</sup> Ortiz offers no explanation whatsoever for his failure to seek appropriate earlier relief by filing a timely § 2255 motion.

Accordingly, because Ortiz is still in custody and has offered no sound reasons for his failure to pursue a § 2255 motion, Ortiz's petition for writ of error coram nobis is DENIED, and his civil cause is DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE.
