Key Findings

Steel Was A Corrupt Career Politician And Republican Insider

Steel used the power of her government office to promote, protect and benefit her political allies. Throughout her time in government office, Steel has repeatedly used her power to promote, protect and benefit her political allies. While serving as an Orange County Supervisor, Steel twice acted to benefit private jet operator ACI Jet, one of her leading campaign contributors. In 2019, she allowed consideration of a wildly unpopular proposal to expand private flights at John Wayne Airport, which would benefit ACI Jet. Three years earlier, she voted in favor of a lucrative general aviation contract for the company, prompting a FAA investigation into the decision.

Steel has also shown a consistent willingness to use her governmental power to protect and promote key political allies. In 2018, Steel voted to defund the Office of Independent Review while it was actively investigating two of her close political allies – and campaign chairs – for misusing jailhouse informants to illegally obtain confessions. Earlier that year, Steel spent taxpayer funds to send 16,000 voters campaign-style mailers for an event that also featured her campaign chair and ally Tony Rackauckas. Additionally, while serving as Alan Nakanishi’s campaign chairwoman, Steel helped boost his candidacy by hiring Nakanishi as an “Assistant to the Board Member,” allowing him to list the position as his occupation on the ballot. Steel was characterized as knowing “first hand” the boost a staff job on the Board provided a candidate, having been on the reverse end of the same process during her first state-wide campaign.

Steel was a corrupt career politician and Republican insider. Despite claiming in 2006 that she was not a career politician, Steel has spent the last 15 years seeking or in elected office. Months before she declared her candidacy for Congress in California 48th Congressional District, Steel filed to run for State Controller in 2022, a position she has never publicly expressed interest towards. The filing remains active as she campaigns for Congress, further signaling that Steel’s primary concern is not about Orange County residents, but rather her own political advancement. Furthermore, much of Steel’s early political success can be attributed to her status as a Republican insider, particularly in Orange County. Steel’s first lasting political appointment was to the Los Angeles County Commission for Children and Families. Mike Antonovich, a staunch supporter of the California Civil Rights Initiative, nominated Steel to the commission after Steel’s alleged support for the initiative forced her to resign from the Board of Airport Commissioners. Steel admitted that she had “little knowledge about the responsibilities of the commission” and said “it was a surprise that she had been appointed.” Later, in her first run for state-wide office, Steel served as a Deputy to Claude Parrish – a close political ally of her husband – for three months in order to list the position as her job title on the ballot. Parrish demoted his deputy of eight years and hired Steel, who resigned after three months – just long enough to secure the designation of “Deputy” on the ballot. The deputy Parrish had demoted, who worked on Steel’s campaign in the interim, was given his job back the day after Steel resigned. On the federal scale, Steel built connections in Republican circles through her work in an “elite group” of fundraisers for President Bush.

Steel Repeatedly Sought To Curtail Transparency And Communication Between Her Constituents And Their Government

Steel repeatedly sought to curtail transparency and communication between her constituents and their government. Steel repeatedly initiated moves and voted in support of measures that would curtail transparency and communication between her constituents and their government. In 2017, Steel voted for a policy that would allow county officials to immediately destroy any “working notes” they no longer needed. A judge later ruled against the policy and said Orange County officials “are likely breaking the law” by destroying the public records, citing the California Public Records Act and the Brown Act. Despite the judge’s ruling that public records must be kept for two years, in 2019 Steel voted for another policy that would allow for the immediate destruction of public records.

Steel hindered Orange County residents' ability to communicate with their government and elected officials. Steel voted for another policy that would allow for the immediate destruction of public records. Additionally, in her first meeting as Chairwoman of the Orange County Board of Supervisors, Steel instituted a one-minute limit on public comments – a time period significantly shorter than the historical three-minute accommodation given to the public. When it came time to impose the new limit, Steel was “more lenient with corporate executives than she was with county workers and homeless advocates.” The ACLU would later sue the Orange County Board of Supervisors over Steel’s decision to limit public comments – a lawsuit in which Steel was mentioned by name. Steel opposed a voting system upgrade that could “boost turnout and save taxpayers more than $20 million” without engaging in public discussion and failed to explain her reasoning.

Steel consistently voted against moves that would increase oversight and accountability in Orange County’s government. Steel opposed an Orange County campaign finance and ethics commission, calling the effort a “symbolic gesture.” Steel later voted against putting the commission of the ballot for voters to resolve. Steel also voted in favor of a move that limited oversight on the hiring practices for taxpayer funded government jobs in the county. County leaders were worried that the high-paying “executive assistant” positions could lead to political cronyism in Supervisors’ offices, but Steel shared another councilmember’s “opposition to any attempt to influence what goes on in another elected official’s office.”

Steel Was Good For Corporations And Bad For California Families

Steel was good for corporations and their interests. Steel has proven to be a worthy ally of corporations and their interests throughout her public career. This was especially the case when Steel served on the California Board of Equalization, a state agency charged with tax administration. While serving on the Board, Steel consistently supported corporations that sought to reduce and, at times, completely avoid paying their taxes. For example, Steel supported corporate efforts to: claim tax exemptions despite having improperly applied; assign income earned in California as income made out-of-state in order to reduce their overall tax payment; write off accounts that had become worthless for tax benefit; claim welfare exemptions despite not qualifying; and avoid tax payments on stock acquisitions.

Steel regularly opposed policies and measures that would benefit Californians’ health. Steel regularly opposed policies and measures that would benefit Californians’ health, including opposition to the Affordable Care Act. In 2014 Steel argued that the Affordable Care Act was “growing the ranks of the uninsured” in California, despite the legislation reducing the number of uninsured Californians. Steel doubled-down on her opposition to the Affordable Care Act by stating the Orange County Board of Supervisors “did the right thing by blocking Obamacare implementation in the county for as long as they could.” In addition, she opposed a $1 tax hike on cigarette packs that would raise $810 million annually for cancer research and anti-smoking programs.

Steel actions, both in her public and private capacity, also exhibited longstanding opposition to California’s environment. Steel held investments in several oil and gas companies that operated in and around California’s 48th congressional district and negatively impacted the state’s environment. In her public capacity, Steel objected to a fire-prevention fee for 825,488 rural properties at a time that California was facing serious wildfire concerns, opposed a proposition that would raise about $500 million per year for California’s 278 state parks and advocated against the California Air Resources Board’s expansion of the state’s cap-and-trade program to include gasoline and diesel fuels.

Steel’s actions were detrimental to California’s students, schools and infrastructure. Steel opposed proposition 30, a measure that would increase taxes to prevent cuts to music, dance, art and physical education programs in schools. Steel regularly decried measures that would improve Orange County’s infrastructure, calling a per-mile tax that would raise money for California’s roads and bridges “Orwellian.” She also voted against a $110 million tax district that would repay the county for major infrastructure improvements and opposed a statewide ballot measure that would issue $7.1 billion in bonds to pay for water infrastructure.

Steel supported policies and expressed views that were harmful to marginalized communities and people of color. Steel repeatedly argued against affirmative action policies and was a fierce opponent of California's Sanctuary State law. She also voted against funding Orange County's Human Relations Commission, a commission dedicated to combatting hate crimes, despite an increase in the number of hate crimes in Orange County over the past year. Steel later sought to grant County Supervisors the power to control the Human Relation Counsel's staff in an effort to oust a member of the commission who had voted to release their annual report on hate crimes in the County.

While Homelessness Increased And Led To Hundreds Of Deaths In Orange County, Steel Opposed Efforts To Provide Housing

While Steel served on the Orange County Board of Supervisors, homelessness was labeled a “public health crisis,” with both the homeless population and homelessness-related deaths increasing. Three months before Steel's announced she would run for Congress, homelessness in Orange County was labeled a “public health crisis” by a Federal Judge. After Orange County changed its methodology for counting homelessness, its homeless population increased 43 percent – from 4,792 to 6,860. Similarly, from 2005 to 2018 the annual amount of homelessness associated deaths quadrupled from 53 to 250, up from 164 in 2015.

Steel opposed efforts to increase housing for people experiencing homelessness. In 2019, Steel opposed the Orange County Housing Trust – a bipartisan measure slated to provide $11 million in funding to provide housing for homeless and low-income Orange County residents. Steel also selectively enforced a one-minute limit on public comments she helped institute in Board of Supervisors meetings against homelessness activists while being “more lenient with corporate executives.” Similarly, as a Supervisor she missed a special session on housing alternatives and options for Orange County's homeless population, preventing the Board of Supervisors from holding a vote on the issue, and opposed a Republican-led proposal to use the state-owned Fairview Developmental Center in her district to provide an emergency homeless shelter.

Significant Findings

- ✓ While serving as an Orange County Supervisor, Steel twice acted to benefit private jet operator ACI Jet, one of her leading campaign contributors. In 2019, she allowed consideration of a wildly unpopular proposal to expand private flights at John Wayne Airport, which would benefit ACI Jet. Three years earlier, she voted in favor of a lucrative general aviation contract for the company, prompting a FAA investigation into the decision.
- ✓ ACI Jet was described as “one of the main beneficiaries of expanding corporate jets” at John Wayne Airport. The company was Steel’s largest aviation-industry donor, with its employees and lobbyist donating $23,450 to her campaigns.
- ✓ Furthermore, during the expansion debate, ACI Jet donated $20,000 at Steel’s request to the Korean American Chamber of Commerce – where Steel serves as a board member. Campaign finance filings show chamber leaders and board have heavily contributed to her campaigns, donating at least $65,708.
- ✓ The expansion proposal was met with public outcry, with the Mayors of Newport and Costa Mesa presenting a petition in opposition with 1,500 signatures. Specifically, the Mayors and residents lamented how the expansion would benefit the well-heeled users of private jets and complained about existing issues with pollution and jet noise that the expansion could worsen.
- ✓ Steel repeatedly used the power of her government office to prevent oversight of government officials and her political allies.
- ✓ Steel voted to defund the Office of Independent Review while it was actively investigating two of her close political allies – and campaign chairs – for misusing jailhouse informants to illegally obtain confessions.
- ✓ Steel voted against the hiring of an expert to prepare a recommendations report on oversight for the County’s law enforcement agencies.
- ✓ Steel opposed an Orange County campaign finance and ethics commission, calling the effort a “symbolic gesture.”
- ✓ Steel repeatedly used the power of her government office to promote her campaigns and those of close political allies.
- ✓ While serving as Alan Nakanishi’s campaign chairwoman, Steel helped boost his candidacy by hiring Nakanishi as an “Assistant to the Board Member,” allowing him to list the position as his occupation on the ballot.
- ✓ Steel spent taxpayer funds to send 16,000 voters campaign-style mailers for an event that also featured Tony Rackauckas, a close political ally. The event was held at a private home that only “had room for a few dozen participants.”
- ✓ After the Orange County Auditor-Controller questioned the legality of campaign-style mailers, Steel supported dismantling the County’s ability to independently audit the board.

- ✓ Steel was a career politician and Republican insider.
- ✓ In 2006, Steel claimed that she was not a career politician, but she spent the next 15 years seeking or in elected office.
- ✓ Even as she ran for Congress, Steel filed in 2019 to run for state controller in 2022.
- ✓ Mike Antonovich, a staunch supporter of the California Civil Rights Initiative, nominated Steel to the Los Angeles County Commission For Children And Families after Steel's alleged support for the Initiative forced her to resign from the Board of Airport Commissioners. Parrish demoted his deputy of eight years and hired Steel, who resigned after three months – just long enough to secure the designation of "Deputy" on the ballot. The deputy Parrish had demoted, who worked on Steel's campaign in the interim, was given his job back the day after Steel resigned.
- ✓ Steel described herself as part of an "elite group" of fundraisers for President Bush.
- ✓ When running for Supervisor, Steel claimed she would not take the position's pension, failing to mention she was already taking her Board of Equalization pension. In 2019, she reported more than $67,000 in a taxpayer-funded pension.

Steel Directed A Lucrative Contract To A Donor And Later Pushed For An Unpopular Proposal On Their Behalf

ACI Jet Was A Fixed Base Private Jet Operator At John Wayne Airport And A Leading Steel Campaign Donor

ACI Jet Was A Fixed Base Operator At John Wayne Airport, Had A Fleet Of 14 Private Jets, And Touted Jets "That Have Redefined Luxury Travel"

ACI Jet Operated A Fleet Of 14 Private Jets. "Today, ACI Jet employs more than 200 people, operates a fleet of 14 private jet aircraft, three executive terminals and FBOs, one self-service fuel service location, and a multi-million dollar maintenance facility. While ACI Jet has grown by leaps and bounds, our passion for excellence, service and integrity remains unchanged." ACI Jet, accessed [5/30/19]

ACI Jet Was A FBO (Fixed Base Operator) At John Wayne Airport. "California's Orange County Board of Supervisors unanimously approved major alterations to the general aviation infrastructure at John Wayne Airport (SNA). The proposal recently put forward by Supervisor Michelle Steel will redefine the acreage designated for GA operations and reduce the space available for larger business jets. The airport is currently served by two full-service FBOs—Atlantic Aviation and ACI Jet, the latter of which occupies facilities on both sides of the airport." Business Jet Traveler, [6/27/19]

Fixed Base Operators Offer "Five-Star Amenities For Private Jet Customers Along With Aircraft Facilities Such As Hangar Storage, Fueling, De-Icing And Repair And Maintenance Services." "One of the top perks of private jet charter is enjoying the luxury lounges on offer at fixed-base operators (FBOs) before the flight. [...] Private jet airports have dedicated terminals for their FBOs. Since their inception in the 1920s, these commercial aircraft service centres have become evermore lavish, offering five-star amenities for private jet customers along with aircraft facilities such as hangar storage, fueling, de-icing and repair and maintenance services. Flight crews also have space to relax, sleep and complete training between flights. Private jet passengers can take advantage of free aircraft shuttles and fast-track customs and immigration desks. There’s usually a concierge service to deal with luggage and check-in while passengers chill out in sleek lounges serving complimentary food and drink, take advantage of on-site hotels or catch up on work in private conference rooms.” Air Charter Service, [6/29/18]

Voice Of OC: Behested Payments Were “Donations Requested, Or Behested, By The Office Holders For Their Favorite Charities.” “Under California law, lobbyists and wealthy political contributors can make large cash donations requested, or behested, by the office holders for their favorite charities. It works the other way too. Elected officials can curry favor with large donors by creating government programs or events that promote causes, businesses or hobbies popular with wealthy contributors. There are no limits to the amount of an individual behested payment — with some as high as $100,000 — but the office-holder has 30 days after donations of $5,000 or more are received to publicly report who gave the money and the amount.” Voice of OC, [7/25/16]

Steel Voted In Favor Of Awarding The General Aviation Contract To ACI Jet, But Never Explained Her Reasoning

Steel Voted In Favor Of Awarding A Contract To ACI Jet. “A county evaluation panel chose both incumbents, Signature and Atlantic, as the first and second-ranked firms, respectively. But supervisors instead voted 4-1 in late January to award Signature's lease to ACI Jet, which was ranked fifth by the panel. The sole no vote was from Lisa Bartlett.” According to the Orange County Board of Supervisors, “THE BOARD AWARDED INTERIM LEASE FOR EASTSIDE FIXED BASEOPERATIONS AND WESTSIDE HANGARS TO ACI JET FOR TERM 2/1/17 -

A batch of emails released Monday by county officials includes correspondence from Federal Aviation Administration officials saying they’re conducting an ‘inquiry’ into a complaint by the top-ranked bidder, Signature Flight Support. The company has argued that supervisors violated federal contracting rules when they picked fifth-ranked ACI Jet.” Voice of OC, [2/27/17]

July 2017: The Federal Aviation Administration Dismissed The Complaint That The Orange County Board Of Supervisors Rigged The Bidding Process For ACI Jet. “The Federal Aviation Administration has dismissed a complaint against Orange County by the world’s largest operator of private-plane airport bases alleging that county supervisors rigged a February contracting process to award a lucrative John Wayne Airport lease to a low-ranked applicant. The FAA issued its ruling on Friday, July 21, saying that the county followed proper procedures when it awarded the lease to run the airport’s private-plane terminals to ACI Jet, the second-to-last ranked company, rather than Signature Flight Support, the incumbent and top-ranked operator.” Orange County Register, [7/25/17]

2019: Appearing To Follow Steel’s Lead, The Orange County Board Of Supervisors Were Prepared To Expand Space For Private Jets At John Wayne Airport, Which Would Benefit ACI

Voice Of OC: “Supervisors Initially Were Eager To Approve The Project Tuesday, With Most Supporting A Version That Would Remove 137 Existing Parking Spots For Small Propeller Planes To Make Room For Adding Space For 21 Private Jets To Be Based At The Airport.” “Supervisors initially were eager to approve the project Tuesday, with most supporting a version that would remove 137 existing parking spots for small propeller planes to make room for adding space for 21 private jets to be based at the airport. But after facing anger from Newport residents, a majority showed interest in capping private jets at their current number of 65 and the board agreed to wait two more weeks to take the issue up again on May 21. Critics, many of whom live under the airport’s flight path, packed the supervisors’ chambers and an overflow room to express concerns about additional jet noise over their homes, while smaller planes owners opposed being pushed out for corporate jets. The mayors of Newport Beach and Costa Mesa presented a petition against the county’s plan they said had gathered 1,500 signatures.” Voice of OC, [5/8/19]

Signs can be seen throughout the cities of Newport Beach and Costa Mesa that read ‘Stop JWA Expansion,’ including a link to the petition that opposes the construction. Mayor Foley’s petition states that the changes to the airport will negatively impact the surrounding community. A portion of the statement from the petition website reads: ‘We urge the Orange County Board of Supervisors to protect the environment surrounding John Wayne Airport and the health of residents, and stop any plans to operationally expand John Wayne Airport. We encourage the Board to keep the blend of light General Aviation the same as it is today, to not expand the footprint of JWA, and to restrict expansion of corporate and private jet traffic now and in the future.’” Epoch Times, [6/23/19]

Significant Findings

- ✓ Steel repeatedly voted for policies that would allow county officials like herself to immediately destroy public records.
  - ✓ In 2017, Steel voted for a policy that would allow county officials to immediately destroy any “working notes” they no longer needed.
  - ✓ A judge ruled against the policy and said Orange County officials “are likely breaking the law.”
  - ✓ Despite the judge’s ruling that public records must be kept for two years, in 2019 Steel voted for another policy that would allow for the immediate destruction of public records.
- ✓ Steel hindered Orange County residents’ ability to communicate with their government and elected officials.
  - ✓ In her first meeting as Chairwoman of the Orange County Board of Supervisors, Steel instituted a one-minute limit on public comments – a sizeable reduction of the historical three-minute allotment.
  - ✓ When it came time to impose the new limit, Steel was “more lenient with corporate executives than she was with county workers and homeless advocates.”
  - ✓ The ACLU sued the Orange County Board of Supervisors over Steel’s decision to limit public comments. Steel was mentioned by name in the lawsuit.
  - ✓ Steel opposed a voting system upgrade that could “boost turnout and save taxpayers more than $20 million” without engaging in public discussion and failed to explain her reasoning.
- ✓ Steel consistently voted against moves that would increase oversight and accountability in Orange County’s government.
  - ✓ Steel opposed an Orange County campaign finance and ethics commission, calling the effort a “symbolic gesture.” Voters approved the commission with 69 percent support.
  - ✓ Steel voted against putting the campaign finance and ethics commission on the ballot for voters to resolve.
  - ✓ Steel voted in favor of a move to limit oversight on hiring practices for taxpayer funded government jobs.

September 2017: Steel Voted To Allow County Officials To Immediately Destroy Any “Working Notes” They No Longer Needed: A Judge Claimed County Officials “Are Likely Breaking The Law”

September 2017: Steel Voted For A Policy Allowing County Officials To Immediately Destroy Any “Working Notes” They No Longer Needed. “Orange County supervisors have a new policy that allows immediate deletion of certain county emails and text messages about official business, a move advocates say opens the door to destruction of documents the public is entitled to under open records laws. The policy, which the supervisors approved unanimously Tuesday, says officials may ‘at any time’ destroy emails and text messages they consider to be internal memos or ‘working notes’ they no longer need. [...] All five supervisors – Andrew Do, Michelle Steel, Todd Spitzer, Shawn Nelson, and Lisa Bartlett – voted for the new policy. None expressed any concerns about it.” Voice of Orange County, [9/27/17]

July 2019: A Judge Later Ruled Against The Policy And Said Orange County Officials “Are Likely Breaking The Law.” “Orange County officials likely are breaking the law with a policy allowing immediate destruction of public records and another rule banning public commenters from asking questions of county supervisors or addressing supervisors by name unless they have permission, a Superior Court judge ruled Wednesday. Judge Sheila B. Fell now plans to issue a court order banning the county from enforcing the comment restrictions and records destruction policy.” Voice of Orange County, [7/3/19]

September 2019: Steel Voted For A Policy That Would Allow For The Immediate Destruction Of Public Records. “Orange County officials, without public discussion, approved a controversial new policy last week allowing immediate destruction of public records, despite state law and a court ruling saying they must be kept for two years. The updated rules, which supervisors approved on a 4-0 vote Sept. 10, lets officials immediately destroy records they believe are not ‘required by law or County policy to be filed and preserved,’ without imaging or copying them as state law mandates before destroying records less than two years old. [...] The new policy was approved by supervisors Andrew Do, Doug Chaffee, Michelle Steel and Lisa Bartlett. Supervisor Don Wagner did not attend the meeting. Chaffee, Steel, and Bartlett didn’t return phone messages seeking comment and asking if they believe the county’s new policy is legal.” Voice of Orange County, [9/16/19]

In Her First Meeting As Chairwoman Of The Orange County Board Of Supervisors, Steel Instituted A One-Minute Limit On Public Comments. “Supervisor Michelle Steel, in her first meeting as chairwoman of the board, instituted a one-minute limit on speakers during this Tuesday’s meeting. [...] This was the shortest speaking allotment in memory, and is the latest in a series of moves by supervisors in recent years to curtail public comments at their regular meetings, which are one of the few venues where county residents and employees have the opportunity to directly address their top elected officials.” Voice of Orange County, [1/26/17]

In Imposing Her New Limit, Steel Was “More Lenient With Corporate Executives Than She Was With County Workers And Homeless Advocates.” “But when it came time to impose the limit, she was more lenient with corporate executives than she was with county workers and homeless advocates. [...] The first several speakers were executives with aviation companies, asking for supervisors’ votes on John Wayne Airport contracts up for a decision later that day. But when they went over the one-minute mark, they were allowed several sentences further, without interruption. The president of a corporate jet services company, for example, spoke for a minute and a half before Steel politely asked him to ‘sum it up please.’ She then let him speak for another 36 seconds, giving him a total of about 2 minutes of speaking time. The very next speaker was Diana Corral, the workers’ union president. Steel handled her very differently. ‘Make sure that you [take] just one minute,’ Steel told her. [...] The next employee who spoke went 30 seconds over the limit and received an irritated admonishment from Steel to ‘stay in one minute.’ Later, a hospitality manager for a jet company was allowed to continue speaking without interruption after the speaker light turned red about how her company could accommodate private jet fliers by arranging ‘a VIP wine tour and limo for a group of 20.’” Voice of Orange County, [1/26/17]

The ACLU Sued The Orange County Board Of Supervisors Over Steel’s Decision To Limit Public Comments. “A homelessness task force is accusing the Orange County Board of Supervisors of restricting free speech at its meetings and violating California public records laws. The American Civil Liberties Union Foundation of Southern California, on behalf of the People’s Homeless Task Force, filed a lawsuit Tuesday in Santa Ana Superior Court alleging that county supervisors limit access to public documents, destroy public documents and give officials preferential treatment over members of the public, in violation of residents’ 1st Amendment rights and the Brown Act. [...] The ACLU also alleges that supervisors are more lenient when giving county officials or leaders of certain groups time to speak at meetings while consistently silencing members of the People’s Homeless Task Force, which advocates for homeless individuals and has criticized the board’s actions on homelessness. In one instance, elected officials were allowed to talk for more than the two-minute limit they were given, which was already more time than what was allowed for other speakers, according to the lawsuit. [...] In another instance, a speaker representing the Dana Point Harbor revitalization project and a speaker discussing workers’ compensation for the Sheriff’s Department exceeded their time limit without being asked to stop. At the same meeting, a member of the homeless task force, Lou Noble, was held strictly to his speaking time limit, according to the lawsuit.” Los Angeles Times, [4/9/19]

Steel Opposed An Orange County Campaign Finance And Ethics Commission, Calling The Effort A “Symbolic Gesture”

Steel Opposed An Orange County Campaign Finance And Ethics Commission, Calling The Effort A “Symbolic Gesture.” “A decade-long effort by a citizen watchdog Shirley Grindle to establish an Orange County political ethics commission took a major step forward Tuesday, with county supervisors spending hours modifying her team’s proposal before setting up a vote for later this month to put it on the upcoming June ballot. [...] The measure is the byproduct of years of advocacy for an ethics commission by the 81-year-old Grindle, her supporters, and multiple county grand juries — all frustrated over what they say is lax enforcement of local campaign finance laws by District Attorney Tony Rackauckas. In recent years, county grand juries have twice recommended that the Board of Supervisors create an ethics commission. Both times, county supervisors rejected the suggestion. [...] Supervisor Michele Steel opposed the ethics commission entirely, suggesting it won’t be doing anything that’s not currently being done. ‘It is not ethical to waste taxpayer dollars in order for you to make symbolic gestures,’ Steel told her colleagues.” Voice of Orange County, [10/6/15]

They’re called executive assistants, and they can be paid upward of $60 an hour. And now, despite an attempt by some county leaders to better monitor who can be hired, even fewer restrictions apply: the Board of Supervisors recently voted 3-2 to create four new jobs, strip the county CEO of the power to review salary requests and rid themselves of the ability to approve hiring requests.” Orange County Register, [3/14/15]

Steel Was Good For Corporations And Bad For California Families

Significant Findings

- ✓ While serving on the California Board of Equalization, Steel consistently supported corporations that sought to reduce and, at times, completely avoid paying their taxes.
- ✓ 2007-2014: Steel supported corporate efforts to: claim tax exemptions despite having improperly applied; assign income earned in California as income made out-of-state in order to reduce their overall tax payment; write off accounts that had become worthless for tax benefit; claim welfare exemptions despite not qualifying; and avoid tax payments on stock acquisitions.
- ✓ Steel regularly opposed policies and measures that would benefit Californians' health.
- ✓ In 2014 Steel argued that the Affordable Care Act was "growing the ranks of the uninsured" in California, but from 2014 to 2017 the number of uninsured Californians fell by 6 percent.
- ✓ Steel said the Orange County Board of Supervisors "did the right thing by blocking Obamacare implementation in the county for as long as they could."
- ✓ Steel opposed a $1 tax hike on cigarette packs that would raise $810 million annually for cancer research and anti-smoking programs.
- ✓ Steel's actions, both in her public and private capacity, were detrimental to California's environment.
- ✓ Steel held investments in several oil and gas companies that operated in and around California's 48th congressional district and negatively impacted the state's environment.
- ✓ Steel objected to a fire-prevention fee for 825,488 rural property owners and called the fee "unconstitutional." In the time since her objection, California was wracked by four of the largest wildfires in state history.
- ✓ Steel opposed Proposition 21, a measure that would raise about $500 million per year for California's 278 state parks by increasing vehicle license fees by $18 a year.
- ✓ Steel opposed the California Air Resources Board's expansion of the state's cap-and-trade program to include gasoline and diesel fuels.
- ✓ Steel was against measures that would benefit California's students and schools.
- ✓ Steel opposed Proposition 30, a measure that would increase taxes to prevent cuts to music, dance, art and physical education programs in schools.
- ✓ Steel opposed the legislature's ending of the teacher tax credit to close the state's budget gap.
- ✓ Steel consistently opposed measures that would improve Orange County's infrastructure.
- ✓ Steel opposed a per-mile tax that would raise money for California's roads and bridges, calling the measure "Orwellian."

- ✓ Steel voted against a $110 million tax district that would repay the county for major infrastructure improvements.
- ✓ Steel opposed a statewide ballot measure that would issue $7.1 billion in bonds to pay for water infrastructure. An Orange County Municipal Water District study found that without significant investment, the county would suffer regular water shortages by 2040.
- ✓ Steel supported policies and expressed views that were harmful to marginalized communities and people of color.
- ✓ Steel repeatedly argued against Affirmative Action policies. In 1994, Steel wrote an op-ed arguing that policies encouraging minority hiring in Los Angeles' Firefighter Corps were "draconian" and could create "a new level of racial exclusion." These views, in addition to her alleged support for the California Civil Rights Initiative, a "proposal to scrap state laws supporting quotas and racial preferences in hiring," would cause her to be "forced out" of the Los Angeles Board of Airport Commissioners.
- ✓ Steel voted against funding Orange County's Human Relations Commission, a commission dedicated to combatting hate crimes. Steel cast her dissenting vote despite an increase in the number of reported hate crimes in Orange County over the previous year.
- ✓ Steel sought to grant County Supervisors the power to directly control the Human Relation Council's staff in an effort to oust a member of the commission who voted to release their annual report on hate crimes.
- ✓ Steel was a fierce opponent of California's Sanctuary State law. She introduced a resolution condemning the law in Orange County, voted to join the Trump administration lawsuit against California, penned several op-eds criticizing the law and appeared on Fox News with Laura Ingraham to discuss her opposition.
- ✓ Steel voted to upgrade Orange County's contract with ICE, adding an additional 120 beds for immigrant detainees despite an inspection revealing that immigrants housed at the facility "have been served foul, slimy lunch meat; used moldy showers; and contended with inoperable phones."

The government stressed that all of the appellant’s activity took place in California – “100 percent of their property, 100 percent of their pay roll and 100 percent of their sales all occur in California, as represented on their own tax returns.” This made it all of their activities subject to California tax and no other jurisdiction. #### Steel Opposed Proposition 29, Calling The Measure “Flawed” And Urging Voters To “Just Say No.”

“There’s never a good time to raise taxes to support a new government spending bureaucracy. But of all times, this has to be the worst. Despite glowing rhetoric from its proponents, Proposition 29 on the June ballot is about growing government and putting billions of tax dollars in the hands of unaccountable political appointees. [...] It is clearly not the time to add another layer of government and direct funding away from education and public safety toward a new unaccountable bureaucracy. But that’s exactly what Prop. 29 does. Prop. 29 is a $735 million tax increase designed to tug on voters’ heartstrings. It sets up a bureaucracy where political appointees can spend $110 million annually on land acquisition, facilities and office space, plus another $15 million on salaries, travel and consultants. [...] Let’s not be fooled a third time by the promises of another ballot-box boondoggle. Prop. 29 proposes yet another unaccountable bureaucracy to spend our hard-earned money without the checks and balances to ensure that taxpayer dollars are spent properly. [...] Prop. 29 might be wrapped with good intentions, but under the wrapping is just another initiative that reduces Sacramento’s accountability to taxpayers and voters. Given our current economic and budget mess, it’s clearly the wrong time to grow government and raise taxes. Prop. 29 is a flawed measure that will worsen our state budget and our economy. Just say no.” Los Angeles Daily News, Michelle Steel, [6/1/12]

Occidental Petroleum Was Responsible For The World's Deadliest Offshore Disaster. “The world’s deadliest offshore oil disaster, the Piper Alpha explosion, happened 30 years this week. One hundred sixty-seven workers perished in the fire that followed an explosion on July 6, 1988, caused by a gas leak on the North Sea oil rig, 120 miles off the northeast coast of Scotland. [...] The rig was owned by Occidental Petroleum Corporation, an international oil and gas exploration and production company headquartered in Houston, Texas.” ABC News, [7/1/18]

A Report Judged That Occidental Petroleum Had Used “Inadequate Maintenance And Safety Procedures.” “The Piper Alpha disaster which killed 167 workers on 6 July 1988 off the coast of Aberdeen is the world’s deadliest ever oil rig accident. The controversy around it was heightened when a report into the disaster by Lord Cullen judged that the operator Occidental Petroleum had used inadequate maintenance and safety procedures. He made more than 100 recommendations about how safety should be improved in the North Sea. Along with other oil companies, Occidental had massively scaled back spending as the price of oil had plunged from more than $30 per barrel to $8 in the 1980s compared to today’s level of more than $100.” Guardian, [7/4/13]

Steel Objected To A Fire-Prevention Fee For 825,488 Rural Property Owners. “A week before California begins mailing notices to 825,488 rural property owners that they face paying a new fire-prevention fee, state officials are bracing for a flood of angry responses and some are predicting the charge will end up being challenged in court. The state Board of Equalization plans to begin sending out notices next week, and mail the first bills Aug. 13. Board Vice Chair Michelle Steel said this week that she objects to the fee and ‘will not be surprised to see this unconstitutional fire tax in the courts soon after bills are sent.’” [PolitiCal, 8/1/12]

Steel Opposed Proposition 21, Calling The Measure A “Cynical Ploy From Sacramento.” “Proposition 21 is a cynical ploy by Sacramento politicians to bring back the car tax and enable their addiction to wasteful government spending. State parks are some of California's true jewels, and Californians agree about the importance of conserving these treasures for future generations. But a new tax is not the answer for funding our state parks. [...] Let's recommit ourselves to conserving the wonder and beauty of our great state. But first let's reject this cynical ploy from Sacramento. Join me in voting ‘no’ on Proposition 21 in November.” [San Gabriel Valley Tribune, 8/21/10]

Steel Opposed The Tax, Stating It Would Hurt Job Creation Through Increased Fees And Regulations. “Just when California's economy appears to be moving forward again, our state regulators have found yet another way to extract more dollars from consumers' pockets and send them to Sacramento. [...] As a member of the Board of Equalization, I've seen time and time again how increasing costs through taxes, fees and regulations can hurt job creation. Already, many small businesses operate on the thinnest of margins and struggle to make payroll due to California's high taxes and excessive regulation. Further cuts to music, dance, art, and physical education programs. Larger classes and fewer teachers. Tuition increase for all California public universities. If Prop 30 doesn’t pass, this is what every Californian student has to look forward to. Steel Opposed Proposition 30. “Proposition 30, on the Nov. 6 ballot, will ask Californians to raise their own taxes by about $6.6 billion to fund California’s bloated government. Prop. 30 won’t fix our schools or stabilize the state budget; it will increase tax volatility and leave our children facing more of the same. [...] Class warfare may be a good political tactic, but it is bad policy. Prop. 30 will make life for Californians more difficult across the wealth spectrum. [...] The higher taxes in Prop. 30 will hurt the economy by taking more from Californians, making it more difficult to save for the future, to create jobs, or to find them. It will increase state spending without increasing student performance. And it will aggravate the revenue volatility that has plagued state budgeting for decades. [...] Feuer pledged to introduce a motion Friday demanding that both Park-Steel and Joe Gelman -- a Riordan appointee and a proponent of a proposal to scrap state laws supporting quotas and racial preferences in hiring -- appear before the council to explain themselves. After Park-Steel’s confirmation that there was a misunderstanding between Gelman and herself and that in fact she had never read the official proposal, Riordan announced that Park-Steel would have ‘had never done no such thing,’ (agree to Gelman’s controversial affirmative action ballot proposal) thus securing the welcomed resignation of Gelman less than a week prior to Park-Steel’s resignation last Tuesday. ## While Homelessness Increased And Led To Hundreds Of Deaths In Orange County, Steel Opposed Efforts To Provide Housing

Significant Findings

- ✓ In 2019, homelessness in Orange County was labeled a “public health crisis” by a Federal Judge. After a change in methodology, Orange County found homelessness increased 43 percent from 2017 to 2019, with coroner data indicating it was associated with hundreds of deaths.
- ✓ Steel wrote an op-ed opposing the Orange County Housing Finance Trust, a new government agency that would fund housing for homeless and low-income populations. The Housing Finance Trust “enjoyed bipartisan support from Orange County’s delegation in the state legislature, among county and city elected officials, and in the private sector.”
  - ✓ The co-author of HB 448 – the legislation that would create the Housing Finance Trust – said Steel’s op-ed was “not leadership” and chided her for fearmongering and promoting NIMBYism.
  - ✓ Governor Brown signed the legislation into law in 2018 and the Housing Finance Trust is currently spending over $11 million to fund housing for Orange County’s homeless and extremely low-income households.
- ✓ Steel was one of three Supervisors to not attend a special session on housing alternatives and options for Orange County’s homeless population, preventing the Board of Supervisors from holding a vote on the issue.
  - ✓ Months earlier, a Federal judge demanded Orange County officials find shelter for homeless populations in the County.
- ✓ Steel selectively enforced her newly instituted one-minute limit on public comments in Board of Supervisors meetings, acting “more lenient with corporate executives than she was with county workers and homeless advocates.”
  - ✓ A homelessness task force filed a lawsuit alleging the Board of Supervisors were violating public record laws and residents’ First Amendment rights. Steel was mentioned by name in the suit.
- ✓ Steel opposed the use of a state-owned facility as an emergency homeless shelter.

Homelessness In Orange County Was A “Public Health Crisis” With 6,860 People Experiencing Homelessness, Leading To Hundreds Of Deaths Annually

2019: Homelessness In Orange County Was Labeled A “Public Health Crisis” By A Federal Judge, “Leading To The Deaths Of Hundreds Of People Experiencing Homelessness.” “U.S. District Judge David O. Carter, after years of rapid growth in Orange County homeless deaths, issued an emergency request this week describing a ‘public health crisis in the County leading to the deaths of hundreds of people experiencing homelessness.’” Voice of Orange County, [2/22/19]

From 2005 To 2018, The Number Of Homeless Deaths In Orange County Quadrupled, Rising From 53 To 250. “Carter, who is presiding over federal civil rights lawsuits regarding police enforcement amid OC’s shelter shortage, laid out his concerns in a court filing Tuesday. Coroner data shows the number of homeless deaths in Orange County skyrocketed, from 53 deaths in 2005 to 164 deaths in 2015, to more than 250 deaths in 2018 – a fourfold increase.” Voice of Orange County, [2/22/19]

2017 – 2019: After Changing Its Methodology For Counting Homelessness, Orange County’s Homeless Population Increased 43 Percent From 4,792 To 6,860. “In what may be the most accurate count of Orange County’s homeless population ever, there’s a significant uptick in the number of people without a permanent home, but the data released today, April 24, also shows more than twice as many homeless people in shelters now versus two years ago. Preliminary data from the most recent federally mandated Point in Time count found 6,860 homeless people in Orange County, with 2,899 of those – a little more than 42 percent – having some kind of emergency or transitional shelter. It seems like a big jump from the 2017 tally of 4,792 homeless people (it’s about a 43 percent increase), but Orange County officials said it would be misleading to make a direct comparison because this year’s survey was much more thorough and sophisticated than in previous years.” Orange County Register, [5/7/19]

Steel Wrote An Op-Ed Opposing The Orange County Housing Finance Trust. “Assembly Bill 448, introduced by Assemblymembers Tom Daly, D-Anaheim, and Sharon Quirk-Silva, D-Fullerton, and co-authored by State Sen. Pat Bates, R-Laguna Niguel, John Moorlach, R-Costa Mesa, and Janet Nguyen, R-Garden Grove, authorizes the creation of the Orange County Housing Finance Trust, a new government agency that would fund housing for the homeless and low income in Orange County. [...] Assembly Bill 448 will not work to resolve the greater problem of the ridiculous costs of building a house in this state. In fact, it won’t do anything but approve an authority local governments already possess, and give control of the process to Sacramento. I would encourage all of our local leaders to work to effect real change in creating affordable housing for Californians instead of choosing a ‘solution’ that would only grow government and saddle us with another financial burden we can’t afford.” Orange County Register, Michelle Steel, [7/8/19]

2017: In Her First Meeting As Chairwoman Of The Orange County Board Of Supervisors, Steel Instituted A One-Minute Limit On Public Comments. “Supervisor Michelle Steel, in her first meeting as chairwoman of the board, instituted a one-minute limit on speakers during this Tuesday’s meeting. [...] This was the shortest speaking allotment in memory, and is the latest in a series of moves by supervisors in recent years to curtail public comments at their regular meetings, which are one of the few venues where county residents and employees have the opportunity to directly address their top elected officials.” Voice of Orange County, [1/26/17]

[...] The first several speakers were executives with aviation companies, asking for supervisors’ votes on John Wayne Airport contracts up for a decision later that day. But when they went over the one-minute mark, they were allowed several sentences further, without interruption. The president of a corporate jet services company, for example, spoke for a minute and a half before Steel politely asked him to ‘sum it up please.’ She then let him speak for another 36 seconds, giving him a total a total of about 2 minutes of speaking time. The very next speaker was Diana Corral, the workers’ union president. Steel handled her very differently. ‘Make sure that you [take] just one minute,’ Steel told her. [...] The next employee who spoke went 30 seconds over the limit and received an irritated admonishment from Steel to ‘stay in one minute.’ Later, a hospitality manager for a jet company was allowed to continue speaking without interruption after the speaker light turned red about how her company could accommodate private jet fliers by arranging ‘a VIP wine tour and limo for a group of 20.’” Voice of Orange County, [1/26/17]

[...] Then, referring to a rule against directing comments to an individual supervisor, Ali said, ‘I don’t like your rules. I’m going to be addressing you all by name... and I’m going to give myself 30 minutes. I’m going to be talking about homeless children for the next 30 minutes. You’ll have to arrest me and drive me from this building.’ Orange County Board Chairwoman Michelle Steel turned off Ali’s microphone and ordered deputies to clear the board room moments later. ‘My mic is off but I’m going to yell,’ Ali said.” MyNewsLA, [4/12/17]

BP PLC Was Responsible For The Worst Oil Spill In United States History. "Nine years ago, BP's Deepwater Horizon drilling rig exploded off the coast of Louisiana, causing the worst oil spill in US history. The disaster on April 20, 2010 killed 11 workers as the flaming rig sank into the Gulf of Mexico. It took nearly three months to stem the flow of oil from the ruptured undersea well. By then, four million barrels of crude had seeped into the surrounding water, endangering marine wildlife and throwing local ecosystems out of balance." Mother Jones, [4/19/19]

An Assessment By The National Oceanic And Atmospheric Administration Found That The BP Oil Spill Killed Up To 167,600 Turtles And Contributed To The Largest And Longest Dolphin Die-Off In The Gulf Of Mexico's History. "And for long-lived marine animal populations, the oil spill has been deadly. Up to 167,600 turtles from five endangered species were estimated to have been killed as a result of the spill, according to an assessment by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. The contamination contributed to the Gulf of Mexico's largest and longest dolphin die-off, and research points to lasting reproductive issues among the region's population." Occidental Petroleum Was Responsible For The World's Deadliest Offshore Disaster. “The world’s deadliest offshore oil disaster, the Piper Alpha explosion, happened 30 years this week. One hundred sixty-seven workers perished in the fire that followed an explosion on July 6, 1988, caused by a gas leak on the North Sea oil rig, 120 miles off the northeast coast of Scotland. [...] The rig was owned by Occidental Petroleum Corporation, an international oil and gas exploration and production company headquartered in Houston, Texas.” ABC News, [7/1/18]

A Report Judged That Occidental Petroleum Had Used “Inadequate Maintenance And Safety Procedures.” “The Piper Alpha disaster which killed 167 workers on 6 July 1988 off the coast of Aberdeen is the world’s deadliest ever oil rig accident. The controversy around it was heightened when a report into the disaster by Lord Cullen judged that the operator Occidental Petroleum had used inadequate maintenance and safety procedures. He made more than 100 recommendations about how safety should be improved in the North Sea. Along with other oil companies, Occidental had massively scaled back spending as the price of oil had plunged from more than $30 per barrel to $8 in the 1980s compared to today’s level of more than $100.” Guardian, [7/4/13]

Political Career

This section provides an overview of Steel's political career, from 1993 to 2019.

Significant Findings

- ✓ Steel claimed she was not a career politician, yet has spent the last 15 years seeking or in elected office.
- ✓ Steel has won every election in which she's ran, including two successful bids for California Board of Equalization and two successful bids for Orange County Board of Supervisors.
- ✓ 2005-2006: Steel served as a deputy to an Equalization Board Member for three months in order list the position as her job title on the ballot.
  - ✓ Claude Parrish, the Board Member Steel worked for, was a close political ally of her husband. Steel resigned from Parrish's office three months after being hired and just weeks after filing her campaign papers with the job title of "Equalization Board Member's Deputy."
  - ✓ The Deputy that Steel replaced, who had previously held the position for eight years, was re-hired the day after Steel resigned. He had worked as a paid fundraiser for Steel's campaign during the three-month period that she held his job.
- ✓ 2009: While serving as Alan Nakanishi's campaign chairwoman, Steel helped boost his Board of Equalization candidacy by hiring Nakanishi as an "assistant to the Board Member," allowing him to list the position as his occupation on the ballot.
  - ✓ Steel was characterized as knowing "first-hand" the boost a staff job on the Board of Equalization gives a candidate.
- ✓ 2014: Following a complaint from an opponent, Steel was barred from designating herself as a "taxpayer advocate/businesswoman" on the ballot while running for Orange County Board of Supervisors.
  - ✓ The judge ruled to remove both "taxpayer advocate" and "businesswoman" as Steel's ballot designation because the former represented a "campaign posture" and the latter was not her "principal occupation."
- ✓ Steel provided differing reasons behind her runs for office.

Political History

Steel Claimed She Was Not A Career Politician, Yet Has Spent The Last 15 Years Seeking Or In Elected Office

Steel Said She Was Not A Career Politician

Steel Said She Was Not A Career Politician. “Ms. Steel, who likely has a long political career ahead of her, told us she is not a career politician. And that is good, because it is important to remember that the district seat is not a stepping stone, but a full-time job all its own.” Orange County Register, Editorial, [5/2/14]

2005: Steel First Filed To Run For The California Board Of Equalization

2005: Steel Filed Her Statement Of Intent To Run For The California Board Of Equalization. ‘He recently filed a statement of intent to run for the same Board of Equalization post being vacated next year by Claude Parrish. [...] Also filing a statement of intent to run for the seat is Michelle Park Steel, the wife of former state GOP Chairman Shawn Steel. San Bernardino County Supervisor Bill Postmus is also considering running.’ [Riverside Press Enterprise, 3/28/05]

2006: Steel Said She Would Not Use Her Position On The Board Of Equalization As A Stepping Stone To Other Political Offices

Steel Said She Would Not Use Her Position On The Board Of Equalization As A Stepping Stone To Other Political Offices. ‘WHAT WOULD YOU DO DIFFERENTLY THAN YOUR OPPONENTS? I come to this office not as a career politician using the board as a stepping stone, but as a businesswoman, a former employee of the board who understands tax policy intricately, who has no learning curve on tax issues.’ [Riverside Press Enterprise, 5/30/06]

2010: Steel Ran For Reelection To The California Board Of Equalization

2010: Steel Ran For Reelection To The California Board Of Equalization. “Reporting from Sacramento — All four seats on California’s elected tax board are up for grabs this November, but in three of the four contests incumbents have an inside track to reelection. [...] Incumbent Republican Michelle Steel of Rolling Hills, who represents much of Southern California outside of Los Angeles, faces perennial Democratic challenger Mary Christian Heising of La Jolla and three minor-party hopefuls.” Los Angeles Times, [10/10/10]

October 2012: Steel Filed To Run For The Orange County Board Of Supervisors

October 2012: Steel Filed To Run For The Orange County Board Of Supervisors. According to the Orange County Registrar of Voters, Steel filed her candidate intention statement to run as a County Supervisor for the Orange County Board of Supervisor’s 2nd district on October 2, 2012. [Orange County Registrar of Voters, Michelle Steel Candidate Intention Statement, 10/2/12]

January 2015: Steel Filed For Reelection To Orange County’s Board Of Supervisors

January 2015: Steel Filed For Reelection To Orange County’s Board Of Supervisors. According to the Orange County Registrar of Voters, Steel filed her candidate intention statement to run for reelection as a County Supervisor for the Orange County Board of Supervisor’s 2nd district on January 22, 2015. [Orange County Registrar of Voters, Michelle Steel Candidate Intention Statement, 1/22/15]

January 2019: Steel Created A Committee To Run For State Controller In 2022

In January 2019, Steel Created A Committee To Run For California State Controller In 2022. According to the California Secretary of State, Steel created a campaign committee to run for California State Controller in 2022. The committee has raised $13,629,99 and spent $1,690.70. As of February 13, 2019, Steel had made no significant public indication that she was running in this race. May 2019: Steel Filed To Run For U.S. Congress In California’s 48th District

May 2019: Steel Filed To Run For U.S. Congress In California’s 48th District. According to her Statement of Candidacy from the Federal Election Commission, Steel filed to run for U.S. Congress in California’s 48th Congressional District on May 1, 2019. Federal Election Commission, Statement of Candidacy, [5/1/19]

Steel Announced Her Run For Congress In Los Angeles, Outside Of California’s 48th Congressional District. “But Steel told Radio Korea during a Thursday press conference at the Korean American Chamber of Commerce in Los Angeles that she’s been considering a run for CA-48 since the November election. [...] Rouda’s campaign team on Friday sent a fundraising email criticizing Steel’s choice to make her announcement outside of Orange County and highlighting her strong ties to President Donald Trump.” Orange County Register, [4/26/19]

1993: Steel Said She Became Interested In Politics After She Saw “The Damage Faced By Fellow Korean-Americans” During The Los Angeles Riots. “Michelle Eunjoo Park-Steel said she became interested in politics after last spring’s riots when she saw the damage faced by fellow Korean-Americans.” Los Angeles Times, [7/17/93]

2014: While Campaigning For The Board Of Equalization, Steel Said Her Desire To Run For Public Office Was “Fueled By The Way Her Mother Was Treated By The State Tax Agency.” “She said her desire to run for public office was fueled by the way her mother was treated by the state tax agency, the California Board of Equalization, after she opened a clothing store in Los Angeles. ‘She got harassed and abused by tax agency,’ Mrs. Steel said. ‘So I had a grudge against them. She paid taxes that she didn’t owe, plus collecting interest on top of it.’” Washington Times, [7/17/14]

2019: Steel Has Repeated This Version Of Events While Campaigning For Congress. “I first became interested in public service at an early age when I watched my single working mother struggle to fight an unwarranted tax bill from the California State Board of Equalization. As an immigrant who owned a small business, my mother lacked the resources she needed to appeal the state agency and reluctantly acquiesced to the board’s demands. After watching my own mother struggle, I knew I needed to help those who couldn’t help themselves and be a strong voice for the voiceless. I knew I needed to serve my community, so I decided to run for public office.” Michellesteelca.com, Michelle Steel for U.S. Congress, accessed [11/13/19]

November 1995: Steel Was Appointed To Los Angeles County’s Commission For Children And Families Two Months After Her Views On Affirmative Action Forced Her To Resign From The Board Of Airport Commissioners

Commissioners. “The former Los Angeles airport commissioner who quit her job two months ago when her views on affirmative action came under fire was appointed by the Board of Supervisors on Tuesday to the county’s Commission for Children and Families.” [Los Angeles Times, 11/8/95]

September 1995: Steel Resigned From The Board Of Airport Commissioners Over Her Supposed Endorsement Of The California Civil Rights Initiative, A “Proposal To Scrap State Laws Supporting Quotas And Racial Preferences In Hiring.” “Later in the day, even before the dust had settled on the racially charged council debate, the saga of the appointment of Michelle Park-Steel to the Airport Commission took other wild twists when it was announced -- and then denied -- that the appointee had endorsed a controversial measure that civil rights supporters say would gut affirmative action. [...] Feuer pledged to introduce a motion Friday demanding that both Park-Steel and Joe Gelman -- a Riordan appointee and a proponent of a proposal to scrap state laws supporting quotas and racial preferences in hiring -- appear before the council to explain themselves. It was Gelman -- already an anathema to civil rights leaders -- who issued a press release only hours after Park-Steel was narrowly confirmed by the council. The release quoted her as saying she endorsed his initiative.” Los Angeles Times, [9/7/95]

Steel Was Nominated To The County Commission For Children And Families By Mike Antonovich, A Staunch Supporter Of The California Civil Rights Initiative. “Michelle E. Park-Steel of Tarzana was nominated for the post by Supervisor Mike Antonovich and approved by the board on a 4-0 vote without discussion. Supervisor Zev Yaroslavsky was absent. [...] After her resignation, Park-Steel said, Antonovich -- who is one of the initiative’s staunchest supporters -- asked if she was interested in a spot on the 15-member Commission for Children and Families.” [Los Angeles Times, 11/8/95]

Steel Admitted That She Had “Little Knowledge About The Responsibilities Of The Commission” And Said “It Was A Surprise” That She Had Been Appointed. “During a phone interview, Park-Steel admitted that she had little knowledge about the responsibilities of the commission, and said she expected her nomination to generate at least some controversy. [...] ‘It was a surprise that Mike appointed me,’ she said. ‘He sent me a letter saying I would be a good candidate. I’m very excited.’” [Los Angeles Times, 11/8/95]

2004: Steel Raised More Than $200,000 For George W. Bush’s Reelection Campaign

2004: Steel Raised More Than $200,000 For George W. Bush’s Reelection Campaign. “Steel is a Bush ‘Ranger,’ the president’s nickname for those who raise more than $200,000 for his re-election campaign. [...] While Steel counts himself as a longtime Bush supporter, neither he nor his wife, Michelle - also a Ranger - dove into their Rolodexes with the same fervor in the 2000 campaign. Like the Steels, about half of Bush’s 2004 Rangers and Pioneers were not on the list four years ago.” [Daily News of Los Angeles, 7/11/04]

April 2006: Parrish’s Deputy Of Eight Years Worked For Steel’s Campaign After His Demotion And Was Re-Hired To His Original Position The Day After Steel Resigned. “State personnel records show that Parrish demoted Marcus Frishman, his deputy of eight years, on Dec. 30. Parrish then moved Steel, whose official campaign biography shows little accounting experience, into the job. She filed her campaign papers in mid-March with the job title of ‘Equalization Boardmember’s Deputy.’ On March 31, personnel records show, she resigned. During those three months, Frishman worked as an assistant to Parrish. According to the state, his monthly salary was reduced from $9,223 to $6,394. He was hired, for an undisclosed amount, to work for Steel’s campaign. Frishman was reinstated as deputy April 1, with a $91 monthly raise over the higher salary.” Los Angeles Times, [5/17/06]

2009: Steel Helped Boost Nakanishi's Candidacy By Hiring Him As "An Assistant To The Board Member," Allowing Nakanishi To List The Position As His Occupation On The Ballot. "Board of Equalization candidate Alan Nakanishi has gotten a bit of a boost in his bid to replace term-out board member Bill Leonard. The former Republican assemblyman and practicing doctor was recently hired by his campaign chairwoman, BOE District 3 Member Michelle Steel, as an 'assistant to the board member.' In addition to pulling in an additional $7,852 a month, the new title means Nakanishi will be able to request that his gig with the board be listed as his profession on the ballot and play up the 'experience' card in the crowded GOP primary for the safe Republican seat. [...] Nakanishi's been running hard for the seat since the outset, spending hundreds of thousands of dollars to get his name on slate mailers for the election. 2018: During Her Reelection Campaign, Opponents Criticized Steel For “Doing Little While In Office” And Only Introducing “A Total Of Five Agenda Items.” “Steel’s competitors have accused her of doing little while in office. For instance, since 2015 Steel has introduced a total of five agenda items, when not counting nonbinding resolutions and committee appointments. Steel’s initiatives include an unsuccessful attempt to create an off-leash dog beach, a vote to undo her earlier support of a county plan to analyze placing homeless shelters in three cities, including one in Huntington Beach, an effort to tell voters how much they would be spending on an ethics commission she doesn’t support, and an action in which county supervisors increased their oversight of a commission tasked with reducing hate crimes, a commission Steel previously sought to not fund.” Orange County Register, [5/16/18]

Steel's Appointee To The Commission Had Voted Against Releasing Their Annual Report On Hate Crimes, And Steel Was Reportedly Seeking To Oust A Member On The Commission Who Voted To Release It. "Additionally, Do and Steel's appointees to the commission voted in June to not release the commission's annual report about hate crimes. That decision was opposed by Irvine Police Chief Mike Hamel, who serves on the commission and scheduled a vote in August in which the commission voted to release the report. [...] Michelle Steel has been trying to get Hamel replaced on the Human Relations Commission with Clare Venegas, the former chief executive of the influential Republican group, the Lincoln Club of Orange County, according to Spitzer, who noted Hamel is a representative of his district." - ✓ While serving as an Orange County Supervisor, Steel twice acted to benefit private jet operator ACI Jet, one of her leading campaign contributors. In 2019, she allowed consideration of a wildly unpopular proposal to expand private flights at John Wayne Airport, which would benefit ACI Jet. Three years earlier, she voted in favor of a lucrative general aviation contract for the company, prompting a FAA investigation into the decision.
- ✓ ACI Jet was described as “one of the main beneficiaries of expanding corporate jets” at John Wayne Airport. The company was Steel’s largest aviation-industry donor, with its employees and lobbyist donating $23,450 to her campaigns.
- ✓ Furthermore, during the expansion debate, ACI Jet donated $20,000 at Steel’s request to the Korean American Chamber of Commerce – where Steel serves as a board member. Campaign finance filings show chamber leaders and board have heavily contributed to her campaigns, donating at least $65,708.
- ✓ The expansion proposal was met with public outcry, with the Mayors of Newport and Costa Mesa presenting a petition in opposition with 1,500 signatures. Specifically, the Mayors and residents lamented how the expansion would benefit the well-heeled users of private jets and complained about existing issues with pollution and jet noise that the expansion could worsen.
- ✓ In her first meeting as chair of the Board of Supervisors, Steel instituted a one-minute limit on public comments.
- ✓ When it came time to impose the new limit, Steel was “more lenient with corporate executives than she was with County workers and homeless advocates.
- ✓ The ACLU sued the Orange County Board of Supervisors over Steel’s decision to limit public comments. Steel was mentioned by name in the lawsuit.
- ✓ Steel repeatedly voted to allow County officials such as herself to immediately destroy public records.
- ✓ September 2017: Steel voted to allow county officials to immediately destroy any “working notes” they no longer needed.
- ✓ September 2019: Steel voted to allow for the immediate destruction of public records, despite public law and a court ruling saying they must be kept for two years.
- ✓ After clashing with the Auditor-Controller over alleged waste, Steel supported dismantling the County’s ability to independently audit the board.
- ✓ Steel supported a proposal to limit oversight on hiring practices for taxpayer-funded government jobs.

- ✓ Steel sought to grant County Supervisors the power to directly control the Human Relation Council's staff in an effort to oust a member of the commission who voted to release their annual report on hate crimes.
- ✓ Steel's appointee to the commission voted against releasing their annual report on hate crimes.
- ✓ Another Board Member alleged that Steel was seeking to oust Mike Hamel, a member of the commission who voted to release the annual report on hate crimes, and replace him with a member of an influential Republican group.
- ✓ Steel's Chief of Staff was named in a lawsuit the alleged he improperly used county e-mail for political activity at a previous job.
- ✓ Steel approved Aleman, a former staffer on her husband's campaign, as an assistant assessor even though he didn't have a college degree.

ACI Jet Was A Fixed Base Operator At John Wayne Airport

ACI Jet Was A Fixed Base Operator At John Wayne Airport, Had A Fleet Of 14 Private Jets, And Touted Jets "That Have Redefined Luxury Travel"

ACI Jet Operated A Fleet Of 14 Private Jets. "Today, ACI Jet employs more than 200 people, operates a fleet of 14 private jet aircraft, three executive terminals and FBOs, one self-service fuel service location, and a multi-million dollar maintenance facility. While ACI Jet has grown by leaps and bounds, our passion for excellence, service and integrity remains unchanged." ACI Jet, accessed [5/30/19]

ACI Jet Was A FBO (Fixed Base Operator) At John Wayne Airport. "California's Orange County Board of Supervisors unanimously approved major alterations to the general aviation infrastructure at John Wayne Airport (SNA). The proposal recently put forward by Supervisor Michelle Steel will redefine the acreage designated for GA operations and reduce the space available for larger business jets. The airport is currently served by two full-service FBOs—Atlantic Aviation and ACI Jet, the latter of which occupies facilities on both sides of the airport." Business Jet Traveler, [6/27/19]

Fixed Base Operators Offer "Five-Star Amenities For Private Jet Customers Along With Aircraft Facilities Such As Hangar Storage, Fueling, De-Icing And Repair And Maintenance Services." "One of the top perks of private jet charter is enjoying the luxury lounges on offer at fixed-base operators (FBOs) before the flight. [...] Private jet airports have dedicated terminals for their FBOs. Since their inception in the 1920s, these commercial aircraft service centres have become evermore lavish, offering five-star amenities for private jet customers along with aircraft facilities such as hangar storage, fueling, de-icing and repair and maintenance services. Flight crews also have space to relax, sleep and complete training between flights. Private jet passengers can take advantage of free aircraft shuttles and fast-track customs and immigration desks. There's usually a concierge service to deal with luggage and check-in while passengers chill out in sleek lounges serving complimentary food and drink, take advantage of on-site hotels or catch up on work in private conference rooms.” Air Charter Service, [6/29/18]

2016: ACI Jet Won A “Lucrative” General Aviation Contract At John Wayne Airport, Sparking An Investigation Into How ACI Won The Contract

Steel Voted In Favor Of Awarding The General Aviation Contract To ACI Jet, But Never Explained Her Reasoning

Steel Voted In Favor Of Awarding A Contract To ACI Jet. “A county evaluation panel chose both incumbents, Signature and Atlantic, as the first and second-ranked firms, respectively. But supervisors instead voted 4-1 in late January to award Signature’s lease to ACI Jet, which was ranked fifth by the panel. The sole no vote was from Lisa Bartlett.” According to the Orange County Board of Supervisors, “THE BOARD AWARDED INTERIM LEASE FOR EASTSIDE FIXED BASEOPERATIONS AND WESTSIDE HANGARS TO ACI JET FOR TERM 2/1/17 - 12/31/18.” Michelle Steel voted in favor. Voice of OC, [2/27/17; Orange Board of Supervisors, Meeting Minutes, 1/24/17]

Voice Of OC: The Board Of Supervisors Awarded ACI Jet “The Lucrative General Aviation Management Contract In 2017, Without Publicly Explaining Their Decision.” “ACI Jet ranked fifth out of six in a county bidding process, but county supervisors awarded it the lucrative general aviation management contract in 2017, without publicly explaining their decision.” Voice of OC, [5/8/19]

ACI Jet Was Awarded The Contract Despite Being Ranked Fifth Out Of Six Bidders

2016: Supervisors Awarded ACI Jet A “Lucrative” General Aviation Contract After Being Ranked Fifth Out Of Six By An Evaluation Panel While Out Donating The Top-Ranked Firm 2-To-1 In The Second Half Of 2016. “In 2016, supervisors supervisors granted John Wayne Airport’s lucrative general aviation lease to a firm, ACI Jet, that was ranked fifth out of six by the county’s evaluation panel. In the run-up to awarding that contract, the supervisors collected thousands of dollars in campaign donations from people who work or advocate for the companies vying for the lease. ACI and its supporters outspent the top-ranked firm, Signature Flight Support, by 2-to-1 in contributions to supervisors in the second half of 2016, according to a Voice of OC review of campaign filings. ACI’s supporters contributed $7,700, while Signature’s supporters spent $2,750.” Voice of OC, [8/27/19]

A County Memorandum Ranked ACI Jet As Fifth Out Of Six Bidders, And Stated “JWA Is Recommending That The Two Highest Ranked Respondent Firms [...] Be Selected By The Board.” Orange County, Memorandum S58A, [12/1/16 (page 4)]

The following table sets forth the scores and ranking of each firm that met the minimum qualifications as defined in the RFQ:

Respondent Firm	Overall Score	Ranking
Signature Flight Support	2469.00	1
Atlantic Aviation	2461.50	2
Jet Aviation	1915.50	3
Clay Lacy Aviation, Inc.	1709.50	4
ACI Jet	1643.00	5
Advanced Air, LLC	1348.50	6

JWA is recommending that the two highest ranked respondent firms, Signature Flight Support and Atlantic Aviation, be selected by the Board for award of the Interim Leases.

The FAA Investigated How ACI Jet Was Awarded The Contract; The Complaint Regarding The Process Was Dismissed

February 2017: The Federal Aviation Administration Was Investigating ACI Jet’s Contract Award After The Top Ranked Company In A County Evaluation Filed A Complaint. “Federal aviation officials are looking into why Orange County supervisors plan to award a lucrative John Wayne Airport lease to a company that was ranked fifth by the county’s official evaluation panel. A batch of emails released Monday by county officials includes correspondence from Federal Aviation Administration officials saying they’re conducting an ‘inquiry’ into a complaint by the top-ranked bidder, Signature Flight Support. The company has argued that supervisors violated federal contracting rules when they picked fifth-ranked ACI Jet.” Voice of OC, [2/27/17]

July 2017: The Federal Aviation Administration Dismissed The Complaint That The Orange County Board Of Supervisors Rigged The Bidding Process For ACI Jet. “The Federal Aviation Administration has dismissed a complaint against Orange County by the world’s largest operator of private-plane airport bases alleging that county supervisors rigged a February contracting process to award a lucrative John Wayne Airport lease to a low-ranked applicant. The FAA issued its ruling on Friday, July 21, saying that the county followed proper procedures when it awarded the lease to run the airport’s private-plane terminals to ACI Jet, the second-to-last ranked company, rather than Signature Flight Support, the incumbent and top-ranked operator.” Orange County Register, [7/25/17]

2019: Appearing To Follow Steel’s Lead, The Orange County Board Of Supervisors Were Prepared To Expand Space For Private Jets At John Wayne Airport, Which Would Benefit ACI

Supervisors Were Responsible For Oversight Of John Wayne Airport. “Orange County supervisors lambasted top officials of John Wayne Airport from the dais Tuesday for what they consider poor management of lucrative airport contracts for private plane services, and then rejected the staff recommendation for a major contract. [...] Supervisors, who oversee the airport, have heard complaints from individuals and business owners about the contractors who run the airport’s general aviation operations. Those services include fuel, hangar, parking, rental, maintenance, and other services for business jets, prop planes, and other aircraft that don’t fly out of the normal passenger terminals.” Voice of OC, [1/25/17]

Voice Of OC: “Supervisors Initially Were Eager To Approve The Project Tuesday, With Most Supporting A Version That Would Remove 137 Existing Parking Spots For Small Propeller Planes To Make Room For Adding Space For 21 Private Jets To Be Based At The Airport.” “Supervisors initially were eager to approve the project Tuesday, with most supporting a version that would remove 137 existing parking spots for small propeller planes to make room for adding space for 21 private jets to be based at the airport. But after facing anger from Newport residents, a majority showed interest in capping private jets at their current number of 65 and the board agreed to wait two more weeks to take the issue up again on May 21. Critics, many of whom live under the airport's flight path, packed the supervisors' chambers and an overflow room to express concerns about additional jet noise over their homes, while smaller planes owners opposed being pushed out for corporate jets. The mayors of Newport Beach and Costa Mesa presented a petition against the county's plan they said had gathered 1,500 signatures." Voice of OC, [5/8/19]

May 2019: Voice Of OC: During An Orange County Supervisors Meeting “None Of The 40-Plus Public Commenters Spoke In Favor Of Adding More Jets.” “Newport Beach residents and small plane owners succeeded Tuesday in getting county supervisors to step back from controversial plans to expand private jet spaces at John Wayne Airport. [...] None of the 40-plus public commenters spoke in favor of adding more jets.” Voice of OC, [5/8/19]

Mayors Of Newport Beach And Costa Mesa Claimed They Had A Petition Opposing The Expansion With 1,500 Signatures. “Supervisors initially were eager to approve the project Tuesday, with most supporting a version that would remove 137 existing parking spots for small propeller planes to make room for adding space for 21 private jets to be based at the airport. But after facing anger from Newport residents, a majority showed interest in capping private jets at their current number of 65 and the board agreed to wait two more weeks to take the issue up again on May 21. Critics, many of whom live under the airport's flight path, packed the supervisors' chambers and an overflow room to express concerns about additional jet noise over their homes, while smaller planes owners opposed being pushed out for corporate jets. The Mayor Of Costa Mesa Opposed The JWA Expansion, Urging “The Orange County Board Of Supervisors To Protect The Environment Surrounding John Wayne Airport And The Health Of Residents.”

“A petition has been created by the Democratic Mayor of Costa Mesa, Katrina Foley, to stop the proposed alteration of John Wayne Airport (JWA) in Orange County, California, which is planned to bring the airport into compliance with requirements set by the FAA. Signs can be seen throughout the cities of Newport Beach and Costa Mesa that read ‘Stop JWA Expansion,’ including a link to the petition that opposes the construction. Mayor Foley’s petition states that the changes to the airport will negatively impact the surrounding community. A portion of the statement from the petition website reads: ‘We urge the Orange County Board of Supervisors to protect the environment surrounding John Wayne Airport and the health of residents, and stop any plans to operationally expand John Wayne Airport. We encourage the Board to keep the blend of light General Aviation the same as it is today, to not expand the footprint of JWA, and to restrict expansion of corporate and private jet traffic now and in the future.’” Epoch Times, [6/23/19]

When It Came Time To Impose The New Limit, Steel Was “More Lenient With Corporate Executives Than She Was With County Workers And Homeless Advocates.” “But when it came time to impose the limit, she was more lenient with corporate executives than she was with county workers and homeless advocates. [...] The first several speakers were executives with aviation companies, asking for supervisors’ votes on John Wayne Airport contracts up for a decision later that day. But when they went over the one-minute mark, they were allowed several sentences further, without interruption. The president of a corporate jet services company, for example, spoke for a minute and a half before Steel politely asked him to ‘sum it up please.’ She then let him speak for another 36 seconds, giving him a total of about 2 minutes of speaking time. The very next speaker was Diana Corral, the workers’ union president. Steel handled her very differently. ‘Make sure that you [take] just one minute,’ Steel told her. [...] The next employee who spoke went 30 seconds over the limit and received an irritated admonishment from Steel to ‘stay in one minute.’ Later, a hospitality manager for a jet company was allowed to continue speaking without interruption after the speaker light turned red about how her company could accommodate private jet fliers by arranging ‘a VIP wine tour and limo for a group of 20.’” Voice of Orange County, [1/26/17]

The ACLU Sued The Orange County Board Of Supervisors Over Steel’s Decision To Limit Public Comments. “A homelessness task force is accusing the Orange County Board of Supervisors of restricting free speech at its meetings and violating California public records laws. The American Civil Liberties Union Foundation of Southern California, on behalf of the People’s Homeless Task Force, filed a lawsuit Tuesday in Santa Ana Superior Court alleging that county supervisors limit access to public documents, destroy public documents and give officials preferential treatment over members of the public, in violation of residents’ 1st Amendment rights and the Brown Act. [...] The ACLU also alleges that supervisors are more lenient when giving county officials or leaders of certain groups time to speak at meetings while consistently silencing members of the People’s Homeless Task Force, which advocates for homeless individuals and has criticized the board’s actions on homelessness. In one instance, elected officials were allowed to talk for more than the two-minute limit they were given, which was already more time than what was allowed for other speakers, according to the lawsuit. [...] In another instance, a speaker representing the Dana Point Harbor revitalization project and a speaker discussing workers' compensation for the Sheriff's Department exceeded their time limit without being asked to stop. At the same meeting, a member of the homeless task force, Lou Noble, was held strictly to his speaking time limit, according to the lawsuit." Los Angeles Times, [4/9/19]

Barnes Promoted An Officer Who Engaged In Sexual Behavior With Suspect And Then Falsified Reports. "Avalos conceded on the witness stand that he'd sent Vasquez—a heroin addict who called him 'hon' and supplied him with breast pics—advance notice that undercover agents were snooping around her motel, looking to make drug arrests. [...] Barnes... promoted report-falsifier Avalos to sergeant." Orange County Weekly, [6/5/19]

Barnes Awarded 'Deputy Of The Year' Honors To Officer Involved In Controversial Shooting. "Petropulos said, 'Fuck it,' placed the Glock at point-blank range on Witt's left shoulder and fired. [...] In the aftermath, Petropulos—who makes more than $255,000 annually in public funds—told a tale at odds with the audio recording and probability. [...] Petropulos won 'deputy of the year' honors." Orange County Weekly, [6/5/19]

Hibbs Was Accused Of Using Excessive Force And Landed A Pay Raise Under Barnes. "Though Lares was handcuffed and secured in the back of a patrol car without leg room, Hibbs twice fired his Taser weapon. To justify his violence, he claimed he'd felt physically threatened and in danger. But prosecutors believed it was a classic case of excessive force and charged him after securing damning testimony from five other officers—Trent Hoffman, Robert Long, Bryan Thomas, Rob Gunzel and James Wicks—who'd witnessed the tasing. [...] After the OCSD deputies' chicanery or uses of force when facing imaginary threats, they suffered the following fates [...] Hibbs also landed a pay raise and sergeant's job." ### Hutchens’ Orange County Sheriff Department Was Investigated For Running An Illegal Jailhouse Informant Program

Hutchens Denied Allegations That The Orange County Sheriff’s Office Ran A Coordinated Jailhouse Informant Program. “Although she acknowledged that her deputies had for years used informants in county jails in order to get incriminating statements from certain inmates, Orange County Sheriff Sandra Hutchens on Wednesday denied allegations that a coordinated jailhouse informant program exists in the county and said a scandal pertaining to it was largely overblown.” Huffington Post, [7/7/17]

Hutchens Failed To Turn Over Evidence In The Jailhouse Informant Program Case. “Although she acknowledged that her deputies had for years used informants in county jails in order to get incriminating statements from certain inmates, Orange County Sheriff Sandra Hutchens on Wednesday denied allegations that a coordinated jailhouse informant program exists in the county and said a scandal pertaining to it was largely overblown. [...] Goethals questioned Hutchens about the sheriff’s department’s continued failure to disclose all records related to the informant issue — even now, more than four years after he issued his first order that it do so. Goethals has repeatedly lambasted Hutchens for indicating that all pertinent documents have been turned over, only to additional documentation “wash ashore” into his courtroom later. [...] Hutchens responded that she’s aware of the ‘embarrassing’ criticism, adding that the agency has changed some policies pertaining to training deputies in how to use informants and disclosing evidence gleaned from them.” Huffington Post, [7/7/17]

Hutchens Criticized State Investigation Into The Use Of Illegal Jailhouse Informants. “Sheriff Sandra Hutchens on Friday lambasted an investigation by state authorities into the use of illegal jailhouse informants, questioning why the California Attorney General's Office has already blamed her employees for the scandal. 'I'm not confident with the attorney general investigation,' Hutchens told supervisors during a workshop about how to better oversee Orange County's criminal justice system." #### Steel Opposed The Legislature's Ending Of The Teacher Tax Credit To Close The State's Budget Gap.

"Teachers should be reimbursed for their out-of-pocket classroom expenses, and tax credits give each teacher the greatest flexibility to decide the classroom supplies they need most. The state Legislature has the unenviable task of closing a $2 billion budget gap, but the $165 million Teacher's Tax Credit is only milk money out of the state's $140 billion budget." Steel Opposed Governor Schwarzenegger's State Budget Proposal Because Of Concerns About Projected Revenues And Budget Revenues. OPINION: "Last month, Gov. Schwarzenegger unveiled his May revision to California's $146 billion state budget. His proposal includes reasons for Californians to cheer; record money for schools and early repayment of bond debt are just two. But, 'Can we afford it?' California's Legislative Analyst Elizabeth Hill - the Suze Orman of Sacramento - immediately released a critical report evaluating California's capacity to spend. The Legislature needs to follow the legislative analyst's prescient advice when crafting this budget. Among the list of concerns are overly optimistic assumptions about projected revenue, which would potentially create a $3 billion deficit this year and $5 billion deficit the following year. Furthermore, the proposed budget maintains a mere $529 million budget reserve." [Riverside Business Press, Michelle Steel, 1/11/07]

Steel Opposed A Sales Tax On Services Despite Estimates That The Additional Tax Could “Single-Handedly Eliminate California’s Budget Deficit.” “One idea, a new sales tax on services, stands out as the worst budget solution for desert taxpayers. A new sales tax on services is an unfair double tax on consumers that could devastate the desert’s $3.1 billion tourism industry. All the while, this new tax won’t contribute a single penny toward this year’s budget. Late last month, the Board of Equalization chairwoman reported to legislative leaders that a new sales tax on services could single-handedly eliminate California’s budget deficit. ‘At the state general fund rate of 5 percent, a tax levy on a broad base of services in California could generate in the neighborhood of $45 billion annually,’ the state’s top sales tax official wrote. [...] If the Legislature’s past performance is any indication of the future, taxpayers need to do their part to oppose this egregious tax increase. [...] Class warfare may be a good political tactic, but it is bad policy. Prop. 30 will make life for Californians more difficult across the wealth spectrum. [...] The higher taxes in Prop. 30 will hurt the economy by taking more from Californians, making it more difficult to save for the future, to create jobs, or to find them. Steel Dodged State Law By Sending Taxpayer-Funded Mailers To Constituents Before The Start Of A Blackout Period On Spending. “A state law intended to stop elected officials from campaigning with public funds in the weeks just before elections might have prompted Orange County officials to step up such spending earlier this year. During a six-week window starting in late February, four county supervisors running for public office — Michelle Steel, Todd Spitzer, Shawn Nelson and Lisa Bartlett — cumulatively sent out $241,000 worth of tax-financed mass mailers to constituents, before the start of a blackout period on such spending in advance of the June 5 primary, county records show. [...] Steel, who is running for re-election in a competitive race in the county’s 2nd District, sent at least 115,000 mailers in the weeks before the blackout, using about $33,000 in tax money. One mailer advertised a hiring fair, and another simply highlighted services offered by CalOptima, the county’s longtime health care service for poor and disabled residents. Both featured Steel’s name prominently. Before this election cycle, Steel had sent only one mailer in her three years in office, at a cost of $2,600. ‘The big tell (that it’s campaigning) is that they’re not sending out mailers in nonelection years,’ Stern said” Orange County Register, [5/1/18]

Steel Opposed An Orange County Campaign Finance And Ethics Commission, Calling The Effort A “Symbolic Gesture.” “A decade-long effort by a citizen watchdog Shirley Grindle to establish an Orange County political ethics commission took a major step forward Tuesday, with county supervisors spending hours modifying her team’s proposal before setting up a vote for later this month to put it on the upcoming June ballot. [...] The measure is the byproduct of years of advocacy for an ethics commission by the 81-year-old Grindle, her supporters, and multiple county grand juries — all frustrated over what they say is lax enforcement of local campaign finance laws by District Attorney Tony Rackauckas. In recent years, county grand juries have twice recommended that the Board of Supervisors create an ethics commission. Both times, county supervisors rejected the suggestion. [...] Supervisor Michele Steel opposed the ethics commission entirely, suggesting it won't be doing anything that's not currently being done. The Voting System Upgrade Would Send Every Voter A Mail Ballot Beginning In 2018 And Could “Boost Turnout And Save Taxpayers More Than $20 Million.” “California’s top election official has accused Orange County’s governing board of playing politics and whipping up unfounded fears of voter fraud by rejecting a proposed overhaul of the county’s voting system that proponents say could boost turnout and save taxpayers more than $20 million. [...] Under Kelley’s proposal, the county would send every voter a mail ballot beginning in 2018. The county also would install 93 ‘military-grade’ secure drop boxes in various communities and replace more than 1,000 precinct polling places with 150 ‘vote centers.’ The vote centers would open 10 days before an election to allow people to cast ballots in person or drop off mail ballots. A county analysis shows the changes would be significantly cheaper than replacing aging voting machines at each polling place. Kelley argued the shift reflects a new reality: 61 percent of county voters are permanently registered to vote by mail, and that number continues to grow. Similar models have been implemented in Washington and Colorado, where election officials report increases in voter turnout.” [Chico Enterprise-Record, 6/24/17]

Steel Opposed Proposition 21, Calling The Measure A "Cynical Ploy From Sacramento." "Proposition 21 is a cynical ploy by Sacramento politicians to bring back the car tax and enable their addiction to wasteful government spending. State parks are some of California's true jewels, and Californians agree about the importance of conserving these treasures for future generations. But a new tax is not the answer for funding our state parks. [...] Let's recommit ourselves to conserving the wonder and beauty of our great state. But first let's reject this cynical ploy from Sacramento. Join me in voting 'no' on Proposition 21 in November." [San Gabriel Valley Tribune, 8/21/10]

Steel Opposed The Tax, Stating It Would Hurt Job Creation Through Increased Fees And Regulations. “Just when California’s economy appears to be moving forward again, our state regulators have found yet another way to extract more dollars from consumers’ pockets and send them to Sacramento. [...] As a member of the Board of Equalization, I’ve seen time and time again how increasing costs through taxes, fees and regulations can hurt job creation. Already, many small businesses operate on the thinnest of margins and struggle to make payroll due to California’s high taxes and excessive regulation. An additional tax on gas will only make it more difficult for these businesses to survive, much less expand and hire additional employees.” Orange County Register, Michelle Steel, [8/22/14]

The state Board of Equalization plans to begin sending out notices next week, and mail the first bills Aug. 13. Board Vice Chair Michelle Steel said this week that she objects to the fee and ‘will not be surprised to see this unconstitutional fire tax in the courts soon after bills are sent.’” [PolitiCal, 8/1/12]

Steel Wrote That Policies Encouraging Minority Hiring In Los Angeles' Firefighters Corps Were "Draconian" And Could Create "A New Level Of Racial Exclusion." "Because of their skin color, 'white,' 5,000 applicants were prohibited from taking the firefighter exam in February. The genesis of this Draconian remedy is a 1974 consent decree between the city of Los Angeles and the Justice Department. The decree's interim and long-range goals effectively required the Fire Department to hire 50% of its firefighters from minorities. The council’s more liberal members have called for the removal of Michelle Park-Steel from the Board of Airport Commissioners because she has advocated rescinding state affirmative action laws.” [Bond Buyer, 9/5/95]

Steel Was Said To Have Endorsed The California Civil Rights Initiative, A “Proposal To Scrap State Laws Supporting Quotas And Racial Preferences In Hiring.” “Later in the day, even before the dust had settled on the racially charged council debate, the saga of the appointment of Michelle Park-Steel to the Airport Commission took other wild twists when it was announced -- and then denied -- that the appointee had endorsed a controversial measure that civil rights supporters say would gut affirmative action. [...] Feuer pledged to introduce a motion Friday demanding that both Park-Steel and Joe Gelman -- a Riordan appointee and a proponent of a proposal to scrap state laws supporting quotas and racial preferences in hiring -- appear before the council to explain themselves. After Park-Steel’s confirmation that there was a misunderstanding between Gelman and herself and that in fact she had never read the official proposal, Riordan announced that Park-Steel would have ‘had never done no such thing,’ (agree to Gelman’s controversial affirmative action ballot proposal) thus securing the welcomed resignation of Gelman less than a week prior to Park-Steel’s resignation last Tuesday. This imputation was charged back at in Park-Steel’s pointed statement which she read in the mayor’s conference room upon her announced departure. Singling out Holden, an African American whose district includes Koreatown, Park-Steel called him ‘a vengeful person who has exploited the Korean community. He is morally and personally corrupt and utterly unqualified to sit in judgment of me,’ as appeared in an article in the Sept. 8 issue of The Los Angeles Times.” [Korea Times, 9/20/95]

Steel Opposed Proposition 29, Calling The Measure “Flawed” And Urging Voters To “Just Say No.”

“There’s never a good time to raise taxes to support a new government spending bureaucracy. But of all times, this has to be the worst. Despite glowing rhetoric from its proponents, Proposition 29 on the June ballot is about growing government and putting billions of tax dollars in the hands of unaccountable political appointees. [...] It is clearly not the time to add another layer of government and direct funding away from education and public safety toward a new unaccountable bureaucracy. But that’s exactly what Prop. 29 does. Prop. 29 is a $735 million tax increase designed to tug on voters’ heartstrings. It sets up a bureaucracy where political appointees can spend $110 million annually on land acquisition, facilities and office space, plus another $15 million on salaries, travel and consultants. [...] Let’s not be fooled a third time by the promises of another ballot-box boondoggle. Prop. 29 proposes yet another unaccountable bureaucracy to spend our hard-earned money without the checks and balances to ensure that taxpayer dollars are spent properly. [...] Prop. 29 might be wrapped with good intentions, but under the wrapping is just another initiative that reduces Sacramento’s accountability to taxpayers and voters. Given our current economic and budget mess, it’s clearly the wrong time to grow government and raise taxes. Prop. 29 is a flawed measure that will worsen our state budget and our economy. Just say no.” Los Angeles Daily News, Michelle Steel, [6/1/12]

Big Tobacco Companies Spent Tens Of Millions To Defeat The Proposition. “Still, supporters called it ‘the closest ballot initiative in California history’ and pointed out that big tobacco companies, led by Philip Morris, spent almost $47 million to defeat the tax, which would have raised about $810 million a year for cancer research and antismoking programs. ### Steel Opposed The Orange County Housing Finance Trust, A New Government Agency That Would Fund Housing For Homeless And Low-Income Populations

OP-ED: Steel Opposed The Orange County Housing Finance Trust, A New Government Agency That Would Fund Housing For Homeless And Low-Income Populations. "Assembly Bill 448, introduced by Assemblymembers Tom Daly, D-Anaheim, and Sharon Quirk-Silva, D-Fullerton, and co-authored by State Sen. Pat Bates, R-Laguna Niguel, John Moorlach, R-Costa Mesa, and Janet Nguyen, R-Garden Grove, authorizes the creation of the Orange County Housing Finance Trust, a new government agency that would fund housing for the homeless and low income in Orange County. [...] Assembly Bill 448 will not work to resolve the greater problem of the ridiculous costs of building a house in this state. In fact, it won't do anything but approve an authority local governments already possess, and give control of the process to Sacramento. I would encourage all of our local leaders to work to effect real change in creating affordable housing for Californians instead of choosing a 'solution' that would only grow government and saddle us with another financial burden we can't afford." 'I'm tired of the paperwork and the 'we can't get it done' nonsense,' District Court Judge David Carter told attorneys in a lawsuit filed by a group of homeless people and a local anti-poverty nonprofit against the county and several cities. Anaheim, the largest city in north Orange County, has twice the homeless population estimated in that 2017 count." [LAist, 3/6/19]

The release also raised the possibility of 'centralizing temporary housing and basic services for the homeless' at the developmental center, which opened in 1959. It provides services and housing to

2017: In Her First Meeting As Chairwoman Of The Orange County Board Of Supervisors, Steel Instituted A One-Minute Limit On Public Comments. “Supervisor Michelle Steel, in her first meeting as chairwoman of the board, instituted a one-minute limit on speakers during this Tuesday’s meeting. [...] This was the shortest allotment in memory, and is the latest in a series of moves by supervisors in recent years to curtail public comments at their regular meetings, which are one of the few venues where county residents and employees have the opportunity to directly address their top elected officials.” Voice of Orange County, [1/26/17]

Voice Of Orange County: “When It Came Time To Impose The Limit, [Steel] Was More Lenient With Corporate Executives Than She Was With County Workers And Homeless Advocates.” “But when it came time to impose the limit, she was more lenient with corporate executives than she was with county workers and homeless advocates. [...] The first several speakers were executives with aviation companies, asking for supervisors’ votes on John Wayne Airport contracts up for a decision later that day. But when they went over the one-minute mark, they were allowed several sentences further, without interruption. The president of a corporate jet services company, for example, spoke for a minute and a half before Steel politely asked him to ‘sum it up please.’ She then let him speak for another 36 seconds, giving him a total a total of about 2 minutes of speaking time. The very next speaker was Diana Corral, the workers’ union president. Steel handled her very differently. ‘Make sure that you [take] just one minute,’ Steel told her. [...] The next employee who spoke went 30 seconds over the limit and received an irritated admonishment from Steel to ‘stay in one minute.’ Later, a hospitality manager for a jet company was allowed to continue speaking without interruption after the speaker light turned red about how her company could accommodate private jet fliers by arranging ‘a VIP wine tour and limo for a group of 20.’” Voice of Orange County, [1/26/17]

2017 – 2019: After Changing Its Methodology For Counting Homelessness, Orange County's Homeless Population Increased 43 Percent From 4,792 To 6,860. "In what may be the most accurate count of Orange County's homeless population ever, there's a significant uptick in the number of people without a permanent home, but the data released today, April 24, also shows more than twice as many homeless people in shelters now versus two years ago. Preliminary data from the most recent federally mandated Point in Time count found 6,860 homeless people in Orange County, with 2,899 of those – a little more than 42 percent – having some kind of emergency or transitional shelter. It seems like a big jump from the 2017 tally of 4,792 homeless people (it's about a 43 percent increase), but Orange County officials said it would be misleading to make a direct comparison because this year's survey was much more thorough and sophisticated than in previous years." ### Steel Opposed Increased Development Fees That Would Help End Government Subsidization Of The Construction Industry

The Increased Development Fees Would Help End Government Subsidization Of The Construction Industry

The Increased Development Fees Would Help End Government Subsidization Of The Construction Industry. "Developers will pay more to build in unincorporated Orange County under fees recently approved by the Board of Supervisors. The price of permits for everything from air conditioners and heaters to ceiling fans, landscape plan reviews and signs will increase as much as tenfold over the next 18 months. It's part of an ongoing effort by county leaders to stop subsidizing the construction industry with taxpayer money and embrace the politically charged issue of government seeking more money. [...] Officials expect the new fees, which range from $65 to upward of $1,500, will bring an extra approximately $10 million a year to county coffers. That money won't pay all the cost the fees are meant to cover, but it's a start: Just $2.9 million in tax money will subsidize Public Works' $20 million building inspection budget once the new fees take effect, instead of the current $9.95 million." ---

Steel Opposed California’s High-Speed Rail Project. “One of the worst parts of the budget is the Legislature’s and governor’s insistence on continuing the state’s $68 billion high-speed rail boondoggle, which is simply a waste of taxpayer dollars. It’s not even clear whether the train will ever be finished because of a lack of funding, and serious mismanagement of the rail authority. The high-speed rail continues to be tied up by costly litigation and plans to move forward with the project continue to break the rules set by voters when they passed Proposition 1A in 2008. Under current plans, the rail won’t even be high speed! Even if the train is ever finished, the state will be saddled with billions of dollars in debt, and year-after-year, will need to subsidize high operating costs due to low ridership. For students worried about school tuition, parents worried about making ends meet, farmers worried about watering their fields, and seniors planning for retirement, there are higher priorities than a high-cost, low-speed train.” Orange County Register, Michelle Steel, [6/19/14]

[...] That tax revenue will repay Orange County for the development of what will basically be the county’s newest city, though all of the land is unincorporated areas of South County. Steel Opposed A 3.5 Cent Per Gallon Gas Tax. "Thanks to a system devised in 2010, the last year of Schwarzenegger's struggles with the California budget, the state Board of Equalization had to raise gas taxes by 3.5 cents a gallon. The increase that takes effect on July 1 will give Californians the highest gas taxes in the nation, surpassing New York at about 70 cents a gallon, counting federal taxes. [...] The two Republicans on the board - George Runner and Michelle Steel, who represents this area - voted against the increase." Desert Sun, [3/5/13]

The Purpose Of The Increase Was To Balance The Budget. "The gas tax swap reduced sales taxes on gasoline from 8.25 percent to 2.25 percent, but roughly doubled the excise tax. It was a way to divert revenue to help balance the budget. The law included a provision that the excise tax must be adjusted annually to produce the same amount of revenue that would have been generated with the higher sales taxes." Here in Southern California, we are very familiar with what is going on at our southern border. However, the Vietnamese American community faces fundamentally different circumstances in their country of origin than do most other immigrants. Refugees deported to Vietnam will be treated as traitors for having left the country in the first place. It's essential to account for this reality. [...] The Vietnamese American community has been reliably conservative and pro-American. Not only is there a clear, moral, and principled reason for protecting these refugees, there is also a reason for political concern. There is never a good time to isolate and frighten a dependable percentage of one's political base. But no time could be worse than now." Washington Times, Michelle Park Steel, [12/20/18]

Orange County Register: Steel Sided With Trump On Immigration Policy That Primarily Targeted Latinos But Was Willing To Break With The President On Policies Aimed At Asian Immigrants. “On an immigration policy that seems to primarily target Latinos, Steel has sided publicly with the president. In March 2018, for example, the supervisor helped lead Orange County’s effort to oppose California’s sanctuary state laws and voted for the county to join Trump’s anti-sanctuary lawsuit. [...] But on policies aimed at Asian immigrants, Steel recently has shown a willingness to break from Trump. Late last year, Steel joined other California Republicans in opposing the Trump administration’s plans to deport thousands of Vietnamese refugees who fled to the U.S. prior to 1995 and subsequently committed crimes.” Orange County Register, [1/23/19]

The government stressed that all of the appellant’s activity took place in California – “100 percent of their property, 100 percent of their pay roll and 100 percent of their sales all occur in California, as represented on their own tax returns.” This made it all of their activities subject to California tax and no other jurisdiction. Steel Motioned To Grant An Insurance Company’s Welfare Exemption Claim Despite Government Arguments That The Company Did Not Qualify For The Exemption Under The “Direct Community Benefit” Provision. According to the California Board of Equalization’s hearing transcripts and final actions from April 13, 2010, Steel motioned to grant an insurance company’s welfare exemption claim despite government arguments that the company did not qualify for the exemption under the ‘direct community benefit’ provision. Steel believed that, since the insurance company was providing non-profit organizations low insurance premiums, they were providing benefit to the community. The government noted that, definitionally, this wasn’t directly benefiting the community, and as such did not qualify. That would take a 99 cent song and bump it to $1.07 or more. [...] Instead of proposing a new tax, AB 1956 simply requires the Board of Equalization to amend the definition of ‘tangible personal property’ to include ‘digital property.’ That needs only a majority vote, meaning no Republicans necessary. ABx1 28 Required Out-Of-State Internet Retailers To Collect Sales Tax From California Customers. “ABx1 28 says out-of-state Internet retailers must collect sales tax from California customers. The law is designed to generate $300 million for state and local governments, and remove the built-in price advantage over brick and mortar stores that Internet merchants get by not charging tax. Online retailers with stores in the state already had to collect the tax. to repeal it. Amazon, like many other Internet retailers, also severed ties with thousands of California affiliates – businesses and individuals who earned commissions referring customers to the retailers’ websites.

That prompted cries of ‘job killer’ from critics of the new law, including the two Republicans on the Board of Equalization. ‘I was against this Internet tax to begin with,’ board member Michelle Steel told her colleagues at Tuesday’s meeting. Steel is married to Republican power broker Shawn Steel and has signed activist Grover Norquist’s famous anti-tax pledge.” [Sacramento Bee, 7/29/11]

Local Taxes

Steel Opposed The Use Of ZIP Codes To Determine Local Tax Rates

Steel Opposed The Use Of ZIP Codes To Determine Local Tax Rates. “Using ZIP codes to determine local tax rates is common practice, but it has become outdated. ZIP codes are great for determining a general location, but they don’t line up with county, city, or district lines - some ZIP codes even cross state boundaries. As more local governments add additional sales taxes, ZIP codes become a less reliable tool for determining the tax rate in a given area. And while the Board of Equalization officially frowns upon the use of ZIP codes to determine tax rates for this very reason, there are few other cost effective options available for in- and out-of-state businesses that are required to collect the tax at the local rate when they ship products to California customers.” Orange County Register, Michelle Steele, [8/21/13]

Consumers even pay a sales tax when the phone is free. [...] Board member Michelle Steel, who represents San Diego County, disagrees with the policy and has tried to make changes at the board level. [San Diego Union-Tribune, 4/12/11] Michelle Steel, vice chairman of the board, said, ‘It’s more regulations. It’s always bad especially in a recession like this. ## Small Business Taxes

Steel Launched An Internal Investigation Into The Board Of Equalization’s Small-Business Tax Security Deposit System And Found That More Than $38 Million In Eligible Refunds Were Being Withheld

Steel Launched An Internal Investigation Into The Board Of Equalization’s Small-Business Tax Security Deposit System And Found That More Than $38 Million In Eligible Refunds Were Being Withheld. “Under state law, certain businesses can be required to post and maintain a tax security deposit with the state’s sales-tax agency for their first three years of operation. The security deposits, which range from $2,000 to $50,000, act as collateral against any potential tax liabilities. State law requires the release of security deposits for businesses with perfect tax payment records for three years. After receiving a call from a San Diego business owner who paid the security deposit, I launched an internal investigation into the state board’s refund procedures and discovered a systemic problem at the agency. Out of California’s $436 million in tax security deposits, more than $38.8 million in refunds are eligible for release but are being held by the agency. In my district alone, which represents one-fourth of the state, security deposits worth more than $4 million were improperly withheld from more than 600 businesses. Some deposits were withheld for more than four years. Why is this happening? Unlike that income tax refund your family anticipates and budgets, tax security deposits are held for so long that many small-business owners forget they exist -- and don't remember when their refund is due." Los Angeles Times, Michelle Steel, [1/24/08]

Additionally, the board voted to return more than $296 million to small-business owners that the state has been holding as security deposits. 'This is a great victory for taxpayers and small businesses,' said equalization board Vice Chairperson Michelle Steel, who represents the mountain communities. Steel Blamed Government Regulations And Taxes For The Lack Of Job Growth And Upward Mobility In Orange County. "However, while many of the tech businesses may have been conceptualized in Orange County and we might be home to CEOs and business leaders, we seem to have a hard time making O.C. home to their headquarters. It is my hope that we can find a way to correct that disconnect. A higher cost of living is not as troublesome if the economy supports a growing job market with business sectors that allow for mobility. [...] There are many reasons, including government regulations and oppressive state policies that lead to stifled growth; special interest groups have also added fuel to the fire.
