Is working at home online the next big thing?

For Kelly Steadman it sure is. Kelly, a mother from Bethesda, MD is thriving, in the middle of an economic recession working in the comfort of her own home.

From her website: "I get paid about $25 for every link I post on Google and I get paid every week... I make around $15,500 a month right now"

Kelly's story is a very familiar one in these tough times. She lost her job as an account rep for a manufacturing company and a few days later her husband was also laid off from his job as part of cutbacks due to the bad economy.

"We knew we had to do something, so we put our heads together and started researching online job opportunities." Kelly and her husband Kevin wound up getting caught up in a few quick rich business opportunities that were nothing more than pyramid schemes before finding something that really worked.

"I realized the best thing to do is instead of hoping that a company that you are looking at is going last, why not go with a big, reputable company. After looking at several different companies, I picked the safest bet... Google."

Online giant Google is a publicly traded company and is worth an estimated $100 Billion. The company has pioneered online search and has changed the way we use the internet.

In a matter of weeks Kelly and Kevin had a steady stream of income coming in via checks that were delivered to their home. They happened upon a system called "Google Cash" that taught them how to make
