When SpotCrime contacted me they were informed that I was already working with CrimeReports and I did not have to give them any information. They never contacted me again. Thanks!!

Subject: Update: Important Legal Information from CrimeReports.com

Some time ago, I sent an email to you with some information and guidance about data requests from a company called SpotCrime.com. I wanted to provide an update to you and ask that you please share this with your legal department as well.

Last Friday, we filed a lawsuit in Federal Court in Utah against ReportSee, which owns SpotCrime.com. The suit alleges that SpotCrime.com has been willfully and repeatedly misappropriating data from CrimeReports.com and misrepresenting law enforcement agencies' obligations under open records laws. After meeting with resistance from the company to refrain, we are now asking the court to issue an injunction to prevent these alleged activities from continuing.

Please review the press release for the full statement. I am also including some example draft statements that you might like to review in formulating a response to SpotCrime.com while the suit is pending. If you would like additional details, please call me at (801) 828-2710. Either way, we will keep you apprised as the case progresses.

We appreciate the opportunity to work with you.

Respectfully,

Greg

ONE

Thank you for your request. As you know, we are currently providing this information to the public for free through CrimeReports.com. We also understand that Public Engines, which owns CrimeReports.com, has taken legal action against ReportSee, and we are waiting for an outcome on the case before considering alternative publishers.

TWO

We appreciate your interest. As you know, we are working with CrimeReports.com, who simplifies the process of making this data available to the general public in a way that we can still manage and control. You are welcome to use the site, as it is open and free to the public.
