FILED IN THE
U.S. DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON

NOV 07 2005

JAMES R. LARSEN, CLERK
DEPUTY
RICHLAND, WASHINGTON

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON AT RICHLAND

James S. Gordon, Jr., Plaintiff, vs.
Impulse Marketing Group, Inc.,
Third Party Plaintiff
Impulse Marketing Group, Inc.,
Third-Party Plaintiff,
v.
Bonnie F. Gordon,
Third-Party Defendant

Case No.: CV-04-5125-FVS
MOTION TO DISMISS

TO: Clerk of the Court
AND TO: Floyd E. Ivey, Attorney for Third-Party Plaintiff

1 COMES NOW the Third Party Defendant, Bonnie F. Gordon, and 2 files this motion to dismiss Third Party Plaintiff's claims under FRCP
3 12(b)(6).

5 Introduction

6 The undersigned is a pro se Third Party Defendant in the above
7 captioned case. Even if Court assumes as fact all of the allegations of 8 the Third Party Plaintiff as true, they still fail to state a claim upon 9 which relief can be granted.
10

11 The Third Party Plaintiff has articulated claims against me for 12 "indemnification and contribution", "fraud and deceit," "tortious 13 interference with business relationships," "breach of contract," and 14 "injunctive relief." Examining each in order reveals that even if the 15 Court accepts all of the factual allegations contained within each claim, 16 they amount to nothing more than an allegation that I "actively and 17 affirmatively solicited commercial email messages" from the Third
18 Party Plaintiff, and "represented" myself as myself in so doing. Such is 19 insufficient to form a basis for liability under any of the theories offered
20 by the Third Party Plaintiff.
21
22
23
24
25

1           The Third Party Plaintiff's claims for "indemnification and 2           contribution" fail to state a claim upon which relief may be granted

3           The Third Party Plaintiff has brought a claim for "indemnification
4           and contribution" against me. Through this claim, the Third Party
5           Plaintiff is asking the Court to assign liability to me for emails the 6           Third Party Plaintiff sent to my husband. While the Third Party
7           Plaintiff has not explicitly pled RCW 19.190 et seq., absent the statute,
8           there is no basis in law for recovery. Perhaps recognizing this, the 9           Third Party Plaintiff has pled most of the elements of the statute, and 10          has asked the Court to extend liability to those who provide "assistance 11          or support" in the sending of emails, as is outlined in RCW 19.190 et 12          seq.
13          seq.

14          While the Court should dismiss this claim, the Court should also 15          make careful note of the Third Party Plaintiff's own view of RCW
16          19.190 et seq. in advancing these claims. By arguing that the mere act 17          of subscribing to a spam list is all that need be done to establish 18          liability for "assisting" the transmission of commercial electronic mail
19          under the statute, the Third Party Plaintiff have set a very low 20          threshold for "assisting." In so doing, the Third Party Plaintiff has 21

1 conceded that its own much more involved conduct in transmitting the 2 subject emails constitutes "assisting" the transmission of prohibited
3 commercial electronic mail.

5 While I do not agree that the mere act of subscribing oneself or 6 another to a spam list constitutes "assisting" the transmission of a
7 commercial electronic email message under RCW 19.190 et seq - or that 8 this conduct ever occurred, even if the Court assumes that it did, the 9 Court should still dismiss this claim under FRCP 12(b)(6).

11 RCW 19.190 et seq. also requires that the party providing the 12 assistance knows or has reason to know that the email (a) uses a third 13 party's internet domain name without permission of the third party, or 14 otherwise misrepresents or obscures any information in identifying the 15 point of origin or the transmission path of a commercial electronic mail
16 message; or (b) contains false or misleading information in the subject
17 line. For obvious reasons, the Third Party Plaintiff has not included in 18 its pleading an allegation that the emails in question contained any of 19 these violations. In fact, the Third Party Plaintiff's pleading "wholly 20 denies" that any such violations are present when it "wholly denies" any 21 liability for any of these emails. Absent this element, the Third Party
22
23
24
25

1 Plaintiff's pleading thus fails to state a claim upon which relief can be 2 granted. Absent a violation of the statute, there is no liability for 3 sending spam, or assisting others in sending spam. Since the Third
4 Party Plaintiff's pleading does not include an allegation that the emails
5 in question violated the statute, and in fact denies that this underlying 6 violation occurred, it fails to state a claim upon which relief can be 7 granted.

10
11 The Third Party Plaintiff's claims for "fraud and deceit"

12 fail to state a claim upon which relief may be granted

13
14 Within its amended pleadings, Third Party Plaintiff alleges that I
15 "affirmatively solicited commercial email messages" from the Third
16 Party Plaintiff and misrepresented my identity in so doing. However,
17 the Third Party Plaintiff's sole factual allegation concerning that 18 misrepresentation is that I "fraudulently represented" that I was 19 myself.
21

22 Under Washington law, to be entitled to recovery founded in fraud
23 the Third Party Plaintiff must show the following nine elements: (1) 24 representation of an existing fact; (2) materiality; (3) falsity; (4) the 25

1 speaker's knowledge of its falsity; (5) intent of the speaker that it
2 should be acted upon by the plaintiff; (6) plaintiff's ignorance of its 3 falsity; (7) plaintiff's reliance on the truth of the representation; (8)
4 plaintiff's right to rely upon it; and (9) damages suffered by the plaintiff.

6 Stiley v. Block 130 Wn.2d 486, 505 (1996). If the Court accepts as true
7 the Third Party Plaintiff's sole factual allegation, that I represented
8 myself as myself, it does not and cannot constitute fraud. If I
9 represented myself as myself, such would be a true statement, it could 10 not, by definition, be fraudulent. As such, the Third Party Plaintiff has 11 failed to present a claim for which relief can be granted.

14 I also note that the Third Party Plaintiff repeatedly alleges that I
15 and the other Third Party Defendants solicited emails for the "sole 16 purpose of filing multiple lawsuits." However, even if we "intended"
17 that the Plaintiff would file suit, no cause of action could possibly arise
18 until and unless the Third Party Plaintiff actually sent emails that 19 violate the RCW 19.190 (the statute). Since neither my husband nor I
20 had any control whatsoever over either the Third Party Plaintiff's 21 sending of emails or compliance with the statute, our "intent" prior to 22 the Third Party Plaintiff's act of sending email that violated the statute
23
25

1 is irrelevant to any and all of the Third Party Plaintiff's claims and 2 counterclaims, including the fraud claim.

3 Finally, if the Court declines to strike the Third Party Plaintiff's
4 claim for relief against both my husband and me for fraud under FRCP
5 12(b)(6), the Court should require that the Third Party Plaintiff comply
6 with the requirements of FRCP 9(b) and state with particularity the 7 circumstances constituting fraud by identifying the content of any and 8 all statements made by us that the Third Party Plaintiff alleges were 9 fraudulent, together with the date, time, place, mode of communication,
10 and recipients of any such statements. Since the only factual allegation
11 the Third Party Plaintiff has made (that I "fraudulently represented" 12 that I was myself) is a true statement by definition, the Third Party
13 Plaintiff has not done so, its complaint for fraud should also be 14 dismissed on this basis.
15
17
18
19
20

21 The Third Party Plaintiff's claims for "tortious interference with 22 business relationships" fail to state a claim upon which relief may be 23 granted
25

1 Under Washington law, to be entitled to recovery founded in
2 tortious interference with a business relationship, the Third Party
3 Plaintiff must show the following five elements: (1) the existence of a
4 valid contractual relationship or business expectancy; (2) that Third
5 Party Plaintiffs had knowledge of that relationship; (3) an intentional 6 interference inducing or causing a breach or termination of the 7 relationship or expectancy; (4) that Third Party Plaintiffs interfered for 8 an improper purpose or used improper means; and (5) Resultant 9 damages. Sintra, Inc. v. Seattle, 119 Wn.2d 1, 28, (1992). Within its 10 pleadings, the Third Party Plaintiff's sole allegation related to element
11 4 is the allegation that I "affirmatively solicited commercial email 12 messages" from the Third Party Plaintiff and misrepresented my 13 identity in so doing. However, as has already been shown, the Third
14 Party Plaintiff's sole factual allegation concerning that alleged 15 misrepresentation is that I "fraudulently represented" that I was 16 myself. As it cannot be an "improper purpose" or and "improper means"
17 to accurately represent oneself as oneself, the Third Party Plaintiff's 18 claim for relief for tortious interference with a business relationship 19
20
21
22
23
24
25

1 fails to state a claim upon which relief should be granted and should be
2 stricken under FRCP 12(b)(6).

5 The Third Party Plaintiff's claims for "breach of contract" fail
6 to state a claim upon which relief may be granted

7 The Third Party Plaintiff's claims for "breach of contract" again
8 rest solely on the factual allegation concerning that alleged
9 misrepresentation is that I "fraudulently represented" that I was 10 myself. As discussed above, such cannot form the basis of a breach,
11 because even if I represented myself as myself, such would be a true
12 statement, it could not, by definition, constitute a "breach." Further, as 13 set forth by the Washington Supreme Court, "the burden of proving a 14 contract, whether express or implied, is on the party asserting it, and he 15 must prove each essential fact, including the existence of a mutual
16 intention." Cahn v. Foster & Marshall, Inc., 33 Wn. App. 838, 840, 17 (1983) (citing Johnson v. Nasi, 50 Wn.2d 87, 91, (1957))." Within its 18 pleadings, the Third Party Plaintiff alleges that we "never intended to 19 allow Third Party Plaintiff to have a proper bargained for exchange of 20 consideration." The Third Party Plaintiff's pleadings thus demonstrate 21
22
23
24
25

1 conclusively that there was no mutual intention or exchange of 2 consideration, and thus that no contract was ever formed.

3         Assuming, for the sake of argument, that there was a mutual 4 assent, an exchange of consideration and a contract was formed, the 5 question then becomes where is the breach? If the Court accepts the 6 Third Party Plaintiff's pleadings as true, then we "solicit[ed]
7 commercial emails for the sole purpose of filing multiple lawsuits." If 8 true, then the filing of lawsuits cannot possibly form the basis for a 9 breach, as the filing of lawsuits forms the very basis upon which the 10 contracts were formed!
13

14         The Third Party Plaintiff cannot have it both ways. If the Third
15 Party Plaintiff wants to allege the fact that the Plaintiff filed a lawsuit
16 somehow constitutes a breach of a contract, then the Third Party
17 Plaintiff must plead that my husband somehow agreed not to file suit as 18 a condition of his "soliciting commercial emails." But they have not.
19 Perhaps they have not because they recognize the absurdity of arguing 20 that everyone who ever opted into their spam list somehow agreed not 21 to sue them for their future illegal conduct in the process. Instead, the 22 Third Party Plaintiff has pled that we entered into contracts "for the 23
25

1 sole purpose of filing multiple lawsuits.” If one accepts the Third Party
2 Plaintiff’s pleadings as true, then the right to file those lawsuits was 3 intended by us to be a term of the contract. Accordingly, there can be 4 no breach.

6 The Third Party Plaintiff’s claim for relief against me for breach of 7 contract should therefore be stricken under FRCP 12(b)(6). If the court
8 accepts as fact everything contained within the Third Party Plaintiff’s 9 allegations, the sole factual allegation of breach in the pleading is an 10 allegation that I “misrepresented” myself as myself. If I had somehow 11 misrepresented myself as someone else, no evidence of this 12 misrepresentation has been entered into the record of this case – as that 13 evidence doesn’t exist. Even if a contract was formed, the conduct
14 alleged to be a breach was in fact a requirement of the contract.
15
16 However, even if the Court accepts the dubious proposition that 17 “contracts” were somehow formed as a result of our actions of opting 18 into the Third Party Plaintiff’s spam lists, the Third Party Plaintiff has 19 not articulated any conduct by me that would constitute a breach of 20 those alleged contracts.
21
22
23
24
25

1           The Third Party Plaintiff's claims for "injunctive relief" fail
2                           to state a claim upon which relief may be granted

3           By virtue of the fact that Third Party Plaintiff has not stated a 4 claim on which relief can be granted concerning its first four claims, it 5 is counterintuitive to seek or be granted an injunction based on the 6 absence of a single actionable event by my husband or me.

8           The Third Party Plaintiff's claims for "injunctive relief" allege that 9 if the Third Party Plaintiff is "unable to stop" our alleged "scheme and 10 further schemes" the Third Party Plaintiff will suffer "irreparable
11 damages." The Third Party Plaintiff has asked the Court to enter a 12 preliminary injunction enjoining my husband and I from "actively and 13 affirmatively soliciting commercial emails." However, regardless of 14 whether my husband and I or the Third Party Defendants "actively and 15 affirmatively solicit commercial emails," it is entirely within the Third 16 Party Plaintiff's control whether any such emails are actually sent.
17

18           And, it is entirely within their control to have all emails compliant with 19 the strict requirements of state and federal laws. In fact, compliance
20 with the federal CAN SPAM statute requires that the Third Party
21 Plaintiff have the capability to remove email addresses from the Third 22
23
24
25

1 Party Plaintiff's spam lists. My husband has consistently sought to 2 have the Third Party Plaintiff stop sending spam, (the polar opposite of 3 the conduct alleged by the Third Party Plaintiff), there is no statutory 4 or common law prohibition against soliciting commercial email, even if 5 it is done with the intention to sue the sender. The Third Party
6 Plaintiff's pleadings admit this, stating "Third Party Plaintiff has no 7 adequate remedy at law." Perhaps the reason there is no such law is 8 because any such law would be entirely unnecessary, as a spammer
9 faced with such solicitations has a ready and simple defense; simply 10 don't send commercial email that violates the statute.
13

14 Accordingly, the Third Party Plaintiff's claims for injunctive relief
15 against me should be stricken under FRCP 12(b)(6). Even if the court
16 accepts as fact everything contained within the Third Party Plaintiff's
17 allegations, the mere act of requesting emails, whether by the Plaintiff,
18 the Third Party Defendants, or anyone else, is perfectly legal conduct
19 even if the person requesting emails intends to sue the sender. Further,
20 the mere act of requesting emails, whether by the Plaintiff, the Third 21 Party Defendants, or anyone else, is insufficient by itself to expose the 22 Third Party Plaintiff to any liability. It is only when the Third Party
23
25

1 Plaintiff actually sends spam, an act over which the Third Party
2 Plaintiff is in complete, total, and sole control, and further sends spam
3 that does not comply with the statute, that any liability attaches.

6 CONCLUSION

7 The undersigned respectfully requests that the Court grant this
8 motion to dismiss with prejudice the Third Party Plaintiff's
9 counterclaims against me under FRCP 12(B)(6).

20 I, hereby, certify that on November 7, 2005, I filed with this Court a
21 Motion to Dismiss Third Party Plaintiff's Claims Against Third Party
22 Defendants. The Clerk of the Court will provide electronic notification
23 of Service to Douglas E. McKinley, Jr., Peter J. Glantz, Sean A.
24 Moynihan, and Floyd E. Ivey. I have served all non-CM/ECF
25 participants, Jamila Gordon, James Gordon III, Jonathan Gordon,
Emily Abbey, and Robert Pritchett by other means.
