RESPONSE TO IMPULSE'S
MOTION TO DISMISS THIRD
PARTY COUNTERCLAIMS

TO: Clerk of the Court

AND TO: Floyd E. Ivey, Attorney for Third-Party Plaintiff

AND TO: Peter J. Glantz and Sean A. Moynihan

INTRODUCTION

2 The undersigned third party defendant has included evidence in prior filings with 3 this Court that Impulse via its communication with Commonwealth Marketing
4 Group, Inc. of PA (CMG) knew that it was not to have commercial contact with 5 Plaintiff's domain, "gordonworks.com" (wherein I had an email address bearing 6 my name). On or about October, 21, 2003, Impulse's Kenneth Adamson wrote to 7 Jacques Joseph of CMG, "this recipient is in a file of blocked and/or suppressed
8 recipients". My answer and the subsequent affidavit in support are replete with 9 other Impulse and CMG communications, which further corroborate this statement
10 by Mr. Adamson.

11 Impulse's entire defense is based on the now apparent lie that third party 12 defendants somehow conspired against it – when it was Impulse that failed to 13 follow its own internal procedures, memoranda, and orders from the principal 14 which hired it to stop sending email to "gordonworks.com".

15 Third party defendant has exerted as a great deal of effort, time, and expense in the 16 defense of Impulse's SLAPP suit. Impulse's causes of action are entirely baseless.
17 Even if one assumes that each claim was valid, all "bets were off" by 10/21/03 as 18 admitted by Impulse's Ken Adamson in an email to CMG. Each email after that 19 date was sent in violation of RCW 10.14, Washington State's Anti-Harassment
20 statute. As recently as 3/22/03, Impulse sent me spam - unwanted and illegal 21 communications, communications which have no commercial purpose, except to 22 harass, annoy and intimidate me. Exhibit 1 There is no sound basis for sending me
23 spam two years and five months after Impulse claimed no more spam would be 24 sent to me. Impulse has also continued to usurp my identity and spam me at my 25

1 new domain. This new transgression by Impulse is in violation of Can-Spam along
2 with RCW 19.190, 19.86, etc. Exhibit 2

3 Response to Argument - I

4 The reference to a civil not a criminal matter was, in fact, a reference to the above
5 captioned case. This case has morphed into a criminal case in terms of third party
6 defendant's causes of action as per RCW 10.14, RCW 19.170, RCW 9.35. It is my 7 belief/understanding that each of these claims falls under the criminal code of 8 Washington State. It is further my belief that I can prove each assertion (actually 9 Impulse proves each assertion by its errors and omissions).

10 For example, the person who pressed the send button (along with the person or 11 persons which authorized the same) may both be guilty of violations of RCW
12 10.14, because that send button was pressed or ordered to be pressed by Impulse, 13 Impulse benefited financially from the pressing of the button, and Impulse knew 14 that no messages were to be sent to "gordonworks.com". Exhibits provided by 15 third party defendant in the answer, claims and affidavit/declaration attest to this 16 knowledge – Impulse's subsequent behaviors violated RCW 10.14, Impulse's Jeff 17 Goldstein, Phillip Huston and Kenneth Adamson are jointly and severally liable for 18 multiple and continual violations.

19 Impulse asserts in its "Second Amended Complaint" (document 185), Nos. 12 and 20 60, that "third party defendants received free products". This assertion is a lie. But 21 it is more interesting as the truth, because it belies Impulse's assertion that false
22 profiles were provided by third party defendants. How could a third party 23 defendant receive free products at false addresses and with false names?
25

1 Impulse admits in No.1 of its second amended complaint (document 185), 2 “Impulse...collects personally identifiable information from individuals...”. That 3 personally identifiable information includes social security numbers and dates of 4 birth – fodder for identity theft. Impulse also admits in Nos. 3 and 4 that it collects 5 these data for marketing purposes as substantial revenue ensues. This practice of 6 buying and selling personally identifying information for profit has and is being 7 done in violation of RCW 9.35 et seq. The foregoing violation of criminal statutes
8 of Washington State supports my belief that Impulse is engaged in criminal 9 conspiracies to violate numerous laws. Because these violations take place across 10 state lines and internationally, I believe that these violations are federal crimes.

11 Response to Argument - II

12 Exhibit 1/2 and the hundreds of emails from Impulse since the inception of this 13 lawsuit in November 2004, support the basis of my argument regarding 18 USC 14 1037. My dad is the owner of the Omni Innovations, LLC, which in turn owns and 15 operates an Interactive Access Service and I am a client on this service. My dad 16 has instructed me on the art of tracking spam. It is this rudimentary knowledge that 17 supports my belief that Impulse is violating anti-spam statutes.

18 Expert witnesses have begun to analyze Plaintiff and third party defendant’s emails
19 – my assertion of violations of RCW 19.190 and Can-Spam has been corroborated
20 by these expert witnesses.

21
22 Exhibit 1 was sent via illegal relaying through computers which are on block lists
23 – (highlighted in this exhibit). Block lists represent attempts by organizations to 24 prevent the receipt of email from known spammers such as Impulse. In Exhibit 1, 25 the spammer hijacked the computer or otherwise compromised it. The 1 "66.59.94.15" IP (Internet Protocol) in this email belongs to an entity, which has 2 falsely registered itself as either "Chewy Inc" or "Premium Products Inc" – both

3 companies are "fakes" (or unregistered to do business in NY) as each is absent
4 from New York State's registry of corporations. False domain registrations are 5 among the illegal activities of Impulse. This is but one of hundreds (thousands) of 6 email from Impulse that is sent in violation of the referenced statute(s). I trust this 7 one of many examples meets the heightened pleading requirements of the 8 referenced Rule 9 (b).

9 Response to Argument – III

10 Impulse was so anxious to crush the opposition in this lawsuit that it sued all the 11 prospective witnesses as provided by Plaintiff. This SLAPP suit included Richland 12 Police Officer, Lew Reed. Impulse later dropped the lawsuit against Officer Reed.

13 CMG mentions in correspondence to Impulse by CEO, Robert Kane that a 14 Washington State court ordered him to not send email to "gordonworks.com". That 15 letter dated 2/9/04 was previously entered into evidence via sworn statements by 16 me. Impulse was well aware of Plaintiff's complaints to government agencies. This 17 is a prima facie violation of RCW 4.25 et seq.

18 Response to Argument - IV

19 Impulse has admitted to collecting personally identifiable information in its second 20 amended complaint, Nos. 3-4. Impulse admits to obtaining email addresses 21 ostensibly for marketing purposes, i.e buying and selling these email addresses and 22 profiles for profit. Impulse either perpetrates or abets fraud by promising prizes
23 and not delivering the prizes apparently in order to buy and sell personally 24 identifying information in violation of this statute.

1 Impulse then lied to this Court by claiming that it delivered prizes to third party
2 defendants at their allegedly "fraudulent" profiles, i.e. addresses (Impulse's second 3 amended complaint, Nos. 12 and 60).

4 I understand that a federal judge has wide discretion in terms of hearing state
5 matters and deciding same. That is why I have submitted this claim to this Court.

7 Impulse has failed to answer discovery, which could name the actual parties who 8 are liable under each of the criminal statutes cited in my answer and counterclaims.

9 I believe the withholding of this information is an activity that abets the same 10 criminal violations above and protects the "guilty" parties.

11 Response to Argument – V

12 Impulse has engaged in a course of conduct since 10/21/03, which includes a series
13 of acts over a period of time, however short, evidencing a continuity of purpose.

14 "Course of conduct" includes, in addition to any other form of communication, 15 contact, or conduct, the sending of an electronic communication [emphasis 16 added] – RCW 10.14.020(2). RCW 10.14.030, 1-6, outlines a six-prong test to 17 determine if the communication between Impulse and me serves any legitimate 18 purpose. The law states that in determining whether the course of conduct serves 19 any legitimate or lawful purpose, the court should consider whether:

- 20
21 (1) Any current contact between the parties was initiated by the respondent
22 only or was initiated by both parties; (2) The respondent has been given 23 clear notice that all further contact with the petitioner is unwanted; (3) The 24 respondent's course of conduct appears designed to alarm, annoy, or harass 25 the petitioner; (4) The respondent is acting pursuant to any statutory authority, including but not limited to acts which are reasonably necessary to: (a) Protect property or liberty interests; (b) Enforce the law; or (c) Meet specific statutory duties or requirements; (5) The respondent's course of 1 conduct has the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with the 2 petitioner's privacy or the purpose or effect of creating an intimidating, 3 hostile, or offensive living environment for the petitioner; (6) Contact by the 4 respondent with the petitioner or the petitioner's family has been limited in 5 any manner by any previous court order.

6 Impulse's behavior in terms of the foregoing statute serves no purpose other than 7 to harass and annoy me as it was given clear notice to stop.

8 Response to Argument - VI

9 The undersigned has already provided Impulse with an actual email (Exhibit 4 of 10 my affidavit in support of the answer and counterclaims) which was sent by 11 Impulse or its unnamed marketing partner multiple times. This email subject line 12 stated that I had already won a prize. Such a statement is clearly an inducement to 13 read the email and visit a web site to claim the prize. The subsequent failure of the 14 web site owner and (admitted) marketing partner of Impulse is a prima facie
15 violation of RCW 19.170. Further, the required disclosures of this statute were not 16 supplied by the spammer, web site owner, and/or Impulse - another instance of a 17 violation of this statute. The free prize was not free as it required the recipient to 18 participate in or buy another service without disclosing same - a violation as well.
19 The variety of illegal aliases used by Impulse is discussed again, below.

20 Response to Argument - VII

21 The claim for vicarious liability attaches to the actions of agents of Impulse who,
22 on the one hand, are purported to operate independently and, on the other hand,
23 serve as marketing partners bestowing or conveying standing to Impulse in regards
24 to its specious claims against each third party defendant. Impulse's arguments 25 regarding me allegedly supplying it with false information at a web site belonging to unnamed marketing partner(s) [a benefit] coupled with the distancing of itself

1 from the claims by me and Plaintiff [a liability] are evidence of its desire to reap
2 the benefits of agency without the liabilities. Impulse and/or agents acting at its 3 behest defrauded me, stole my identity, and continue to harass me via email.

4 Response to Argument - VIII

5 Exhibit 5 from my affidavit referenced above is a list of scores of aliases (taken
6 from another list of over 500 aliases) used by Impulse or the unnamed marketing 7 partner for which vicarious liability attaches as a legal concept (apart from real 8 estate) in terms of principal-agent law. There is no valid commercial purpose for 9 obfuscating the identity of the sender of an email. Impulse has done this hundreds 10 of times, directly or through its agents. Obfuscation of the origin of an email is a 11 prima facie violation of RCW 19.190, RCW 19.86, and Can-Spam. This criminal 12 impersonation via aliases aided Impulse's scheme to illegally obtain personally 13 identifying information via fraudulent devices, i.e. ads for non-existent prizes.

14 Response to Argument - IX

15 In light of Impulse's clarification of this point of law, I stipulate that this "claim"
16 should, in fact, be an affirmative defense.

18 Response to Argument - X

19 This may be the easiest claim to prove to a jury as Impulse knew as early as 20 September and October 2003, that "gordonworks.com" was to get no more email 21 ads. From that point forward, it carelessly, callously, maliciously, and/or 22 fraudulently lambasted me in its false representations to this Court and to all who 23 read these proceedings, that I was/am a criminal co-conspirator with Plaintiff.

24 Impulse's foreknowledge of its obligation to avoid sending the undersigned email
25 and its subsequent lies to cover its misdeeds is in fact fraudulent and/or perjury.

1 Impulse's mischaracterizations of me as a criminal co-conspirators (perpetrating
2 fraud, deceit, malice and the like) is being posted on web sites and read by people,
3 internationally – and constitutes a violation of the libel statute. Exhibit 3 is an 4 actual web site's URL – based in the United Kingdom, which discusses this case –
5 the site has a link to another site (in California) with documents from this case ---
6 http://www.spamhaus.org/rokso/evidence.lasso?rokso_id=ROK5431

7 Response to Argument - XI

8 The pattern of violating criminal statutes has been established. Impulse and/or its 9 agents email advertisements for counterfeit drugs, “unlabelled” pornography,
10 pirated software, securities schemes, and mortgage scams to obtain personally
11 identifiable information for profit. Impulse has contracted with Mr. Jeffrey Peters, 12 a felon on parole in Florida for grand larceny and drug offenses to send email on 13 its behalf. It has also contracted with Mr. Scott Richter of Colorado who was 14 successfully sued by New York State and Microsoft for illegal spamming. It is also 15 contracting with an alleged porn spammer from Canada, Azoogle.

16 Response to Argument - XII

17 I withdraw this counterclaim.

18 Response to Argument - XIII

19 Exhibit 1 contains highlights of actual violations of the relevant statutes. I am in 20 possession of many illegal emails from Impulse. The transmission path of this 21 email and other email obfuscate the sender among other violations.
23
24
25

Response to Argument - XIV

2 Violations of RCW 19.190 are per se violations of Washington State's Consumer
3 Protection Act – see RCW 19.190.030 and RCW 19.86.020. Exhibit 1 is an 4 example of a statutory violation, which is delineated (highlighted) with specificity.

Response to Argument - XV

6 My claim for an injunction is due to the ongoing buying and selling of my identity
7 by Impulse and its harassment of me. These behaviors can have serious financial 8 and personal impact on me.

10 Under a separate motion for injunction, I have moved this Court to enjoin Impulse
11 from sending me additional email as in Exhibit 1. This email was sent to me six 12 months after Impulse filed suit against me. Impulse also sent me email in October, 13 November and December of 2005. Unless this Court intervenes, Impulse will 14 continue to harass me and benefit from the buying and selling of my identity.

Conclusion

16 Sanctions are not in order, because behind each of my counterclaims is a good-
17 faith belief and typically the documentation as well to support that counterclaim.
18 Each party has a right to its own defense. As Impulse has knowingly sued pro se
19 defendants without cause, it should not be rewarded for having an attorney(s)
20 prepare its filing with this Court. I believe that I have properly pled and introduced 21 evidence that indicates that I have a good-faith belief that I have been wronged by 22 Impulse – civilly and criminally.

23 The undersigned third party defendant requests that this Court deny Impulse's
24 request for dismissal of my counterclaims.
25

1 Upon further investigation, the undersigned may amend its counterclaims to 2 include Rule 11 violations by Impulse as the claims which it has set before this
 3 Court have disintegrated in the face of documents between CMG and Impulse
 4 demonstrating its knowledge of third party defendant's desire not to receive email
 5 and its subsequent fraudulent cover story to deflect its culpability in a criminal 6 scheme against me and others.

7 I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States that the 8 foregoing is true and correct.

LEGAL: Spammers sued, counter with an ugly SLAPP countersuit

ROK5431

When caught spamming in violation of the law, spammers seem to do any of several things: Pay up, run and hide, or try and fight back by using underhanded tactics. Since laws against perjury before the courts in the USA are seldom, if ever, enforced, most spammer suits, and in this case, countersuits, seem to be based on the idea popularized by Joseph Gobbels, the Nazi Germany Minister of Propaganda. Herr Gobbels came up with the "Big Lie:" Tell a big enough falsehood, and many times people will swallow it.

In their response to the plaintiff's complaint, the spamming defendants would have made the Propaganda Minister proud. To those who are familiar with what Impulse Marketing Group has done over the years, reading this response is actually quite funny.

The SLAPP (<http://www.thefirstamendment.org/antislappresourcecenter.html#What%20are%20slapps>) nature of the countersuit should prove interesting, as the state (Washington) where the plaintiff located had enacted some of the first (<http://www.casp.net/statewa.html>) anti-SLAPP laws (<http://www.casp.net/wa-stat.html>) in the USA.
