UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
AT SEATTLE

ZANGO, INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

PC TOOLS PTY LTD.,

Defendant.

CASE NO. C07-0797-JCC

ORDER

I. INTRODUCTION

This matter comes before the Court on Defendant's Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction. (Dkt. No. 17.) After considering the parties' relevant submissions on the matter and determining that oral argument is unnecessary, the Court rules as follows.

II. BACKGROUND AND FACTS

Plaintiff Zango is a software company whose product has been designated as potentially harmful or malicious software ("malware") by Defendant PC Tools's Spyware Doctor software. (Berretta Decl. ¶ 4 (Dkt. No. 7).) Plaintiff instituted this lawsuit to prevent Defendant from classifying its software in this manner and interfering with its operation on end-users' computers.

Defendant is an Australian company whose headquarters are located in Sydney, Australia.

1 (Second Whitehead Decl. ¶ 1 (Dkt. No. 36).) It provides both free and for-purchase versions of its
2 Spyware Doctor software. It distributes at least 700 copies of this software to Washington state residents
3 every week. (See Pl.’s Opp’n 3-4 (Dkt. No. 34); Second Whitehead Decl. 2 n.1 (Dkt. No. 36).)
4 Defendant generates approximately $550,000 in revenue from Washington customers a year. (Second
5 Whitehead Decl. ¶ 4. (Dkt. No. 36).) Fees paid to Defendant through its website are processed by a
6 German company. (Id. ¶ 5.) Defendant’s free “Starter Edition” of its software is also bundled as part of 7 the immensely popular “Google-Pack,” and is widely distributed from the Google website to users around 8 the world, including those in Washington. (Berretta Decl. ¶ 4 (Dkt. No. 7).) Those employees of 9 Defendant who make the classification decisions for its anti-malware software are located in Sydney.
10 (First Whitehead Decl. ¶ 2 (Dkt. No. 18).)

11 III. ANALYSIS

12 Plaintiff bears the burden of proving that jurisdiction exists. Cabbage v. Merchant, 744 F.2d 665, 13 667 (9th Cir. 1984). However, as the record now before the Court consists only of affidavits and 14 discovery materials, Plaintiff need only make a prima facie case that jurisdiction exists. Fields v. Sedgwick
15 Assoc. Risks, Ltd., 796 F.2d 299, 301 (9th Cir. 1986); Vernon Johnson Fam. Ltd. Partnership v. Bank
16 One Tex., N.A., 80 F. Supp. 2d 1127, 1130 (W.D. Wash. 2000). The Court resolves all factual disputes in 17 Plaintiff’s favor. Bancroft & Masters, Inc. v. Augusta Nat’l, Inc., 223 F.3d 1082, 1087 (9th Cir. 2000).

18 Personal jurisdiction can be general or specific. Both types of jurisdiction are available in 19 Washington state. General jurisdiction is authorized by Wash. Rev. Code § 4.28.080(10). See Crose v.
20 Volkswagenwerk Aktiengesellschaft, 558 P.2d 764, 766 (Wash. 1977). Specific jurisdiction is authorized 21 by Washington’s long-arm statute, Wash. Rev. Code § 4.28.185. These statutes provide jurisdiction to 22 the extent constitutionally permissible under the Due Process Clause. Amoco Egypt Oil Co. v. Leonis
23 Nav. Co., Inc., 1 F.3d 848, 851 (9th Cir. 1993) (quotations omitted). “Thus the statutory and 24 constitutional standards merge into a single due process test.” Id. (quotations omitted).

1 A. Specific Jurisdiction

2 The Ninth Circuit employs a three-prong test to analyze personal jurisdiction.

3 (1) The non-resident defendant must purposefully direct his activities or consummate 4 some transaction with the forum or resident thereof; or perform some act by which he
5 purposefully avails himself of the privilege of conducting activities in the forum, thereby
6 invoking the benefits and protections of its laws;

7 (2) the claim must be one which arises out of or relates to the defendant's forum-related 8 activities; and

9 (3) the exercise of jurisdiction must comport with fair play and substantial justice, i.e. it
10 must be reasonable.

11 Yahoo! Inc. v. La Ligue Contre Le Racisme Et L'Antisemitisme, 433 F.3d 1199, 1205-06 (9th Cir. 2006)
12 (quoting Schwarzenegger v. Fred Martin Motor Co., 374 F.3d 797, 802 (9th Cir. 2004)). Each prong 13 will be analyzed separately.

14 1. Purposeful Availment/Direction

15 The first prong of the specific jurisdiction analysis “may be satisfied by purposeful availment of 16 the privilege of doing business in the forum; by purposeful direction of activities at the forum; or by some 17 combination thereof.” Id. at 1206.

18 The Court finds that Plaintiff purposefully directed its activities toward Washington. The Ninth 19 Circuit employs the “effects” test to determine whether such purposeful direction has indeed occurred. Id.
20 That test requires that “the defendant allegedly must have (1) committed an intentional act, (2) expressly
21 aimed at the forum state, (3) causing harm that the defendant knows is likely to be suffered in the forum
22 state.” Id. (quoting Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d at 803). Defendant satisfied all three prongs by (1) selling
23 via its website its anti-malware software (2) to Washington consumers, that (3) continually interferes with 24 the operation of Plaintiff’s software on those Washington-based computers. Although Defendant is 25 correct that the majority of Plaintiff’s claimed damages may not have occurred in Washington, the Ninth
26 Circuit has explicitly “state[d] that the ‘brunt’ of the harm need not be suffered in the forum state.” Id. at 27 1207. “If a jurisdictionally sufficient amount of harm is suffered in the forum state, it does not matter that 28 even more harm might have been suffered in another state.” Id. Nor does it matter that the transactions

1 are “processed” by a German Internet company, given that Defendant itself procures the orders via its 2 website.

3 2. Arising Out Of

4 The contacts constituting purposeful direction must be a “but for” cause of the current suit. Rio
5 Properties, Inc. v. Rio Intern. Interlink, 284 F.3d 1007, 1021 (9th Cir. 2002). Here, that requirement is 6 met: but for the distribution of Defendant’s software to Washington consumers, its software would not be 7 blocking Plaintiff’s software on those computers.

8 Defendant argues that the “gravamen” of Plaintiff’s Complaint deals with the classification
9 decision—which occurred in Sydney, Australia—and not with the decision to sell the software to 10 Washington consumers. (Def.’s Reply 8 (Dkt. No. 35).) However, the “but for” causation analysis does 11 not require that the sole cause of Plaintiff’s claimed harm arise out of activities in the forum.

12 3. Reasonableness

13 The final prong of the specific jurisdiction analysis is that the exercise of jurisdiction “comports
14 with traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.” Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S.
15 462, 476 (1985). The burden is on Defendant to make a “compelling case” of unreasonableness. Id. at 16 476-77. The following seven factors are relevant to that determination:

17 (1) the extent of a defendant’s purposeful interjection; (2) the burden on the defendant in 18 defending in the forum; (3) the extent of conflict with the sovereignty of the defendant’s 19 state; (4) the forum state’s interest in adjudicating the dispute; (5) the most efficient judicial resolution of the controversy; (6) the importance of the forum to the plaintiff’s interest in convenient and effective relief; and (7) the existence of an alternative forum.

20 Rio Properties, Inc., 284 F.3d at 1021.

21 Defendant has failed to make a “compelling case” that the exercise of jurisdiction in Washington is 22 unreasonable. Defendant purposefully interjected itself into Washington via its website and still continues
23 to distribute significant amounts of its software to the state. While it is true that Plaintiff’s software was 24 classified as malware by employees in Australia, the majority of disputed facts in this case pertain to 25 Plaintiff’s Washington-based software—not to Defendant’s software that blocks it. Many of the witnesses

1 and other sources of evidence will thus be located in Washington, making it the most efficient forum for 2 the resolution of this dispute.

3 Further, Defendant's burden on litigating in Washington is not so great as to demonstrate 4 unreasonableness. While the Court is mindful of "[t]he unique burdens placed upon one who must defend 5 oneself in a foreign legal system," Asahi Metal Ind. v. Superior Court, 480 U.S. 102, 114 (1987), courts
6 have long observed that "modern advances in communications and transportation have significantly
7 reduced the burden of litigating in another country." *Harris Rutsky & Co. Ins. Services, Inc. v. Bell &
8 Clements Ltd.*, 328 F.3d 1122, 1132-33 (9th Cir. 2003) (quoting Sinatra v. National Enquirer, 854 F.2d
9 1191, 1199 (9th Cir.1988)).

10 It is true that Australia provides an adequate alternative forum and that it has its own interest in 11 litigating disputes involving its citizens. However, this Court sees no reason why Australia has a 12 particular interest in adjudicating this dispute as opposed to any other conflict. Further, Washington has a 13 countervailing interest on par with that of Australia in resolving disputes with respect to its citizens.

14 Accordingly, Plaintiff has failed to make a convincing case that the exercise of jurisdiction in 15 Washington would be unreasonable. All prongs of the specific jurisdiction analysis have thus been met.

16 B. General Jurisdiction

17 Because the Court finds there is specific jurisdiction over Defendant, it is unnecessary to reach the 18 issue of general jurisdiction at this time.

19 C. *Forum Non Conveniens

20 "A district court has discretion to decline to exercise jurisdiction in a case where litigation in a 21 foreign forum would be more convenient for the parties." Tuazon v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 433
22 F.3d 1163, 1177 (9th Cir. 2006) (citations omitted). "In exercising this discretion, a court will consider
23 whether an adequate alternate forum exists and whether the balance of public and private interests favors
24 a different forum." Id. Here, there is no dispute that Australia would provide an adequate alternative 25 forum. Thus, the Court need only address the public and private factors.

1 The Court will “not disturb the plaintiff’s original choice of forum unless the private interest and
2 the public interest factors strongly favor dismissal.” Id. at 1180 (quoting Lueck v. Sundstrand Corp., 236
3 F.3d 1137, 1145 (9th Cir. 2001) (internal quotations omitted). “[A] plaintiff need not select the optimal
4 forum for his claim, but only a forum that is not so oppressive and vexatious to the defendant ‘as to be
5 out of proportion to plaintiff’s convenience.’” Id. (quoting Ravelo Monegro v. Rosa, 211 F.3d 509, 514
6 (9th Cir. 2000)).

7 In analyzing the private factors, the Court is to examine “any or all” of the following factors:

8 (1) the residence of the parties and witnesses, (2) the forum’s convenience to the litigants,
9 (3) access to physical evidence and other sources of proof, (4) whether unwilling 10 witnesses can be compelled to testify, (5) the cost of bringing witnesses to trial, (6) the enforceability of the judgment, (7) any practical problems or other factors that contribute to an efficient resolution.

11 Tuazon, 433 F.3d at 1180. As indicated above, both Plaintiff and witnesses regarding its anti-malware
12 software reside in Washington, making it the most efficient forum to resolve this dispute, even though
13 Defendant and some witnesses may reside in Australia. All other factors are neutral or weigh in Plaintiff’s
14 favor. Thus, the private factors do not favor dismissal.

15 The relevant public factors are as follows: “(1) the local interest in the lawsuit, (2) the court’s
16 familiarity with the governing law, (3) the burden on local courts and juries, (4) congestion in the court,
17 and (5) the costs of resolving a dispute unrelated to a particular forum.” Id. at 1181. The Court finds that 18 all of these factors are neutral or point in Plaintiff’s favor. Accordingly, none of these factors favor 19 dismissal.

20 Because Defendant has not met its burden of demonstrating that the balance of public and private 21 factors favors dismissal, its motion to dismiss based on forum non conveniens is hereby denied.
