1 2 3 4 5 6 7 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT 8 WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON AT SEATTLE 9 10 BRIAN BRIMM FALETOGO, CASE NO. C12-1224-RSM Petitioner, 11 ORDER DENYING PETITIONER'S MOTION UNDER 28 U.S.C. § 2255 12 v. TO VACATE, SET ASIDE, OR CORRECT SENTENCE BY A 13 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, PERSON IN FEDERAL CUSTODY Respondent. 14 15 I. INTRODUCTION 16 17 Before the Court is Petitioner's 28 U.S.C. § 2255 Motion to Vacate, Set Aside, or Correct 18 Sentence. (Dkt. # 1). Brian Brimm Faletogo challenges the 78 month sentence imposed on him 19 by this Court. On September 23, 2009, Petitioner pled guilty to one count of a felon in 20 possession of a firearm. At sentencing, the Court applied a four-level enhancement to Faletogo's 21 base offense level and imposed a sentence above the calculated Guideline range. Faletogo 22 appealed his conviction and sentence. In Faletogo's appeal, his counsel argued that the Court 23 could not impose the four-level upward adjustment because it did not have clear and convincing 24

evidence that Faletogo used the firearm in connection with another felony. The Ninth Circuit denied his appeal and held that the four-level sentencing enhancement was warranted for using the firearm in connection with the felony offense of assault. Petitioner timely brought this petition challenging his sentence for ineffective assistance of counsel and lack of evidentiary support for the four-level enhancement. After full consideration of the record and for the reasons set forth below, Faletogo's § 2255 Petition is DENIED.

II. BACKGROUND

Petitioner was prosecuted after his arrest resulting from investigation of a 9-1-1 call reporting an assault with a firearm at the El Toro Apartments. After his indictment, defense counsel entered into plea negotiations with the United States and Petitioner entered a plea of guilty to one count of felon in possession of a firearm on September 23, 2009. Prior to sentencing, Faletogo moved to withdraw his plea and the Court held an evidentiary hearing on December 7, 2010. At the hearing, the Court concluded that Faletogo was cognizant of the charge against him and of the consequences of entering a guilty plea. Dkt. # 5-1, p. 257. The Court also concluded that he entered the plea of his own volition. The Court denied Faletogo's motion to withdraw his guilty plea. Id. at 258.

The Court held an evidentiary hearing during sentencing to determine whether to impose a four-level base offense upward enhancement. Probation's Presentence Report recommended that the Court impose a four-level enhancement for the unlawful possession of the firearm in connection with another felony pursuant to USSG § 2K2.1(b)(6)(B). The Presentence Report recommended this enhancement for assault in the second degree based on the grounds of assault with a deadly weapon under RCW 9A.36.021(1)(c). Faletogo objected to the upward adjustment and argued that he did not use the firearm in connection with another felony because he did not point the gun at his brother. Faletogo and his brother then testified that Faletogo did not point the gun at his brother. However, based on the witnesses' written statements and other relevant evidence such as the 9-1-1 call transcript and the reporting officer's testimony, the Court found Faletogo and his brothers' testimony at the hearing not credible. Dkt. # 5-1, pp. 90-92. Upon reviewing the facts, exhibits, witness testimony, and evidence before it, the Court held that Faletogo was subject to a four-level upward adjustment because Faletogo used the unlawfully possessed firearm in connection with assault in the second degree when he pointed it at his brother.

Next, the Court imposed Faletogo's sentence. It found the Guideline range to be 51 to 63 months. The Court considered whether to depart from the guidelines based on traditional factors as well as the USSG 3553(a) factors. The Court, disturbed by Faletogo's long criminal history and the violent nature of that criminal history, held that an upward departure from the Guideline range of 51 to 63 months was warranted because Faletogo's criminal history score was underrepresented. The Court found that if Faletogo's criminal history score was increased by one level, the range would be 63 to 78 months. The Court sentenced Faletogo to 78 months of imprisonment. Dkt. # 5-1, pp. 110-118.

III. DISCUSSION

Petitioner now brings a motion to vacate, set aside, or correct his sentence. A 28 U.S.C. § 2255 motion permits a federal prisoner, in custody, to collaterally challenge his sentence on the grounds that it was imposed in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States or that the Court lacked jurisdiction to impose the sentence or that the sentence exceeded the maximum authorized by law. Here, Petitioner challenges his sentence on the grounds that he received ineffective assistance of counsel, and that the Court erred in imposing a sentence of 78 months of imprisonment. The Court finds that Petitioner is not entitled to an evidentiary hearing in this matter because the petition, files, and totality of the record conclusively demonstrate that Faletogo is not entitled to relief. See United States v. Howard, 381 F.3d 873, 877 (9th Cir. 2004).

A. Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

Petitioner argues that he received ineffective assistance of counsel in two circumstances.

First, Petitioner asserts that he received ineffective assistance of counsel at his sentencing.

Second, Petitioner asserts that he received ineffective assistance of counsel for his appeal.

To establish a claim for ineffective assistance of counsel, Petitioner must prove (1) that counsel's performance was deficient and, (2) that the deficient performance prejudiced the defense. Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 687 (1984). In order to establish that counsel's performance was deficient, a petitioner must show that counsel's performance fell below an objective standard of reasonableness. Id. at 688. There is a strong presumption that counsel was within the range of reasonable assistance. Id. at 689. In order to establish that the counsel's performance prejudiced the defense, a petitioner "must show that there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different. A reasonable probability is a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the outcome." Id. at 694.

Petitioner asserts that his counsel should have argued that the four-level enhancement was not proper because the government did not prove the necessary elements of assault in the second degree. Specifically, in his Reply brief, Petitioner argues that his counsel should have argued that the government did not prove that Petitioner acted with intent or knowledge, and the government did not show that "substantial bodily harm" occurred.

defendant "used or possessed any firearm or ammunition in connection with another felony offense; or possessed or transferred any firearm or ammunition with knowledge, intent, or reason to believe that it would be used or possessed in connection with another felony offense."

Therefore, under the first scenario, the government must only prove that the defendant actually used or possessed the firearm during, or in connection with, another felony offense. Under the second scenario, the government must prove that the defendant possessed or transferred the firearm to another individual with the intent, knowledge, or reasonable belief that the firearm would be used by himself, or another, to commit a felony offense in the future. Thus, in contrast to the second scenario, the government did not need to prove intent for application of the four-level enhancement application under USSG § 2K2.1(b)(6)(B) because Faletogo possessed a firearm in connection with a felony assault.

The Court found overwhelming evidence at the evidentiary hearing in support of the fact that Faletogo "reached into his jacket, pulled out a silver or nickel plated pistol, racked or cycled a round into the chamber, pointed the gun at his brother – at the chest of his brother, who was sitting on the couch in the living room." Dkt. # 5-1, p. 91. Based on this fact, the Court held that clear and convincing evidence existed to support the four-level enhancement because Faletogo's conduct amounted to the felony offense of assault in the second degree. Dkt. # 5-1, pp. 91–93. Because the four-level enhancement for using the firearm in assault in the second degree does not require a showing of intent knowledge, or reasonable belief, counsel's failure to raise the issue of intent or knowledge at sentencing was neither unreasonable nor prejudicial.

Petitioner also asserts that his counsel should have argued that the four-level enhancement does not apply because Petitioner's actions regarding the firearm are a misdemeanor rather than a felony. Petitioner cites RCW 9.41.230(1)(a), which states that a person is guilty of a gross misdemeanor, when that person "[a]ims any firearm, whether loaded or not, at or towards any human being." However, RCW 9.41.230 only applies "[f]or conduct not amounting to a violation of chapter 9A.36 RCW." At the evidentiary hearing, the Court held that Petitioner violated RCW 9A.36, assault in the second degree, when he pointed a loaded firearm at his brother. Dkt. # 5-1, pp. at 91–93. Thus, counsel's failure to raise RCW 9.41.230 was neither unreasonable nor prejudicial because RCW 9.41.230 does not apply to a situation where a defendant's conduct amounts to the felony offense of assault in the second degree.

Petitioner also fails to show that he received ineffective counsel for his appeal. Petitioner argues that his appellate counsel failed to argue that the facts, even as found by the Court, did not establish that he committed the felony offense of assault in the second degree by clear and convincing evidence. However, his appellate counsel did argue that "[t]there was not sufficient evidence to support the district court's finding that he used a gun in connection with an assault by clear and convincing evidence." Dkt. 5-1, pp. 12–15. Thus, appellate counsel's representation was neither unreasonable nor prejudicial because counsel did in fact make the argument on appeal that Petitioner now presents in his motion to vacate sentencing.

In addition, Petitioner asserts that his counsel should have argued that the Court cannot apply the four-level enhancement because Petitioner committed a misdemeanor rather than a felony. According to Petitioner, the Court did not have clear and convincing evidence of the felony crime of assault in the second degree; rather, the Court had clear and convincing evidence of the gross misdemeanor crime of aiming a loaded or unloaded gun at another human being under RCW 9.41.230(1)(a). Again, RCW 9.41.230(1)(a) only applies to conduct not in violation of RCW 9A.36, however Petitioner violated chapter RCW 9A.36 when, as the Court held in the evidentiary hearing, Petitioner assaulted his brother with the unlawfully possessed firearm. Dkt.

5-1, pp. 91–93. Even if the Court found clear and convincing evidence of a misdemeanor crime, the Court still would find clear and convincing evidence of the felony crime of assault in the second degree because the Court found overwhelming evidence that Faletogo pointed the loaded and unlawfully possessed firearm at his brother. Dkt. # 5-1, pp. at 91–93. Thus, appellate counsel's failure to raise RCW 9.41.230(1)(a) was neither unreasonable nor prejudicial.

B. Base Offense Four-Level Enhancement

Pursuant to USSG 2K2.1(b)(6)(B), a four-level enhancement applies if the defendant "used or possessed any firearm or ammunition in connection with another felony offense; or possessed or transferred any firearm or ammunition with knowledge, intent, or reason to believe that it would be used or possessed in connection with another felony offense." Again, there are two scenarios in which this enhancement applies. In the first scenario, if a defendant actually uses the unlawfully possessed firearm in connection with another felony, then the enhancement applies regardless of the defendant's intent. In the second scenario, if the defendant did not actually use the unlawfully possessed firearm in connection with another felony but knew, intended to, or reasonably believed the firearm would be used in another felony, then the enhancement applies if the government proves intent, knowledge, or reasonable belief.

Here, the Court applied the enhancement under the first scenario because it found that Petitioner actually assaulted his brother with the unlawfully possessed firearm. The Court did not assume that Petitioner used the firearm to assault his brother. Rather, the Court held an evidentiary hearing to make this determination. Upon finding the testimony at the evidentiary hearing not credible, and after reviewing all of the facts and evidence, the Court concluded that the Petitioner "reached into his jacket, pulled out a silver or nickel plated pistol, racked or cycled a round into the chamber, pointed the gun at his brother – at the chest of his brother, who was sitting on the couch in the living room." Dkt. # 5-1, pp. at 91. Based on the totality of the evidence, the Court held that clear and convincing evidence exists to support the conclusion that defendant's conduct amounted to felony assault in the second degree. Because a showing of intent is not necessary for the application of the four-level enhancement in this circumstance under USSG 2K2.1(b)(6)(B), the Court correctly applied the four-level enhancement.

C. Certificate of Appealability

A petitioner seeking post-conviction relief under § 2255 may appeal a district court's dismissal of his federal habeas petition only after obtaining a certificate of appealability from a district or circuit judge. A certificate of appealability may issue only where a petitioner has made "a substantial showing of the denial of a constitutional right." See 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(3). A petitioner satisfies this standard "by demonstrating that jurists of reason could disagree with the district court's resolution of his constitutional claims or that jurists could conclude the issues presented are adequate to deserve encouragement to proceed further." Miller-El v. Cockrell, 537 U.S. 322, 327 (2003). Under this standard, the Court concludes that petitioner is not entitled to a certificate of appealability with respect to any of the claims in his § 2255 motion.

IV. CONCLUSION

The Court, having considered Petitioner's motion, Respondent's response thereto, the reply, and the remainder of the record, hereby finds and ORDERS:

(1) Petitioner's 28 U.S.C. § 2255 motion (Dkt. #1) is hereby DENIED.
