

EXHIBIT 33

Google reader

Add a subscription

Home

All items (1000+)

Starred items ☆

Your stuff

Shared items

Notes

Trends and

Browse for stuff

People you follow

You can now search for people sharing publicly in Reader. Search for some people

Sharing settings >

Explore

Recommended sources

View all recommendations >

Subscriptions

Small Photo (1000+)

- Cafe Overload (8)
- Design Milk (138)
- Business Contact (22)
- Jake And Amir Bot Com (14)
- Just Baste - a health... (8)
- La Tortine Gourmande (8)
- MAKE Magazine (25)
- PaperDogs (22)
- Rock, Paper, Shotgun (27)
- The Big Picture (17)
- The Stream (17)
- ThinkGeek x What's New (12)
- What's New in Google (2)
- What's New in Google ... (23)

Manage subscriptions >

Show: new items - all items

show details

Man Cons Woman Into Paying For eBay Auction She Won

from The Consumenist by Ben Popken

100+ people liked this

A guy over on Reddit had tickets to a big sporting event but at the last minute couldn't go, so he sold them on eBay for $600. The event was in less than 24 hours and when he contacted the winning bidder after they didn't pay for a while, the woman told him that her husband had said that it was too much money and wouldn't let her go. Never mind that winning an eBay bid is a binding contract and now the guy has little chance of selling the tickets. So he concocted a fendish scheme to trick her into paying.

What he did is email her from a different email address and say hey, I saw you won those tickets, I'd really like to go, can I buy them from you for $1,000? She agreed, and lo and behold, she contacts him as the original seller and says "oops, changed my mind, I want to pay for those after all." He brings her the tickets, collects the money, and then goes home and has his sockpuppet bidder back out of the deal with her.

Once again proving there are two user classes on eBay: predator and prey.

Unethical? Yes. Legal? Probably not. An eBay bid is a binding contract. An email is not.

What do you think? Sound off in the comments.

[How I got an uncooperative eBay buyer to pay for her purchase. Was it unethical? \[Reddit\]](#)

2:24 PM (2 hours ago)

Add star
 Like Share
 Share with note
 Email
 Keep unread
 Not interested
 Add tags

more than 20 items