NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks pulled back Monday as the dollar rose and traders retraced from a rally that brought indexes to their highest levels since the peak of the financial crisis in September 2007.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 40.58, or 0.4 percent, to 11,453.25 in mid-day trading. It had surged 2.9 percent last week after the Federal Reserve announced a $500 billion stimulus package for the U.S. economy.

The Standard and Poor's 500 index fell 3.98, or 0.3 percent, to 1,221.97. The Nasdaq composite index slid 0.27, or 0.1 percent, to 2,570.84.

Technology companies were the only group among the 10 industry areas of the S&P 500 index to post gains. Financial companies were down the most, at 1.2 percent.

"Today is shaping up to be a modest set-off and that's to be expected," said Barnaby Levin, a managing director at HighTower Advisors.

Stocks have risen in recent weeks on better-than-expected corporate earnings reports and the introduction of a bond-buying program by the Federal Reserve that is intended to stimulate the economy by driving interest rates lower and encouraging spending.

The dollar rose 0.7 percent against a broad basket of currencies. That's a negative for big U.S. companies like Caterpillar Inc. that do a lot of business overseas, since a higher dollar makes their products more expensive in other countries.
