

1
2 3
4
5
6
7 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
8 AT SEATTLE

9 CHARLES JAMES WILLIAMS,

10 Petitioner,

11 v.

12 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

13 Respondent.

CASE NO. C16-0939RSM

ORDER DENYING PETITIONER'S
MOTION UNDER 28 U.S.C. § 2255
TO VACATE, SET ASIDE, OR CORRECT SENTENCE BY A PERSON IN FEDERAL CUSTODY

14 I. INTRODUCTION

15 Before the Court is Petitioner's 28 U.S.C. § 2255 Motion to Vacate, Set Aside, or 16 Correct Sentence. Dkt. # 1. Petitioner Charles James Williams challenges the 150-month 17 sentence imposed on him by this Court following his conviction for Possession of Cocaine 18 Base with Intent to Distribute, in violation of 21 U.S.C. §§841(a)(1) and 841(b)(1)(C), and a 19 concurrent 120-month sentence imposed under a separate indictment for Being a Felon in 20 Possession of a Firearm, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §922(g)(1). Petitioner filed an application with 21 the Ninth Circuit to file this second §2255 motion, which was granted on June 1, 2016. Dkt.
22 #1-1. Petitioner challenges his sentence on the basis that the United States Supreme Court's 23 decision in Johnson v. United States, ___ U.S. ___, 135 S. Ct. 2551 (2015), applies retroactively 24 to his case and requires that the Court resentence him under a different Guideline range

1 calculation. After full consideration of the record, and for the reasons set forth below, the 2 Court DENIES Mr. Williams' § 2255 motion.

3 II. BACKGROUND

4 On November 7, 2007, Mr. Williams was charged with one count of being a Felon in 5 Possession of a Firearm in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 922(g)(1).¹ Case No. CR07-380RSM, Dkt.
6 #8. On December 12, 2007, Mr. Williams was charged with one count of Possession of 7 Cocaine Base, in the form of Crack Cocaine, with the Intent to Distribute, in violation of 21 8 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1) and 841(b)(1)(C). Case No. CR07-426RSM, Dkt. #1. Mr. Williams was 9 convicted by jury trial of the Felon in Possession charge and pled guilty to the separate cocaine 10 charge. See Case No. CR07-380RSM, Dkt. #55; Case No. CR07-426RSM, Dkt. #50. These 11 two cases were then consolidated for sentencing purposes.

12 Mr. Williams' sentencing took place on June 10, 2009. The defense requested 75 13 months for both offenses. See Dkts. #67 at 25; #100 at 62. The Government requested 210 14 months. See Dkt. #68 at 30. The Court calculated the felon in possession offense at a total 15 offense level of 28, criminal history category six, calling for a range of 140 to 175 months, with 16 a statutory maximum of 120 months. Dkt. #100 at 64. The Court calculated the drug offense at 17 a base level of 22, with two points off for pleading guilty. Id. However, the Court applied the 18 Guidelines' Career Offender enhancement raising the offense level to 32, level 30 after 19 pleading guilty, calling for a range of 168 to 210 months. Id. Taking all of this into 20 consideration, the Court imposed 120 months for the felon in possession and 150 months for

21
22
23 ¹ Mr. Williams had previously been convicted in King County, Washington, for possession of cocaine and felony 24 harassment, and in Dade County, Florida, for robbery using a deadly weapon or firearm and carrying a concealed firearm.

1 the drug offense, to run concurrently, and with credit for time served. Id. at 67. The Court took 2 the opportunity to point out the following:

3 ...if no career offender status had been found by the court, then the 4 drug offense in this case would carry 70- to 87-month range on its 5 own. The court, because these are two completely separate 6 offenses, had the discretion to impose concurrent or consecutive 7 sentences. The court would have imposed in that case 120 months 8 on the gun count and would have imposed a consecutive 30-month 9 custody on the drug offense to get to the same spot that we are 10 now.

11 Id. at 67. The Court imposed six special conditions upon release recommended by Probation.

12 Id. at 65-66. The Court did not impose a monetary fine. Id. at 66. There was no appeal.

13 On April 21, 2016, based on the U.S. Supreme Court decisions in Johnson, supra, and 14 Welch v. United States, ___ U.S., ___, 136 S. Ct. 1257 (2016), Mr. Williams filed the instant 15 motion. Dkt. #1.

16 III. DISCUSSION

17 A. Legal Standard

18 A motion under 28 U.S.C. § 2255 permits a federal prisoner in custody to collaterally 19 challenge his sentence on the grounds that it was imposed in violation of the Constitution or 20 laws of the United States, or that the Court lacked jurisdiction to impose the sentence or that the 21 sentence exceeded the maximum authorized by law. A petitioner seeking relief under § 2255
 22 must file his motion with the one-year statute of limitations set forth in § 2255(f). That section 23 provides, inter alia, that a motion is timely if it is filed within one year of the underlying 24 judgment or “the date on which the right asserted was initially recognized by the Supreme Court, if that right has been newly recognized by the Supreme Court and made retroactively applicable to cases on collateral review.” § 2255(f).

1 B. Mr. Williams’ Motion

2 As noted above, Petitioner’s motion to vacate follows the Supreme Court’s decision in 3 Johnson v. United States, supra. In Johnson, the Supreme Court ruled on a section of the 4 Armed Career Criminal Act (“ACCA”) known as the “residual clause,” which provided a 5 definition of “violent felony.” Under the ACCA, a defendant convicted of being a felon in 6 possession of a firearm faces a mandatory minimum sentence of 15 years if he has three prior 7 convictions for “violent felonies.” 18 U.S.C. § 924(e)(1). The ACCA residual clause provided 8 that a violent felony was one that “otherwise involves conduct that presents a serious potential 9 risk of physical injury to another.” 18 U.S.C. § 924(e)(2)(B)(ii). In Johnson, the Supreme 10 Court held that this clause was “unconstitutionally vague.” 135 S. Ct. at 2557. In doing so, the 11 Court necessarily found the clause “vague in all its applications,” id. at 2561, and concluded 12 that “[i]ncreasing a defendant’s sentence under the clause denies due process of law,” id. at 13 2557. Subsequently, in Welch v. United States, the Court held that Johnson applies 14 retroactively to defendants whose sentences were enhanced under the ACCA’s residual clause.
15 136 S. Ct. at 1265.

16 In the instant matter, Petitioner was not sentenced as a career offender under the ACCA.
17 Rather, he was sentenced under the United States Sentencing Guidelines (“USSG” or 18 “Guidelines”). The Guidelines also include in its definition of “crime of violence” a sentence 19 identical to the ACCA residual clause. See USSG § 4B1.2(a)(2) (providing that a “crime of 20 violence means any offense...[that] otherwise involves conduct that presents a serious potential 21 risk of physical injury to another”); see also United States v. Spencer, 724 F.3d 1133, 1138 (9th 22 Cir. 2013) (holding that the Ninth Circuit makes “no distinction between the terms ‘violent 23 felony’ [as defined in the ACCA] and ‘crime of violence’ [as defined in § 4B1.2(a)(2) of the 24

1 Sentencing Guidelines] for purposes of interpreting the residual clause[s]”). Thus, Petitioner
2 now moves to vacate, set aside, or correct his sentence under 28 U.S.C. § 2255, arguing that it 3 was unconstitutional under Johnson and Welch, and that his sentence is no longer appropriate.

4 In response, the Government argues that Petitioner’s claim is untimely, otherwise 5 procedurally barred, and that Johnson’s holding does not apply retroactively to Guidelines 6 sentences. Dkt. #6.

7 C. Timeliness

8 The Government argues that, even if the Court finds that Johnson does apply 9 retroactively to Guidelines cases, Petitioner’s motion is untimely because he is not really relying 10 on the new rule in Johnson but other prior rules, and therefore the one-year statute of limitations 11 ran before he brought his petition. Dkt. # 6 at 11. The Government frames the case thusly:

12 Williams’s litigation strategy is transparent. Williams is trying to 13 convince the Court that because his predicate convictions would 14 not count as crimes of violence were he sentenced today—because 15 Johnson I and Descamps render Florida’s armed robbery statute 16 overbroad and indivisible thus making USSG §4B1.2(a)(1)’s 17 elements clause inapplicable, because USSG §4B1.2(a)(2)’s 18 residual clause is invalid after Johnson II, and because the Shepard 19 documents fail to show his harassment conviction was under a 20 statutory alternative that qualifies as a crime of violence—he 21 should be afforded relief from his sentences. But the question 22 presented by this motion is not simply whether, under the law as it 23 now stands, the Court correctly calculated Williams’s Guidelines 24 ranges. Thus, even if Williams is right that, under the current state of the law, his convictions would not qualify as crimes of violence under §4B1.2(a)(1)’s elements clause (he is not), this is not presently relevant given the procedural posture of this case.

Dkt. #6 at 10. The Government cites to In re Hires, 825 F.3d 1297, 2016 WL 3342668 (11th Cir. June 15, 2016) as procedurally on point. Id. In Hires, The Eleventh Circuit determined that the Petitioner’s claim had four subparts: “(1) Descamps held that courts may not use the modified categorical approach unless the state statute of conviction is divisible; (2) the relevant

1 Florida statutes are now indivisible; (3) Descamps thus undermines our above precedents holding 2 Hires’s aggravated assault and robbery convictions qualify under the elements clause, and 3 Hires’s convictions, if sentenced today, would not qualify under the elements clause; and (4) 4 today the government would have to rely on only the residual clause which Johnson voided.” 5 825 F.3d at 1302-03. The Eleventh Circuit found that “what matters here is whether, at 6 sentencing, Hires’s prior convictions qualified pursuant to the residual clause, which would 7 render his sentence subject to successive § 2255 challenge under Johnson, or pursuant to the 8 elements clause, which would not.” Id. at 1303. The Eleventh Circuit denied Hires’ §2255
9 motion, finding that Hires’ convictions qualified under the elements clause. The Government 10 thus argues that the relevant question here is not whether Williams could be sentenced as a career 11 offender today, but whether, at sentencing, Williams’ prior convictions qualified pursuant to the 12 residual clause, or pursuant to the elements clause. Dkt. # 6 at 10. The Government argues that 13 “Williams cannot show the Court actually relied on the residual clause of USSG §4B1.2(a)(2) to 14 find his harassment conviction qualified as crimes of violence, and even if the Court did rely on 15 that clause when evaluating his armed robbery conviction, any such mistake was harmless” 16 because “[t]he Court alternatively—and correctly—ruled this conviction is a crime of violence 17 under USSG §4B1.2(a)(1)’s elements clause...” Id. at 11. Following the logic of Hires, this 18 alone would be sufficient to deny the Motion.

19 On Reply, Petitioner argues:

20 At the time of his sentencing, the district court judge found that 21 Williams’s prior convictions for felony harassment and robbery 22 were crimes of violence under the categorical or the modified 23 categorical analysis. Until Johnson eliminated the residual clause, 24 it did not matter that district court erred in its analysis on the elements clause because the Government would have simply turned to the residual clause to support its claim that these two crimes were crimes of violence. However, with the elimination of 1 the residual clause, this Court must determine whether the district 2 court's elements analysis is correct. If it was not, Williams is entitled to relief.

3 Dkt #7 at 2. Petitioner provides no legal citation for these assertions. Petitioner later argues that 4 "it is Johnson, and not Descamps, that negates Williams's status as a career criminal, and 5 "[w]ithout Johnson, Williams would have no claim that he was not a career offender, even if 6 Descamps were never decided, because Williams's prior convictions would almost certainly 7 have qualified as predicate felonies under the residual clause." Id. at 4. Petitioner fails to 8 address the Government's analysis of Hires.

9 The Court finds Hires instructive and generally agrees with the Government's argument.
10 §2255 petitions must be filed within a one-year statute of limitations period. Petitioner's one-11 year period measured from the underlying criminal judgment has long since expired, and so 12 Petitioner relies on the portion of §2255(f) that allows filing within one year of "the date on 13 which the right asserted was initially recognized by the Supreme Court, if that right has been 14 newly recognized by the Supreme Court and made retroactively applicable to cases on collateral 15 review." §2255(f) (emphasis added). Johnson created a new right, but this is not the right 16 asserted by Petitioner. The Court agrees with the Government that Petitioner cannot show the 17 Court actually relied on the residual clause of USSG §4B1.2(a)(2) to find his harassment 18 conviction qualified as a crime of violence, and even if the Court did rely on that clause when 19 evaluating his armed robbery conviction, any such mistake was harmless. Because Petitioner 20 cites to no authority to support his position that "with the elimination of the residual clause, this 21 Court must determine whether the district court's elements analysis is correct," the Court finds 22 that Petitioner cannot overcome the issue of timeliness and that this Motion is properly denied on 23 that basis alone.

1 D. Retroactivity and other Procedural Bars

2 The Government argues that Johnson does not apply retroactively to cases such as the 3 instant one, where the sentence was imposed under the Guidelines. Dkt. #6 at 17-27. Although 4 the Court has previously found against the Government making this same argument, see Parker, 5 the Court need not address this issue given the above timeliness ruling.

6 The Government also argues that Petitioner’s motion is procedurally barred because “at 7 no time did Williams contend his convictions could not be analyzed under USSG §4B1.2(a)(2)’s 8 residual clause, and he certainly never argued the residual clause is unconstitutionally vague” 9 and because he “did not raise any challenge to his sentences on direct review.” Dkt. #6 at 13.
10 The Court need not address this issue given the above timeliness ruling.

11 E. Certificate of Appealability

12 A petitioner may not appeal a decision denying a motion under 28 U.S.C. §2255 without 13 obtaining a certificate of appealability. 28 U.S.C. §2253(c)(1)(B). The decision whether to grant 14 a certificate of appealability must be made by this Court in the first instance. See Ninth Circuit 15 Rule 22-1(a); see also Fed. R. App. P. 22(b)(1). To obtain a certificate of appealability, the 16 petitioner must show “that jurists of reason would find it debatable whether the petition states a 17 valid claim of the denial of a constitutional right.” Slack v. McDaniel, 529 U.S. 473, 484 (2000).
18 If any of petitioner’s claims are found procedurally defective, he must also show “that jurists of 19 reason would find it debatable whether the district court was correct in its procedural ruling.” Id.

20 The Government argues only that Petitioner “has not advanced a colorable substantive 21 claim for relief, nor any claim that is not procedurally defective.” Dkt. #6 at 44. Petitioner 22 argues against the Government’s position on timeliness, but does not directly address this issue.

1 Having considered all of the above, the Court determines that the issues in this case are 2 essentially unsettled in the Ninth Circuit and will grant Petitioner a certificate of appealability.

3 IV. CONCLUSION

4 Having considered Petitioner's motion, Respondent's answer thereto, and the remainder 5 of the record, the Court hereby finds and ORDERS:

- 6 1. Petitioner's Motion to Vacate or Correct Sentence under § 2255 (Dkt. #1) is 7 DENIED.
- 8 2. Petitioner is GRANTED a Certificate of Appealability in this matter.
- 9 3. The Clerk of the Court is directed to forward a copy of this Order to Petitioner and 10 all counsel of record.

11 12 DATED this 11 day of October, 2016.

13
14

15 RICARDO S. MARTINEZ
16 CHIEF UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE