5 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
6 WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
7 AT SEATTLE

8 DENNIS A.,

9 Plaintiff,

CASE NO. C18-0776-MAT

10 v.

ORDER RE: SOCIAL SECURITY
DISABILITY APPEAL

11 NANCY A. BERRYHILL, Deputy Commissioner of Social Security for Operations,

12 Defendant.
13

14 Plaintiff proceeds through counsel in his appeal of a final decision of the Commissioner of 15 the Social Security Administration (Commissioner). The Commissioner denied plaintiff's 16 application for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) after a hearing before an Administrative Law 17 Judge (ALJ). Having considered the ALJ's decision, the administrative record (AR), and all 18 memoranda of record, this matter is AFFIRMED.

19 FACTS AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

20 Plaintiff was born on XXXX, 1971.¹ He obtained his GED and a certificate in office
21 automation, but has no past relevant work. (AR 41-42, 236.)

22 Plaintiff protectively filed an SSI application on July 7, 2013, alleging disability beginning

1 January 1, 2003. (AR 162.) His application was denied at the initial level and on reconsideration.

2 On October 12, 2016, ALJ Keith Allred held a hearing, taking testimony from plaintiff and 3 a vocational expert (VE). (AR 34-73.) On March 20, 2017, the ALJ issued a decision finding 4 plaintiff not disabled from the SSI application date of July 7, 2014² through the date of the decision.
5 (AR 15-29.)

6 Plaintiff timely appealed. The Appeals Council denied plaintiff's request for review on 7 March 26, 2018 (AR 1-5), making the ALJ's decision the final decision of the Commissioner.
8 Plaintiff appealed this final decision of the Commissioner to this Court.

9 JURISDICTION

10 The Court has jurisdiction to review the ALJ's decision pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 405(g).

11 DISCUSSION

12 The Commissioner follows a five-step sequential evaluation process for determining 13 whether a claimant is disabled. See 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520, 416.920 (2000). At step one, it must 14 be determined whether the claimant is gainfully employed. The ALJ found plaintiff had not 15 engaged in substantial gainful activity since the alleged onset date. At step two, it must be 16 determined whether a claimant suffers from a severe impairment. The ALJ found plaintiff's 17 diabetes mellitus with ulnar and foot neuropathy, depressive disorder, anxiety disorder, post-18 traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), and drug addiction and alcoholism (DAA) severe. Step three 19 asks whether a claimant's impairments meet or equal a listed impairment. The ALJ found 20 plaintiff's impairments did not meet or equal the criteria of a listed impairment.

21 If a claimant's impairments do not meet or equal a listing, the Commissioner must assess 23 ² The earliest month a claimant can receive SSI is the month after the month the claimant filed the application. 20 C.F.R. § 416.335. The time period considered begins one year prior to the protective filing date. See § 416.912(d) (2015), as amended, § 416.912(b)(1) (2017).

1 residual functional capacity (RFC) and determine at step four whether the claimant has 2 demonstrated an inability to perform past relevant work. The ALJ found plaintiff able to perform 3 sedentary work, with the following limitations: lift and carry ten pounds occasionally and less 4 than ten pounds frequently; sit for six hours and stand and walk together for two hours in an eight-5 hour workday with normal rest breaks; occasionally climb ramps and stairs, as well as balance, 6 stoop, bend, squat, kneel, and crouch; never crawl or climb ladders, ropes, or scaffolds; never have 7 exposure to workplace hazards, such as unprotected heights or moving machinery; able to perform 8 the basic mental demands of competitive, remunerative, unskilled work, including the ability to 9 understand, carry out, and remember simple instructions; able to respond appropriately to 10 supervision, co-workers, and usual work situations; can deal with changes in a routine work 11 setting; and can have no more than occasional interaction with the general public. Plaintiff had no 12 past relevant work.

13 If a claimant demonstrates an inability to perform past relevant work, or has no past 14 relevant work, the burden shifts to the Commissioner to demonstrate at step five that the claimant 15 retains the capacity to make an adjustment to work that exists in significant levels in the national 16 economy. With the assistance of the VE, the ALJ found plaintiff capable of performing other jobs, 17 such as work as a document preparer, addresser, and final assembler.

18 This Court's review of the ALJ's decision is limited to whether the decision is in 19 accordance with the law and the findings supported by substantial evidence in the record as a 20 whole. See Penny v. Sullivan, 2 F.3d 953, 956 (9th Cir. 1993). Accord Marsh v. Colvin, 792 F.3d 21 1170, 1172 (9th Cir. 2015) ("We will set aside a denial of benefits only if the denial is unsupported 22 by substantial evidence in the administrative record or is based on legal error.") Substantial 23 evidence means more than a scintilla, but less than a preponderance; it means such relevant

1 evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion. Magallanes v.
2 Bowen, 881 F.2d 747, 750 (9th Cir. 1989). If there is more than one rational interpretation, one of 3 which supports the ALJ's decision, the Court must uphold that decision. Thomas v. Barnhart, 278 4 F.3d 947, 954 (9th Cir. 2002).

5 Plaintiff argues the ALJ erred in weighing medical opinion evidence and considering his 6 subjective allegations, and that those errors impacted the RFC assessment and step five finding.
7 He requests remand for further administrative proceedings. The Commissioner argues the ALJ's 8 decision has the support of substantial evidence and should be affirmed.

9 Medical Opinions

10 As a general matter, more weight should be given to the opinion of a treating doctor than 11 to a non-treating doctor, and more weight to the opinion of an examining doctor than to a non-12 examining doctor. Lester v. Chater, 81 F.3d 821, 830 (9th Cir. 1996). Where not contradicted by 13 another doctor, a treating or examining doctor's opinion may be rejected only for "clear and 14 convincing" reasons. Id. (quoting Baxter v. Sullivan, 923 F.2d 1391, 1396 (9th Cir. 1991)). Where 15 contradicted, the opinion of a treating or examining doctor's opinion may not be rejected without 16 "specific and legitimate reasons' supported by substantial evidence in the record for so doing."
17 Id. at 830-31 (quoting Murray v. Heckler, 722 F.2d 499, 502 (9th Cir. 1983)).

18 Plaintiff here challenges the ALJ's consideration of medical opinions proffered by an 19 examining psychologist and a treating physician. Because the record contained contradictory 20 opinions from non-examining State agency doctors, the ALJ was required to provide specific and 21 legitimate reasons for rejecting the opinions of the examining and treating doctors. Widmark v.
22 Barnhart, 454 F.3d 1063, 1066-67 (9th Cir. 2006).

23 ///

1 A. Dr. David Widlan

2 Dr. David Widlan first conducted a psychological examination of plaintiff in March 2012.
3 (AR 236-44.) He had no records to review, diagnosed alcohol abuse, rule-out major depressive
4 disorder, moderate, and bereavement, and assessed a global assessment of functioning score (GAF)
5 of 50. (AR 236-37.) See Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders 34 (4th ed. 2000) 6 (DSM-IV-TR) (GAF of 41 to 50 describes “serious symptoms” or “any serious impairment in 7 social, occupational, or school functioning”). Dr. Widlan found plaintiff markedly impaired in the 8 ability to perform routine tasks without undue supervision (“He would likely require additional 9 supervision to consistently perform routine tasks. He has not worked in the past eleven years”), 10 being aware of normal hazards and taking appropriate precautions (“He would likely struggle with 11 normal stressors associated with employment. He currently drinks alcohol on a regular basis.”), 12 and maintaining appropriate behavior in a work setting (“He would be prone to issues with 13 persistence and pace”). (AR 238.) Dr. Widlan further opined plaintiff “would likely struggle to 14 complete tasks that are not highly routine” and that “[m]ental health issues would significantly 15 impede employment.” (AR 239.) However, plaintiff’s symptoms appeared treatable, treatment 16 would likely restore or substantially improve the ability to work, and he was not receiving mental 17 health services at that time. (Id.) Dr. Widlan did not estimate a maximum length of impairment
18 and wrote “ADATSA” as the minimum duration. (Id.)

19 Dr. Widlan again examined plaintiff in January 2015. (AR 371-82.) He had no records 20 to review, diagnosed major depressive disorder, recurrent, moderate-to-severe, generalized anxiety 21 disorder, rule-out PTSD, and alcohol dependence in early full remission, and assessed a GAF of 22 46. (AR 371-73); DSM-IV-TR at 34 (serious symptoms or impairment). Dr. Widlan found 23 marked limitations in communicating and performing effectively in a work setting and completing

1 a normal work day and week without interruptions from symptoms, and estimated a six month
2 duration of impairment. (AR 373.) He indicated vocational training or services would not 3 minimize or eliminate barriers to employment, and recommended a physical assessment.

4 In addressing the January 2015 evaluation, the ALJ noted Dr. Widlan's observation of 5 marginal clothing, grooming, and hygiene, but normal psychomotor behavior and speech, 6 cooperative behavior despite a restricted mood/affect, and functioning within normal limits in all 7 mental status examination (MSE) categories, including thought process/content, orientation, 8 perception, memory, fund of knowledge, concentration, abstract thinking, and insight/judgment.
9 (AR 23.) He gave little weight to the GAF of 46 because it conflicted with Dr. Widlan's normal 10 MSE findings and observations on examination. (AR 27.) While finding marked impairment in 11 two functional areas, Dr. Widlan identified a duration of impairment lasting only six months, under 12 the twelve consecutive months required to establish disability. Dr. Widlan appeared to have relied 13 more on what plaintiff said, than on what the examination showed (id. (pointing to the first page 14 of report and absence of records to review)), and plaintiff's reporting was not well-supported by 15 the evidence.

16 The ALJ found Dr. Widlan's March 2012 evaluation to predate the time frame for 17 consideration. (AR 27.) That is, the ALJ considered evidence dated on or after July 7, 2013, one 18 year prior to the protective filing date, and Dr. Widlan's 2012 evaluation predated that time period 19 by some fifteen months.

20 Plaintiff first argues the ALJ erred in favoring the contrary opinions of non-examining 21 State agency psychologists Drs. James Bailey and Dan Donohue. Dr. Bailey, in February 2015, 22 assessed plaintiff as able to complete a regular workday/week performing routine tasks in a 23 competitive work environment with occasional difficulty due to depressive symptoms, and able to 1 interact with the general public only occasionally due to anxiety symptoms. (AR 84-85.) Dr.

2 Donahue, in June 2015, assessed plaintiff as capable of carrying out short and simple instructions, 3 performing routine tasks with occasional difficulty due to mental health symptoms, and limited to 4 superficial contact with the public. (AR 98-99.) The ALJ found these limitations reasonable and 5 included them in the RFC. Plaintiff avers these non-examining psychologists' opinions could not 6 be considered substantial evidence because they lacked an independent examination or 7 independent clinical findings.

8 Non-examining State agency medical and psychological consultants are highly qualified 9 and experts in the evaluation of Social Security disability claims and, while not binding, their 10 opinions must be considered. 20 C.F.R. § 416.913(b)(1); accord Social Security Ruling (SSR) 17-11 2p (same; effective March 27, 2017 and replacing SSR 96-6p). While the opinion of a non-12 examining doctor cannot by itself constitute substantial evidence justifying the rejection of an 13 examining or treating doctor's opinion, Lester, 81 F.3d at 831, their findings can amount to 14 substantial evidence so long as supported by other evidence in the record, Saelee v. Chater, 94 15 F.3d 520, 522 (9th Cir. 1996). See also Thomas, 278 F.3d at 957 ("The opinions of non-treating 16 or non-examining physicians may also serve as substantial evidence when the opinions are 17 consistent with independent clinical findings or other evidence in the record."); Lester, 81 F.3d at 18 831 (ALJ may reject opinion of examining physician in favor of non-examining physician with 19 specific, legitimate reasons supported by substantial record evidence).

20 Dr. Bailey considered Dr. Widlan's January 2015 findings, Community Psychiatric Clinic
21 (CPC) treatment records and MSE's finding plaintiff cooperative, with intact thought processes, 22 and fully oriented, and plaintiff's report of his ability to care for his hygiene and for his dog, 23 prepare simple meals, do light household chores, walk, shop, use public transport, and watch TV.

1 (AR 80.) Dr. Donahue considered both the CPC records and records from Neighborcare Health, 2 including a February 2015 diagnosis of adjustment disorder, depressive, stable, no medication 3 changes, normal memory, and full orientation. (AR 93-94.) The ALJ’s decision reflects his 4 consideration of a January 2014 MSE in which plaintiff was fully oriented, with some suicidal 5 ideation and poor personal hygiene, but had normal behavior, psychomotor behavior, and speech, 6 euthymic mood, appropriate affect, intact/average memory and intellect, cooperative behavior, no 7 difficulty maintaining concentration, and logical thought processes; a March 2014 MSE in which 8 plaintiff was neither anxious nor agitated and was joking and in a good mood; and a December 9 2014 MSE in which he was fully oriented without any psychiatric concerns noted. (AR 23 (citing 10 AR 294, 256, 332).) Subsequent to Dr. Widlan’s January 2015 evaluation, and “[t]hrough the 11 combination of treatment and medication, the claimant was, by April 2016, ‘friendly and 12 cooperative,’ smiled easily, able to make jokes and had a ‘good sense of humor.’” (AR 23-24 13 (quoting AR 481).) The ALJ noted similar findings throughout the record. (AR 24 (citing AR 14 247, 252, 342, 349, 388, 415, 421, 427, 451, 495, 502, 506, 510, 514, 518, 522, 528, 532).) The 15 ALJ therefore properly accorded the opinions of Drs. Bailey and Donohue significant weight given 16 the support of independent evidence in the record.³

17 The ALJ also provided sufficient specific and legitimate reasons for assigning little weight 18 to the opinion of Dr. Widlan. An ALJ may reject a doctor’s opinion where it is inconsistent with 19 the doctor’s own findings and observations, Bayliss v. Barnhart, 427 F.3d 1211, 1216 (9th Cir.
20 2005), and Morgan v. Commissioner of the SSA, 169 F.3d 595, 603 (9th Cir. 1999); where it is 21 based to a large extent on a claimant’s properly discounted self-reporting, Tommasetti v. Astrue,

23 ³ In his reply, plaintiff argues defendant impermissibly relied on post hoc reasoning in making this argument. Defendant, however, properly included the argument in response to plaintiff’s contention the ALJ erred in favoring the opinions of non-examining doctors over the opinion of Dr. Widlan.

1 533 F.3d 1035, 1041 (9th Cir. 2008); and where it is inconsistent with and lacks the support of the 2 evidence as a whole, id., and Batson v. Commissioner, 359 F.3d 1190, 1195 (9th Cir. 2004).
3 Temporary limitations are insufficient to meet the durational requirement dfor a finding of 4 disability, and this factor may be considered in the decision to reject a medical opinion. See
5 Carmickle v. Comm’r Soc. Sec. Admin., 533 F.3d 1155, 1165 (9th Cir. 2008) (affirming ALJ’s 6 finding that treating physicians’ short term excuse from work was not indicative of “claimant’s 7 long term functioning.”); Quang Van Han v. Bowen, 882 F.2d 1453, 1458 (9th Cir. 1989) 8 (considering the fact a physician had opined claimant was unemployable for “four months, too 9 short a period to make him eligible for SSI benefits.”)

10 Dr. Widlan did not review any medical records, based the GAF score on “symptom 11 description; subjective impressions”, found plaintiff within normal limits on every aspect of the 12 MSE, and observed normal psychomotor behavior and speech and cooperative attitude and 13 behavior. (AR 371-75.) The ALJ reasonably construed the findings and observations of Dr.
14 Widlan as inconsistent with the GAF and two marked limitations assessed, and the report as 15 reflecting substantial reliance on plaintiff’s subjective reports. While Dr. Widlan presumably also 16 considered plaintiff’s “marked” performance on the Beck’s Depression Inventory (BDI) and 17 Beck’s Anxiety Inventory (BAI) (AR 374), those questionnaires also reflected plaintiff’s 18 subjective reports. Broyles v. Berryhill, 17-cv-00279-TLF, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 205182 at *17
19 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 13, 2017); Miller v. Colvin, 13-cv-05698 JRC, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 81765
20 at *7 (W.D. Wash. Jun. 16, 2014); Hawkins v. Astrue, No. 3:11-CV-05701-KLS, 2012 U.S. Dist.
21 LEXIS 56072 at *12 (W.D. Wash. April 19, 2012).

22 Moreover, and as the ALJ observed (AR 27), a GAF score is merely “a rough estimate of 23 an individual’s psychological, social, and occupational functioning used to reflect the individual’s

1 need for treatment.” Vargas v. Lambert, 159 F.3d 1161, 1164 n.2 (9th Cir.1998). It is based on 2 either an individual’s symptoms or her functional impairments, whichever is lower, DSM-IV-TR
3 at 32-33, and “does not have any direct correlative work-related or functional limitations.” Hughes
4 v. Colvin, 599 Fed. Appx. 765, 766 (9th Cir. Apr. 15, 2015) (no error in failure to address GAF
5 score). See also DSM-V at 16-17 (5th ed. 2013) (the most recent version of the DSM does not 6 include a GAF rating for assessment of mental disorders), and Administrative Message 13066 (a 7 GAF score cannot alone be used to “raise” or “lower” someone’s level of function, and, unless the 8 reasons behind the rating and the applicable time period are clearly explained, it does not provide 9 a reliable longitudinal picture of functioning).

10 The ALJ also, and as outlined above, had substantial evidence support for his conclusion 11 plaintiff’s subjective reporting, and Dr. Widlan’s reliance on that reporting, was not well-supported 12 by the record. Finally, Dr. Widlan assessed plaintiff’s limitations to last a maximum of six months.
13 Plaintiff argues he continued to present with serious mental impairments despite treatment
14 received and that, at the least, the limitations assessed presented themselves from Dr. Widlan’s 15 2012 assessment through his assessment in 2015. The Court, however, finds no error in the ALJ’s 16 consideration of the fact Dr. Widlan assessed the two marked and the remaining mild and moderate 17 limitations to last for a maximum of six months.

18 The ALJ, in sum, provided the necessary specific and legitimate reasons for assigning little 19 weight to Dr. Widlan’s 2015 opinion. In addition, plaintiff does not challenge, not does the Court 20 find error in the ALJ’s determination the 2012 evaluation by Dr. Widlan predated the time period 21 at issue.

22 ///

23 ///

1 B. Dr. Joshua Kachner

2 In September 2016, treating physician Dr. Joshua Kachner⁴ completed a medical source
3 statement addressing plaintiff's ability to perform physical work-related activities. (AR 542-48.)
4 Dr. Kachner opined plaintiff could not lift or carry up to ten pounds, stating: "Unable to lift 10 5 pounds 1/3 of the time due to right ulnar neuropathy. . . . History of pain in right elbow with 6 persistent use of right hand. History of pain in lower back, suspected to be due to T 11 fracture 7 reported by patient but not verified." (AR 542.) Plaintiff could, in an eight-hour day, sit for three 8 hours at a time and six hours total, stand for one hour at a time and five hours total, and walk for 9 forty-five minutes and three hours total. (AR 543.)

10 Dr. Kachner answered "yes" in response to a question asking whether plaintiff required use 11 of a cane, noting "4 wheeled walker," but subsequently opined plaintiff could ambulate without 12 the use of a cane for one mile, that a cane was not medically necessary, and that he could carry 13 small objects when without a cane. (Id.) He based this assessment on: "History of pain with 14 prolonged sitting, standing, or walking." (Id.) Plaintiff could never push/pull with either extremity 15 due to "[h]istory of pain (back, abdominal wall, right 4th and 5th fingers)", but could perform all 16 other manipulative activities and operate foot controls. (AR 544.) He could occasionally climb 17 ramps and stairs, stoop, kneel, and crouch, but never climb ladders or scaffolds or crawl due to 18 pain in his back and dizziness from medications. (AR 545.) He could never operate a motor 19 vehicle due to impaired vision, could not work at unprotected heights, be exposed to humidity and 20 wetness, dust, odors, fumes, pulmonary irritants, extreme heat, or vibrations, could occasionally 21 tolerate extreme cold due to "[s]ubjective pain in arm with cold exposure", and could continuously 22 tolerate moving mechanical parts and noise. (AR 546.) He could perform all activities of daily

23

⁴ The ALJ appears to have misspelled this physician's name. (See Court Transcript Index at 3 and AR 38.)

1 living identified on the form, including the ability to ambulate without using a wheelchair, walker, 2 or two canes or crutches. (AR 547.) Dr. Kachner identified duration of impairment as twelve 3 months.

4 The ALJ assigned little weight to Dr. Kachner’s opinion plaintiff “is physically disabled 5 primarily because this opinion invades the province of the Commissioner.” (AR 26.) The opinion 6 also conflicted with the evidence covering the entire period at issue. (Id. (citing AR 245, 270, 285, 7 303, 332, 427, 506, 542-47).) Its persuasiveness was further reduced by Dr. Kachner’s apparent 8 reliance on plaintiff’s subjective reports, including, for example, his assignment of a limitation 9 based on “[s]ubjective pain with cold exposure.” (Id. (quoting AR 546).)

10 The ALJ observed that, in contrast to Dr. Kachner’s observation plaintiff required use of a 11 four-wheeled walker, plaintiff mentioned “having some difficulty standing or walking because of 12 selling the ‘Real Change’ newspaper on a street corner in downtown Seattle 7 days a week.” (Id.
13 (quoting AR 520).) Dr. Kachner also contradicted his opinion regarding a walker in opining 14 plaintiff could walk a mile without the use of an assistive device. The ALJ gave Dr. Kachner’s 15 opinion of limitations in plaintiff’s ability to stand and walk some weight, and, due to the 16 inconsistencies in the opinion, found a more restrictive RFC in terms of standing and walking 17 warranted. Specifically, while Dr. Kachner opined plaintiff could stand/walk a total of five and 18 three hours respectively, the ALJ limited standing and walking to two hours total.

19 The ALJ found Dr. Kachner’s opinion plaintiff could not lift or carry any amount of weight 20 contradicted by the evidence and assigned it little weight. “As one example: the claimant sought 21 medical treatment in September 2014 after falling, “when helping to load furniture with a friend.”
22 (Id. (quoting AR 337).) The ALJ also pointed to his earlier finding plaintiff could shop for 23 groceries, clean up after his service dog, and perform other activities.

1 Plaintiff first avers error in the ALJ's assignment of greater weight to the opinion of a non-2 examining doctor over that of a treating doctor. That is, while assigning little weight to the opinion
3 of Dr. Kachner, the ALJ assigned partial weight to the opinion of non-examining State agency
4 physician Dr. Wayne Hurley, who, in June 2015, opined plaintiff could perform a reduced range
5 of medium level work. (AR 26, 96-98 (occasionally lift/carry 50 pounds, frequently lift/carry 25 6 pounds, stand and/or walk and sit about 6 out of 8 hours a day, unlimited push/pull, occasionally 7 climb ramps/stairs, avoid concentrated exposure to extreme cold and heat, and no other 8 environmental, manipulative, postural, or other limitations).) The ALJ found Dr. Hurley's opinion 9 did not adequately address limitations stemming from plaintiff's diabetes and, although plaintiff
10 was non-compliant with treatment, found the evidence to support a more restrictive RFC to a range 11 of light work. (AR 26.) The ALJ did adopt the prohibition on climbing ladders or scaffolds, but 12 found plaintiff could only occasionally climb ramps and stairs, as well as balance, stoop, bend, 13 squat, kneel, and crouch, "again because of poorly controlled diabetes." (Id.) He concluded 14 plaintiff could not crawl and prohibited any exposure to extreme cold, heat, and hazards, 15 explaining Dr. Hurley's opinion did not adequately consider plaintiff's physical impairments, 16 medication side-effects, and/or the subjective allegations.

17 Given the other substantial evidence in the record, the ALJ did not err in assigning partial 18 weight to Dr. Hurley's opinion. (See AR 22-23 (describing records showing, inter alia, no edema, 19 diabetic foot ulcerations or calf tenderness in July 2013; normal bilateral lower extremity strength
20 in January 2014; better control of diabetes with treatment compliance in February 2014 and no 21 foot ulcerations, edema, or calf tenderness that same month; April 2014 reminder that may be able 22 to decrease diabetes effects with treatment compliance and no difficulty grasping objects despite 23 complaint of some numbness in left hand palm; November 2014 examination showing generally

1 adequate health, with normal filament testing of both feet, grossly intact plantar reflex, and normal 2 motor and sensory functioning; April 2015 observation plaintiff looked well, but had some 3 diminished sensation and/or range of motion on neurological exam; July 2015 normal physical 4 exam, with no skin changes of feet/diabetic ulcers; further finding no medically determinable 5 impairment that would cause alleged back pain and noting plaintiff's report of using a walker for 6 diabetes-related dizziness, not back pain).⁵ The ALJ also assigned some weight to a March 2015
7 letter from treating physician Dr. Dennis Haack limiting plaintiff to lifting no more than ten pounds 8 during a move from/to a homeless camp. (AR 27, 397.) The ALJ noted the temporary nature of 9 this assessment, but limited plaintiff to sedentary work and lifting no more than pounds based on 10 other evidence, essentially agreeing with Dr. Haack.

11 Plaintiff next asserts the ALJ could not simply disregard Dr. Kachner's opinion as based 12 on an issue reserved to the Commissioner, and notes the absence of any indication the ALJ tried 13 to contact this treating source for clarification. See SSR 96-5p ("For treating sources, the rules 14 also require that we make every reasonable effort to recontact such sources for clarification when 15 they provide opinions on issues reserved to the Commissioner and the bases for such opinions are 16 not clear to us.") (rescinded effective March 27, 2017); Webb v. Barnhart, 433 F.3d 683, 687 (9th 17 Cir. 2005) ("[T]he ALJ has a special duty to fully and fairly develop the record and to assure that 18 the claimant's interests are considered.") (quoted source omitted). Plaintiff notes Dr. Kachner 19 did not offer a conclusory statement as to disability and, rather, identified specific functional 20 limitations.

21 Plaintiff correctly observes Dr. Kachner did not offer a conclusory opinion of disability,

22
23 ⁵ Plaintiff again maintains the Commissioner relied on improper post hoc rationalizations in addressing the opinion of the non-examining doctor. However, as with Dr. Widlan, the Commissioner properly discussed the opinion of Dr. Hurley in countering plaintiff's contention the ALJ improperly favored a non-examining doctor's opinion.

1 thereby intruding into a determination reserved to the Commissioner. See 20 C.F.R. § 2 416.927(d)(1) (“A statement by a medical source that you are ‘disabled’ or ‘unable to work’ does 3 not mean that we will determine that you are disabled.”) The Commissioner states the ALJ 4 presumably included this reason because Dr. Kachner submitted an opinion without any supporting 5 treatment notes. She argues that, while not alone sufficient to discount Dr. Kachner’s opinion, this 6 factor supports the ALJ’s overall conclusion. She also notes that plaintiff did not submit any 7 examination or treatment notes from Dr. Kachner to either the ALJ or to the Appeals Council. (See 8 AR 36 (no objection at hearing to the record “as it currently stands”), AR 126, 222 (pre-hearing 9 letters regarding the submission of evidence), and AR 7 (Appeals Council letter)). She avers 10 plaintiff’s assertion of a failure to further develop the record is based on the mere presumption Dr.
11 Kachner’s records would support his opinion and “improperly shift[s the claimant’s] own burden 12 to the ALJ.” Mayes v. Massanari, 276 F.3d 453, 459 (9th Cir. 2001).

13 An ALJ has a “special duty to fully and fairly develop the record and to assure that the 14 claimant’s interests are considered.” Brown v. Heckler, 713 F.2d 441, 443 (9th Cir. 1983) (duty 15 “exists even when the claimant is represented by counsel.”) That duty includes development of 16 relevant medical evidence. 20 C.F.R. § 416.912(b). An ALJ must “make every reasonable effort” 17 to help a claimant get medical evidence, a process which entails making an initial request and, if 18 not received, “one follow-up request to obtain the medical evidence necessary to make a 19 determination.” § 416.1512(b)(1)(i). “An ALJ’s duty to develop the record further is triggered 20 only when there is ambiguous evidence or when the record is inadequate to allow for proper 21 evaluation of the evidence.” Mayes, 276 F.3d at 459-60 (plaintiff’s argument rested on evidence
22 of a diagnosis dated months after the ALJ’s decision, and ALJ had no duty to develop the record 23 where record was neither ambiguous, nor inadequate).

1 The claimant, however, bears the ultimate burden to prove disability. § 416.912(a); Meanel
2 v. Apfel, 172 F.3d 1111, 1113 (9th Cir. 1999). The claimant must provide information about or 3 submit all known evidence relating to the allegation of disability. § 416.912(a). This duty is 4 ongoing and applies at each level of administrative review, including the Appeals Council. Id. A 5 claimant’s attorney also has an affirmative duty to obtain information and evidence that must be 6 submitted. § 416.1540(b).

7 It is not clear why Dr. Kachner provided only a medical source statement and no treatment
8 records. There is no indication the ALJ failed in his duty to assist in the development of the record, 9 and plaintiff does not provide an explanation for the absence of treatment records. Plaintiff also 10 failed to raise any objection as to the sufficiency of the record either before the ALJ or in seeking 11 review by the Appeals Council. Plaintiff, accordingly, waived this argument. See, e.g., Michelle
12 Alicia S. v. Berryhill, No. 17-2114, 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24487 *17-19 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 14, 2019) 13 (rejecting contention ALJ failed to adequately develop the record by not obtaining missing medical 14 records; plaintiff had the burden to produce evidence to support her claim, did not raise the issue 15 at hearing, and waived the argument given her attorney’s affirmative representation at hearing that 16 the record was complete) (citing, inter alia, Meanel, 172 F.3d at 1115 (reviewing court need not 17 address issues not raised before ALJ or Appeals Council unless manifest injustice would result); 18 Shaibi v. Berryhill, 883 F.3d 1102, 1109 (9th Cir. 2017) (as amended Feb. 28, 2018) (upholding 19 and applying Meanel after Sims v. Apfel, 530 U.S. 103 (2000)); Jones v. Berryhill, 17-00215, 2018 20 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 135625 at *10-12 (D. Idaho Aug. 9, 2018) (claimant waived argument as to 21 absent records where counsel did not raise any issue with the medical record at hearing or ask that 22 the record remain open for submission of additional evidence). There is, moreover, no indication 23 the ALJ found the report from Dr. Kachner ambiguous or the record inadequate to allow for a

1 proper evaluation of his opinion. The ALJ did not mention the absence of treatment records or 2 reject the opinion of Dr. Kachner as unsupported by his own findings or observations.

3 The ALJ also did not explain why he found the opinion of Dr. Kachner to invade the 4 province of the Commissioner. Because there does not appear to be any support for that 5 conclusion, the Court agrees the ALJ erred in finding Dr. Kachner offered an opinion on an issue
6 reserved to the Commissioner. However, given the other specific and legitimate reasons provided 7 in relation to this opinion evidence, the Court finds the error harmless. See Molina v. Astrue, 674 8 F.3d 1104, 1115 (9th Cir. 2012) (ALJ’s error may be deemed harmless where it is 9 “‘inconsequential to the ultimate nondisability determination.’”; the court looks to “the record as 10 a whole to determine whether the error alters the outcome of the case.”); Carmickle, 533 F.3d at 11 1162-63 (where ALJ provides specific reasons supporting an assessment and substantial evidence 12 supports the conclusion, an error in the assessment may be deemed harmless; the relevant inquiry 13 “is not whether the ALJ would have made a different decision absent any error, . . . [but] whether 14 the ALJ’s decision remains legally valid, despite such error.”) Cf. McLeod v. Astrue, 640 F.3d 881, 15 885 (9th Cir. 2010) (“The law reserves the disability determination to the Commissioner. Rejection 16 of the treating physician’s opinion on ability to perform any remunerative work does not by itself 17 trigger a duty to contact the physician for more explanation.”); Bayliss, 427 F.3d at 1217 (finding 18 no duty to recontact where doctor’s opinion was not supported by clinical evidence and was based 19 on claimant’s subjective complaints and the ALJ found the record adequate to make a 20 determination as to disability).

21 The ALJ did not wholly reject the opinion of Dr. Kachner. The ALJ found plaintiff more 22 limited than Dr. Kachner opined in relation to standing and walking, accepted the opinion on 23 maximum sitting and on every postural activity except balancing, and either accepted or found

1 plaintiff more limited in relation to environmental factors. (See AR 21, 543-46.) Plaintiff does 2 not assert or otherwise demonstrate any error in these findings. See Turner v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec.,
3 613 F.3d 1217, 1223 (9th Cir. 2010) (ALJ need not provide reason for rejecting physician’s
4 opinions where ALJ incorporated opinions into RFC); Johnson v. Shalala, 60 F.3d 1428, 1436 n.9 5 (9th Cir. 1995) (“overinclusion of debilitating factors is harmless”).

6 The ALJ provided specific and legitimate reasons for rejecting Dr. Kachner’s opinion 7 plaintiff could not lift and/or carry any amount of weight, required a cane or four-wheeled walker 8 to ambulate, could not push or pull, and could never balance, and instead finding plaintiff could 9 lift and carry ten pounds occasionally and less than ten pounds frequently and could occasionally 10 balance. That is, the ALJ properly discounted Dr. Kachner’s opinion upon finding it inconsistent 11 with the medical record as a whole, Tommasetti, 533 F.3d at 1041; reflecting significant reliance 12 on plaintiff’s subjective reporting, id.; inconsistent with evidence of the level of plaintiff’s activity, 13 Rollins v. Massanari, 261 F.3d 853, 856 (9th Cir. 2001); and internally inconsistent, Morgan, 169 14 F.3d at 603.

15 Plaintiff asserts cherry picking based on the one example of reliance on subjective reporting 16 provided by the ALJ. However, other examples are apparent, including the ALJ’s repeated 17 reliance on plaintiff’s allegation of back pain, which Dr. Kachner conceded had been reported, but 18 not verified, and on other “[h]istory of pain.” (AR 542-44.)

19 Plaintiff also asserts the ALJ erred in failing to inquire into what physical activities he 20 actually performed in assisting a friend with a move, and notes his testimony he only grocery 21 shopped with assistance from a living skills manager, who drove him back and forth to the grocery 22 store and assisted him in picking out food and carrying the food into his house. (AR 59-60.) He 23 stresses the difference between his meager basic activities of daily living and the activities

1 involved in performing a full-time job.

2 The ALJ is responsible for assessing the evidence and for resolving any conflicts or 3 ambiguities in the record. See Treichler v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec. Admin., 775 F.3d 1090, 1098 (9th 4 Cir. 2014); Carmickle, 533 F.3d at 1164. When evidence reasonably supports either confirming 5 or reversing the ALJ’s decision, the court may not substitute its judgment for that of the ALJ.
6 Tackett v. Apfel, 180 F.3d 1094, 1098 (9th Cir. 1999). “Where the evidence is susceptible to more 7 than one rational interpretation, it is the ALJ’s conclusion that must be upheld.” Morgan, 169 F.3d 8 at 599. Plaintiff here construes the evidence in the record differently than the ALJ. Because the 9 ALJ offered a rational interpretation of the evidence, and because his conclusions have the support 10 of substantial evidence, plaintiff’s assignment of error fails. (See, e.g., AR 185-90 (July 2014:
11 plaintiff reported he feeds, plays with, and takes his service dog on short walks, walks and uses 12 public transportation, shops in stores once or twice a week for short time periods, regularly goes 13 to medical appointments and the grocery store and does not require anyone to accompany him, 14 and did not indicate use of a walker, cane, or similar assistive device); AR 249 (March 2014:
15 plaintiff cleans up after his dog); AR 337 (September 2014: “Fell when helping to load furniture 16 with friend.”); AR 520 (August 2015: “He [recently] started a 7 [day] a week job selling the 17 newspaper ‘Real Change’ from the street corner at 3rd and Pine. Has his dog with him. Wants to 18 consider a motorized scooter as the dog [cannot] pull that like he can the walker, the dog now 19 weighs over 40 lbs.”); AR 470 (November 2015: “noted that he works Wed-Sun from 3p-7p”); 20 AR 482 (April 2016: reporting he play with his dog and plays games on his computer).) Plaintiff 21 does not, therefore, demonstrate harmful error in the consideration of this or any other medical 22 opinion evidence.

1 Symptom Testimony

2 Absent evidence of malingering, an ALJ must provide specific, clear, and convincing 3 reasons to reject a claimant’s testimony. Burrell v. Colvin, 775 F.3d 1133, 1136-37 (9th Cir. 2014).
4 “General findings are insufficient; rather, the ALJ must identify what testimony is not credible and 5 what evidence undermines the claimant’s complaints.” Lester, 81 F.3d at 834. In considering the 6 intensity, persistence, and limiting effects of a claimant’s symptoms, the ALJ “examine[s] the 7 entire case record, including the objective medical evidence; an individual’s statements about the 8 intensity, persistence, and limiting effects of symptoms; statements and other information provided 9 by medical sources and other persons; and any other relevant evidence in the individual’s case
10 record.” SSR 16-3p.⁶

11 As described by the ALJ, plaintiff testified he is physically disabled due to severe back 12 pain and diabetes with accompanying peripheral neuropathy, the most he can do on days when his 13 back acts up is recline for up to eight hours, he is also disabled due to dizziness and an inability to 14 walk more than a block and a half even using a walker, and is unable to concentrate sufficiently.
15 (AR 22, 50-56.) Plaintiff reiterated these symptoms in a function report, and noted severely 16 diminished sensation in both feet and frequent anxiety around others. (AR 22, 184.)

17 The ALJ concluded plaintiff’s statements concerning the intensity, persistence, and 18 limiting effects of his symptoms were not entirely consistent with the medical and other evidence 19 in the record. (AR 22.) Contrary to plaintiff’s contention, the ALJ provided several specific, clear, 20 and convincing reasons in support of that conclusion.

23 ⁶ Effective March 28, 2016, the Social Security Administration eliminated the term “credibility” from its policy and clarified the evaluation of a claimant’s subjective symptoms is not an examination of character. SSR 16-3p. The Court continues to cite to relevant case law utilizing the term credibility.

1 A. Medical Evidence

2 “While subjective pain testimony cannot be rejected on the sole ground that it is not fully 3 corroborated by objective medical evidence, the medical evidence is still a relevant factor in 4 determining the severity of the claimant’s pain and its disabling effects.” Rollins, 261 F.3d at 857;
5 SSR 96-7p and 16-3p. An ALJ therefore properly considers whether the medical evidence 6 supports or is consistent with a claimant’s allegations. Id.; 20 C.F.R. § 416.1529(c)(4) (symptoms 7 are determined to diminish capacity for basic work activities only to the extent the alleged 8 functional limitations and restrictions “can reasonably be accepted as consistent with the objective 9 medical evidence and other evidence.”) An ALJ may reject subjective testimony upon finding it 10 contradicted by or inconsistent with the medical record. Carmickle, 533 F.3d at 1161; Tonapetyan 11 v. Halter, 242 F.3d 1144, 1148 (9th Cir. 2001).

12 The ALJ found inconsistency between plaintiff’s allegations as to the degree of his 13 impairment and the medical evidence, and found the evidence to instead support the assessed RFC.
14 (AR 22.) He contrasted plaintiff’s allegation of disability based on diabetes and peripheral 15 neuropathy with evidence suggesting a lesser degree of impairment. (AR 22-23 (describing records 16 showing, inter alia, no edema, skin changes, or diabetic foot ulcerations, no calf tenderness, 17 normal bilateral lower extremity strength, showing or suggesting better diabetes control with 18 treatment compliance, no difficulty grasping objects, normal or generally adequate examinations, 19 normal filament testing bilaterally, grossly intact plantar reflex, and normal motor and sensory 20 functioning).) The ALJ also found no medically determinable impairment that would cause the 21 alleged back pain, and noted plaintiff’s use of a walker for diabetes-related dizziness, not back 22 pain. (AR 23.) The ALJ likewise found the evidence associated with plaintiff’s mental 23 impairments to support the RFC allowing for his performance of unskilled tasks, with limited

1 social contact/interaction, and mental functioning better than plaintiff alleged. (AR 23-24 2 (describing normal or average MSE findings and other observations in January, March, and 3 December 2014 and in Dr. Widlan’s January 2015 evaluation, and similar findings throughout the 4 record).)

5 The ALJ did not, as plaintiff avers and as in Brown-Hunter v. Colvin, 806 F.3d 487, 494
6 (9th Cir. 2015), limit his assessment to simply stating he did not accept plaintiff’s symptom 7 testimony, followed by a summary of the medical evidence supporting the RFC determination.
8 The ALJ identified and described inconsistency with and a lack of support in the medical record
9 as one of several reasons for discounting plaintiff’s testimony. (See AR 22-25.) Nor was the ALJ
10 required to isolate and separately assess each and every statement made by plaintiff. See generally 11 Treichler, 775 F.3d at 1102-03 (finding one-sentence, boilerplate finding insufficient, and 12 emphasizing that, while symptom “analysis need not be extensive, the ALJ must provide some 13 reasoning in order for us to meaningfully determine whether the ALJ’s conclusions were supported 14 by substantial evidence.”). The ALJ properly provided sufficiently specific reasoning allowing for 15 the conclusion he rejected plaintiff’s testimony on permissible grounds and did not arbitrarily 16 discredit plaintiff’s allegations. Brown-Hunter, 806 F.3d at 493-94.

17 B. Treatment

18 An ALJ also properly considers evidence associated with a claimant’s treatment. 20 C.F.R.
19 § 416.929(c)(3); SSR 96-7p and 16-3p. That consideration may include unexplained or 20 inadequately explained failure to follow through with prescribed treatment. Tommasetti, 533 F.3d 21 at 1039. The ALJ must consider possible reasons for a failure to comply with treatment. See SSR 22 16-3p (“We will not find an individual’s symptoms inconsistent with the evidence in the record on 23 this basis without considering possible reasons he or she may not comply with treatment or seek

1 treatment consistent with the degree of his or her complaints.”)

2 The ALJ considered that, while alleging disabling anxiety, plaintiff reported drinking more 3 than six cups of caffeinated beverages, including coffee and soda, daily. (AR 24, 255.) (See also 4 AR 475 (July 2015: “[I]n ER over weekend, had glucose 509, dehydrated, drinking too much 5 caffeine.”)) A July 2016 record noted plaintiff’s non-compliance with treatment ““extends to 6 insulin regimen, takes 3-4 weekly, no longer checking his [blood sugar levels (BSL)] daily.” (AR
7 24, 456.) In June 2015, plaintiff had a random BSL of 312, after having eaten an ice cream bar 8 and drinking a sixteen-ounce regular Coca-Cola, and reported his refusal to drink diet beverages.
9 (AR 24, 511.) In July 2015, Dr. Haack described plaintiff’s non-compliance with his insulin 10 regimen as chronic, and “the claimant never offers an explanation for this.” (AR 24, 515.) Poverty 11 or the inability to afford insulin or other diabetes treatment material provided a possible 12 explanation, but was not offered by plaintiff. The ALJ found the persuasiveness of plaintiff’s 13 allegations reduced by the failure to follow prescribed treatment.

14 Plaintiff avers error in the ALJ’s failure to consider evidence explaining his failure to 15 comply with treatment. The ALJ did not address plaintiff’s testimony he lost his glucometer in a 16 house move and still did not have one at the time of the October 2016 hearing, as well as that, in 17 2014, his insulin expired due to his lack of a home and inability to store it at the proper temperature.
18 (AR 51-53.) Plaintiff also points to an October 2013 treatment note in which he reported he had 19 been off insulin for a month due to his lack of any income (AR 272), as well as other notes in the 20 record relating to compliance (see, e.g., AR 263 (July 2014: no insulin since May 20, 2014 due to 21 power outage); AR 335 (September 2014: access to food erratic because homeless).)

22 The record contains both explanations for a lack of compliance and evidence supporting 23 the ALJ’s conclusion. For example, in June 2015, Dr. Haack stated plaintiff had poor motivation

1 to control his diabetes and poor compliance with his medication regimen, and “suspects the history 2 he gives me of his medication usage is not accurate[.]” (AR 511.) Plaintiff admitted he often 3 missed insulin doses and was not following the prescribed diet, including drinking regular soda 4 daily and eating treats such as ice cream on a regular basis. Plaintiff was concerned about the 5 possibility of having to break camp, put his things in storage, and live on the streets again, and 6 “one of the reasons he is missing lots of his insulin dosages [is] he gets too busy and does not find 7 the time for it.” (Id.) In July 2015, Dr. Haack both described plaintiff’s lack of compliance as 8 chronic, and noted his “difficult living situation – homeless and currently in tent city.” (AR 515.) 9 In August 2015, Dr. Haack described plaintiff’s diabetes as “poorly controlled due to social 10 situation and poor compliance[.]” again noting plaintiff’s residence in a tent city, and that plaintiff 11 had lost his glucometer. (AR 519.) In early October 2015, plaintiff was “not concerned” about 12 his continued non-compliance and would “do what he can[.]” (AR 524.) Dr. Haack described 13 plaintiff’s diabetes as poorly controlled due to his difficult living situation (homeless) and his lack 14 of compliance, and noted plaintiff had not been checking his BSLs despite getting a new 15 glucometer at his last visit. (AR 524.) Later that month, plaintiff’s diabetes remained “poorly 16 controlled, he [does] not check his [BSLs regularly], and often skips taking his insulin.” (AR 529.)

17 By December 2015, Dr. Haack noted plaintiff had had permanent housing and his own 18 mini-fridge to store insulin since the end of October, but, despite the removal of many barriers, his 19 diabetes was “still not in any better control” and he continued with poor treatment compliance.
20 (AR 533-34.) Plaintiff admitted and his glucometer showed he had not been checking his BSLs 21 as often as earlier stated. (AR 533.) In July 2016, plaintiff’s insulin non-compliance continued, 22 and he was no longer checking his BSL’s daily. (AR 456.) (See also AR 463-64 (February 2016: 23 “He reports recently meeting with his PCP and, since then, making an effort to check in BS and

1 administer insulin more regularly.”; “LSA informed client that some of his food choices are not 2 good for people with diabetes. Client said he knows and he is careful.”); AR 461 (April 2016:
3 insulin expired in power outage previous month).)

4 The ALJ should have more fully discussed the evidence associated with plaintiff’s failure
5 to comply with treatment. However, given the mixed nature of that evidence, and given the ALJ’s 6 unopposed reliance on evidence of plaintiff’s failure to comply with treatment recommendations 7 regarding his diet, the Court finds the ALJ’s deficient discussion of the evidence associated with 8 non-compliance harmless.

9 C. Work and Other Issues

10 The ALJ found additional inconsistencies in the record to further reduce the persuasiveness 11 of plaintiff’s allegations. In January 2014, plaintiff reported to a provider “that given his past work 12 as a bill collector, ‘he could likely do some office work.’” (AR 24, 295.) In that same record, 13 plaintiff noted he had stopped working in 2000 to serve as his wife’s primary caregiver, that his 14 wife passed away in 2011, and that he was “looking for work currently, but has been having a 15 difficult time getting hired [due to] the 10+ year gap on his resume.” (AR 295.) The ALJ found 16 plaintiff’s report to conflict with his hearing testimony of mental and/or physical disability. (AR 17 24.) This was further supported by the September 2014 record showing plaintiff had fallen ““when 18 helping to load furniture with a friend.” (AR 24, 337.) The ALJ reasoned: “Were the claimant 19 physically disabled and/or unable to stand or walk for long, it is unlikely that he would have 20 contemplated moving furniture, let alone done so.” (AR 24.)

21 The ALJ next noted plaintiff’s conviction for armed robbery while a juvenile and 22 incarceration for two-and-a-half years. (AR 24.) He stated: “Unless the claimant had his criminal 23 record formally sealed by a court order, this felony conviction history will appear on standard

1 employment background checks. Having criminal history presents the claimant with a substantial 2 non-disability related barrier to finding work, but not performing unskilled tasks involving limited
3 social contact/interaction.” (Id.)

4 The ALJ was further troubled by the absence of a sustained work history even before the 5 alleged onset date. Plaintiff had not worked or received any income since at least 2001. He earned 6 $58.50 in the year 2000 and, in the ten years prior to that, earned nothing in three years, less than 7 $2,000.00 in five years, and appeared to perform substantial gainful activity only in 1998 and 1999.
8 “This lack of attachment to the workforce, long before the alleged onset date, may include a period 9 of incarceration, but also appears to indicate a lack of attachment to the workforce for reasons 10 other than disability, and suggests that the claimant’s current absence from the workforce may be 11 for reasons other than disability or impairment.” (AR 24-25.)

12 Plaintiff argues the ALJ erred in relying on evidence of his remote criminal history as a 13 basis for rejecting his symptom testimony. He states he never used that history as an excuse for 14 his inability to work, the absence of any inconsistency between the history and his testimony, and 15 that “subjective symptom evaluation was never meant to be an examination of an individual’s 16 character.” SSR 16-3p. Plaintiff further contends that, while accurately noting his poor work 17 history, the remainder of the ALJ’s analysis is based solely on unsupported speculation. He points 18 to his testimony of his termination in 1998 because he was not successful (AR 42-43) and that, 19 after caring for his seriously ill wife until she passed away, he had no success in finding work and 20 eventually stopped looking due to his impairments (AR 43-46).

21 As the Commissioner suggests, the decision does not reflect reliance on plaintiff’s juvenile 22 conviction, in and of itself, as a basis for rejecting symptom testimony. However, there is also 23 nothing in the record to support the ALJ’s consideration of the conviction as serving as a non-

1 disability-related barrier to work. The Court therefore agrees with plaintiff this aspect of the ALJ's 2 decision does not serve as a specific, clear, and convincing reason for discounting his symptom
3 testimony. See, e.g., Harris v. Berryhill, C17-1506- BHS, 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 113739 at *16-4 17 (W.D. Wash. Jul. 9, 2018) (neither simple fact of a felony conviction, nor the possibility 5 criminal history may have posed a non-disability-related barrier to employment serve as clear and 6 convincing reason to reject symptom testimony). The Court does not, however, find this 7 consideration to undermine the substantial evidence support for the ALJ's decision.

8 An ALJ may consider a claimant's prior work record in assessing symptom testimony. 20 9 C.F.R. § 416.929(c)(3). An extremely poor or non-existent work history is reasonably considered 10 as undermining a claimant's testimony. See Thomas, 278 F.3d at 959 (ALJ properly considered 11 "extremely poor work history" and showing of "little propensity to work in [claimant's] 12 lifetime" as negatively affecting her credibility as to inability to work; noting claimant's "work 13 history was spotty, at best, with years of unemployment between jobs, even before she claimed 14 disability"); Albidrez v. Astrue, 504 F. Supp. 2d 814, 821-22 (C.D. Cal. 2007) ("An ALJ may 15 properly consider a claimant's poor or nonexistent work history in making a negative credibility 16 determination."). The ALJ here drew reasonable inferences in relation to plaintiff's extremely 17 limited work history. See Sample v. Schweiker, 694 F.2d 639, 642 (9th Cir. 1982) ("In reaching 18 his findings, the law judge is entitled to draw inferences logically flowing from the evidence.")

19 The ALJ also reasonably considered the inconsistency between plaintiff's allegation of 20 disability and the evidence he conceded his likely ability to perform work some office work, as 21 well as evidence of physical ability and activity inconsistent with his alleged degree of impairment.
22 See 20 C.F.R. § 416.929(c)(4) ("We will consider whether there are any inconsistencies in the 23 evidence and the extent to which there are any conflicts between your statements and the rest of

1 the evidence[.]”); SSR 16-30 (“We will consider an individual’s statements about the intensity, 2 persistence, and limiting effects of symptoms, and we will evaluate whether the statements are 3 consistent with objective medical evidence and the other evidence.”); Bray v. Comm’r of SSA, 554
4 F.3d 1219, 1227 (9th Cir. 2009) (“[A]n ALJ may weigh inconsistencies between the claimant’s 5 testimony and his or her conduct, daily activities, and work record, among other factors.”). The 6 ALJ, for this reason and for the reasons stated above, provided sufficient reasons, supported by 7 substantial evidence, for discounting plaintiff’s symptom testimony.

8 CONCLUSION

9 For the reasons set forth above, this matter is AFFIRMED.
