

1 INTRODUCTION

2 Defendants hereby move the Court to dismiss,¹ or, alternatively, transfer or stay this 3 Court's proceedings pending the resolution of the nationwide class action in Ms. L. v. ICE, No. 18-4 cv-428 (S.D. Cal.).² The complaint (Dkt. 1) and Motion for Expedited Discovery (Dkt. 15), both 5 reveal that Plaintiffs, 17 States and the District of Columbia (hereinafter, "the States"), wish to take 6 sweeping and burdensome discovery on the same issues that have already been preliminarily 7 addressed and largely resolved in Ms. L., where a nationwide class of parents with children who 8 were separated from them has been certified and ongoing compliance and reporting requirement 9 have been implemented by the district court. Under the circumstances here, where a class has been 10 certified to address the same claims brought by those directly impacted by the challenged policy, 11 further litigation in this Court will serve to interfere with the orderly administration of the Ms. L.
 12 class action, its injunction, and potentially risk inconsistent adjudications and obligations tied to the 13 same claims. See Ms. L., Order Granting Plaintiffs' Motion For Classwide Preliminary Injunction 14 ("June 26 Order"), Dkt. 83, at 22–24. With substantial overlap between Ms. L. and this case, this 15 Court should dismiss this case out of comity. The same concerns would support transferring the 16 States' case to the Southern District of California under 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a). Alternatively, and at a 17 minimum, the Court should stay the instant litigation until either the Ms. L. case has further 18 progressed or until threshold issues of justiciability in this case have been decided.

19 First, where parallel, overlapping litigation exists and where a nationwide class that has 20 already been certified is underway, multiple doctrines of comity direct that dismissal, transfer, or 21 holding a case in abeyance are appropriate "to avoid the waste of duplication, to avoid rulings

22 _____
 23 ¹ The United States moves to dismiss only to the extent it seeks dismissal of claims already subject to the Ms. L.
 24 litigation or to transfer such claims to that litigation. If this motion is denied, it reserves the right to file a motion to 25 dismiss raising other threshold issues in due course. See, e.g., Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Alla Med. Servs., Inc., 855 F.2d 1470, 26 1475 & n.2 (9th Cir. 1988) ("We agree ... [that the] motion to dismiss or stay was not a Rule 12(b) motion and accordingly the Defendants' March 12(b)(6) motion was not barred by Rule 12(g)... [T]he January motion urged the district court to stay or dismiss the action because of a pending state court action involving the same subject matter.
 The district court therefore erred in holding that the second motion violated Rule 12(g)." (citing Butler v. Judge of the U.S.
Dist. Ct., 116 F.2d 1013, 1016 (9th Cir. 1941))).

27 ² In accordance with LR 7(d), this is a third Friday motion. Defendants respectfully request that to the extent the 28 Court wishes to hold argument on Plaintiffs' Motion for Expedited Discovery (Dkt. 15), that the Court consolidate the arguments and have them both heard at a date suitable for a third Friday motion. See Motion to Rerote and Consolidate (Dkt. 23).

1 which may trench upon the authority of other courts, and to avoid piecemeal resolution of issues
 2 that call for a uniform result.” See, e.g., Panasonic Corp. v. Patriot Sci. Corp., No. 05-cv-4844, 2006 WL 3 709024 at *2 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 16, 2006). This is particularly true where a class has been certified on 4 behalf of the very individuals whose interests the States invoke in this case. See, e.g., Crawford v. Bell, 5 599 F.2d 890, 892 (9th Cir. 1979) (dismissal appropriate where “the complainant is a member in a 6 class action seeking the same relief”); accord Gillespie v. Crawford, 858 F.2d 1101, 1103 (5th Cir. 1988)
 7 (en banc) (per curiam) (“To allow individual suits would interfere with the orderly administration of 8 the class action and risk inconsistent adjudications”). That is a heightened concern where 9 indispensable parties (here, the parents of separated children—the actual individuals allegedly 10 harmed) are already bringing a nationwide class action on behalf of a certified class that was 11 certified the same day this case was filed, and where that class has secured a nationwide injunction 12 requiring much of the same relief and reporting requirements as those sought by third parties 13 purporting to act on that class’s behalf in this case. And because Ms. L. has been proceeding for 14 nearly five months, the first-to-file rule favors either dismissal or transferring the case with respect
 15 to the identical or similar claims.³ Similar concerns lie at the heart of the Supreme Court’s decision 16 in Colorado River Water Conservation District v. United States: “As between federal district courts ... the 17 general principle is to avoid duplicative litigation.” 424 U.S. 800, 817 (1976); see also United States v.
 18 Morros, 268 F.3d 695, 706 (9th Cir. 2001) (noting how the “chief concern [i]s with avoiding 19 piecemeal litigation”).

20 Second, this case should be transferred because “[t]o permit a situation in which two cases 21 involving precisely the same issues are simultaneously pending in different District Courts leads to 22 the wastefulness of time, energy and money that [28 U.S.C.] § 1404(a) was designed to prevent.”
 23 Ferens v. John Deere Co., 494 U.S. 516, 531 (1990). Here, it is inconceivable that the convenience 24 factors to be considered under Section 1404(a) would not militate towards transfer given the 25 certification of the class in Ms. L. and the entry of a nationwide injunction and ongoing compliance 26 requirements, and how far that litigation has already progressed. Proceeding with another lawsuit

27 _____
 28 ³ Moreover, the Court should assure itself of its jurisdiction before taking any action. See infra at 15–17; see also Defendants’ Opposition to Plaintiffs’ Motion for Expedited Discovery, at 6–10 (Dkt. 21).

1 “involving precisely the same issues” would be inefficient, id., sap the resources of the Court and 2 the parties, interfere with compliance with the Ms. L. injunction, and potentially result in 3 inconsistent rulings on procedural, discovery, and substantive issues overlapping in both cases.

4 Third, even if the Court declines to dismiss or transfer the claims at issue, the Court should 5 stay the States’ case because issues being litigated in Ms. L. “bear upon the case.” Leyva v. Certified
 6 Grocers of Cal., Ltd., 593 F.2d 857, 863 (9th Cir. 1979). Allowing the issues in Ms. L. to be decided 7 first would be especially prudent where, as here, a class action has been certified whose members 8 include the very same individuals the States now purport to represent—albeit without the 9 important protections afforded to both plaintiffs and defendants by the class action form of action.
 10 Aside from furthering the federal government’s abilities to comply with the injunctive relief already 11 granted to the Ms. L. class, the States, by contrast, will not be harmed.

12 BACKGROUND

13 This case arises in the wake of a previously filed class action lawsuit seeking substantially 14 similar relief. Far from needing to file another federal lawsuit, Ms. L. is currently being litigated by 15 the actual individuals the States here purport to represent as parens patriae, albeit by using a form of 16 action that disregards normal rules regarding class action and mandatory joinder. Indeed, those 17 individuals have already secured class certification and an injunction requiring reunification with 18 their children. The chronology of the cases shows that allowing this case to proceed will only cause 19 confusion and overlapping obligations given the class certification and class-wide relief granted by 20 another court. In contrast, the States have only just filed this duplicative litigation and seek 21 burdensome and intrusive discovery upon the very same agencies now tasked with implementing 22 Ms. L.’s preliminary injunction.

23 I. The First Filed Case In The Southern District of California.

24 On February 26, 2018, Ms. L. filed suit in the Southern District of California. See Ms. L., 25 No. 18-cv-428 (S.D. Cal.), Dkt. 1. On March 9, the Ms. L. plaintiffs filed an amended complaint, a 26 motion for preliminary injunction, and a motion for class certification. See Ms. L., No. 18-cv-428
 27 (S.D. Cal.), Dkt. 32, 35, and 48. The Ms. L. plaintiffs have asserted the following causes of action:
 28 (1) the separation of the class members from their children violates procedural and substantive due

1 process under the Fifth Amendment; (2) the current practices regarding separation of class 2 members from their children is arbitrary and capricious, thus violating the Administrative 3 Procedure Act (“APA”); and (3) separation of families violates the federal laws that provide for 4 asylum and other protections from removal and class members have a private right of action to 5 challenge violations of their right to apply for asylum under 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a). See Ms. L., No. 18-6 cv-428 (S.D. Cal.), Dkt. 1, 32, and 85. On June 26, 2018, the Ms. L. court certified a nationwide 7 class of migrant parents separated from their children and also granted a class-wide preliminary 8 injunction motion that was based on the plaintiffs’ claim that the federal government’s separation 9 of children from their parents violated the Fifth Amendment. Ms. L., No. 18-cv-428 (S.D. Cal.), 10 Dkt. 82–83. In granting class relief, and as relevant here, the court’s preliminary injunction order 11 requires that class members be reunified with their children within 14 days of the court’s order for 12 children under 5, and within 30 days of the court’s order for all other children. The order also bars 13 future separations without certain findings, and bars removals prior to reunification.

14 The federal government is in the process of implementing the relief required by the Ms. L.
15 court’s order. See Ms. L., No. 18-cv-428 (S.D. Cal.), Dkt. 86, 88. To that end, the Ms. L. court held a 16 series of status conferences on July 6, 9, and 10, where the parties were required to provide the 17 court with joint status reports. See Ms. L., No. 18-cv-428 (S.D. Cal.), Dkt. 91, 95, 96, 97, 99, 101; see 18 also Defendants’ Opposition to Plaintiffs’ Motion for Expedited Discovery, Appendix A (Dkt. 21-19 2). On July 10, 2018, the Ms. L. court ordered the parties to submit a further joint status report by 20 3:00 p.m. on July 12, 2018, to “provide an update on Defendants’ compliance with the reunification 21 deadline for children under age 5, and a status on the efforts to reunify the remaining members of 22 the Class with their children over age 5.” Ms. L., No. 18-cv-428 (S.D. Cal.), Dkt. 101 at 5; Dkt. 21-
23 2. The Ms. L. court also ordered the parties to appear at a further status conference on July 13, 24 2018. Id.

25 II. This Case.

26 The States filed this suit for declaratory and injunctive relief on the same day class-wide 27 relief was granted in Ms. L., June 26. The States bring five claims—three constitutional, two 28 statutory—challenging the separation of alien parents from their children. They allege: (1) that

1 Defendants have committed procedural-due-process violations by separating parents from their 2 children without showing that the parent is unfit or is otherwise endangering the child (Claim I); (2) 3 that Defendants have committed substantive-due-process violations by depriving individuals of 4 their liberty interests without due process of law (Claim II); (3) that Defendants have violated the 5 Fifth Amendment’s Due Process Clause’s equal-protection component by targeting individuals for 6 discriminatory treatment based on their nationality or ethnicity (Claim III); (4) that Defendants 7 have violated the APA by applying an arbitrary family-separation policy in a manner that conflicts
 8 with existing law (Claim IV); and (5) that Defendants have violated the asylum statute, 8 U.S.C. § 9 1158, by preventing would-be asylum seekers from presenting themselves at ports of entry (Claim 10 V). See Compl. at ¶¶ 342–71. The States are purportedly bringing these claims to protect their own 11 interests and residents as parens patriae. See Compl. at ¶ 18. On July 2, less than a week after filing 12 suit, the States moved for expedited discovery and regular status conferences, see Dkt. 15.

13 ARGUMENT

14 I. Multiple Comity Doctrines Call For Dismissal Of The States’ Complaint.

15 This Court should dismiss the Plaintiffs’ Complaint because their claims are identical, or 16 nearly identical, to the claims raised in Ms. L.—where another district court has certified a 17 nationwide class and granted class-wide relief. In fact, the Court in Ms. L. has already issued a 18 nationwide preliminary injunction enjoining Defendants from detaining adult migrants without 19 their minor children, and requiring Defendants to promptly reunify separated parents and their 20 children. June 26 Order at 23. This relief is identical to much of the relief the States seek here. See 21 Compl. at 119–20. Furthermore, fundamental principles of comity and respect for the Ms. L. court, 22 which has already grappled with these issues, certified a class, and issued preliminary relief, counsel 23 that this Court should dismiss this action.

24 A. Dismissal is Appropriate Because the Claims in Ms. L. and this Case Overlap, a Class Has 25 Been Certified, and Injunctive Relief Has Issued in Ms. L.

26 Dismissal is appropriate here because of the substantial overlap with Ms. L. Duplicative 27 litigation is disfavored in the federal courts because of the risk of inconsistent judgments, as well as 28 the waste of the parties’ and judicial resources. See, e.g., Barapind v. Reno, 225 F.3d 1100, 1109 (9th

1 Cir. 2000) (“While no precise rule has evolved, the general principle is to avoid duplicative
 2 litigation[.]” (citations omitted)). In achieving the goals of coordination and consolidation of cases
 3 that raise the same issues, the Supreme Court has said that “[w]ise judicial administration, giving 4 regard to conservation of judicial resources and comprehensive disposition of litigation, does not 5 counsel rigid mechanical solution of [duplicative litigation] problems. The factors relevant to wise 6 administration here are equitable in nature.” Kerotest Mfg. Co. v. C-O-Two Fire Equip. Co., 342 U.S.
 7 180, 183–84 (1952). This is particularly so in the context of class actions that have already been 8 certified under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(b)(2), where complete relief is to be granted on a 9 class-wide basis. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2). Rule 23(b)(2)’s purpose is to permit uniform relief to be 10 granted to the class as a whole, given that “[t]he primary goal[] of class action lawsuits [is] to avoid a 11 multiplicity of actions and the risk of inconsistent or conflicting adjudications,” Newburg on Class
 12 Actions § 10:33 (5th ed.); see Shady Grove Orthopedic Associates, P.A. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 599 U.S. 393, 13 402 (2010) (Rule 23 is designed to “further procedural fairness and efficiency”).

14 Thus, multiple courts of appeals, including the Ninth Circuit, have upheld dismissals 15 (normally without prejudice) of a case if there is a parallel class action raising the same or 16 substantially similar issues. See e.g., Cranford, 599 F.2d at 892–93 (holding that a district court may 17 dismiss “those portions of [the] complaint which duplicate the [class action’s] allegations and prayer 18 for relief”); McNeil v. Guthrie, 945 F.2d 1163, 1165–66 (10th Cir. 1991) (finding that individual suits 19 for injunctive and declaratory relief cannot be brought where a class action with the same claims 20 exists); Horns v. Whalen, 922 F.2d 835, 835 & n.2 (4th Cir. 1991); Gillespie, 858 F.2d at 1103 (once a 21 class action has been certified, “[s]eparate individual suits may not be maintained for equitable 22 relief”); Bennett v. Blanchard, 802 F.2d 456, 456 (6th Cir. 1986) (affirming dismissal of a case when 23 the plaintiff was a member in a parallel class action); Goff v. Menke, 672 F.2d 702, 704 (8th Cir. 1982) 24 (since class members generally “cannot relitigate issues raised in a class action after it has been 25 resolved, a class member should not be able to prosecute a separate equitable action once his or her 26 class has been certified”); accord Newburg on Class Actions § 10:33 (5th ed.) (“If the goals of the class 27 suit are to be achieved, it is generally beneficial for the multiple related actions to be coordinated or 28 consolidated in some fashion.”). Applied to this case, any decision by this Court on the same claims

1 in Ms. L. risks the creation of inconsistent judgments, causing confusion and potentially 2 inconsistent treatment among class members, defeating the purpose of uniform prosecution and 3 resolution of these claims via the class action vehicle. See Pride v. Correa, 719 F.3d 1130, 1137 (9th 4 Cir. 2013) (“[T]he avoidance of concurrent litigation and potentially inconsistent results justifies 5 dismissal[.]”); Gillespie, 858 F.2d 1103 (concluding that allowing individual suits would interfere with 6 the orderly administration of a pending class action and risk inconsistent adjudications).

7 Plaintiffs in this case raise the following five claims: (1) a violation of the Fifth Amendment, 8 alleging that it is a substantive due process violation for the states’ resident parents and minors to 9 be separated from each other “without any showing that the parent is unfit or is otherwise 10 endangering the child”; (2) a violation of the Fifth Amendment, alleging that it is a procedural due 11 process violation to deprive the states’ resident parents of a fundamental liberty interest without a 12 hearing; (3) a violation of the Fifth Amendment, alleging a violation of Equal Protection because 13 separating migrant children from their parents while they are being criminally prosecuted “burdens 14 a fundamental right and targets individuals for discriminatory treatment based on their nationality 15 or ethnicity, without lawful justification,” and disparately impacts immigrants from Latin America, 16 and is motivated by animus; (4) a violation of the APA alleging that the Policy is arbitrary and 17 capricious; and (5) a violation of the asylum laws, alleging that Defendants are preventing asylum 18 seekers from presenting themselves at ports of entry in order to seek asylum. See Compl. at ¶¶ 342– 19 71. Plaintiffs in Ms. L., raise three claims: (1) that the separation of the class members from their 20 children violates substantive due process and procedural due process under the Fifth Amendment; 21 (2) the separation of class members from their children without any explanation or legitimate 22 justification is arbitrary and capricious and accordingly violates the APA; and (3) separation of 23 families violates federal law that provides for asylum and other protection from removal and class 24 members have a private right of action to challenge violations of their right to apply for asylum 25 under 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a). See Ms. L., No. 18-cv-428, Dkt. 85, at ¶¶ 83–97. Thus, Claims I and II in 26 this case and Claim 1 in Ms. L., alleging violations of Fifth Amendment procedural and substantive 27 due process, are effectively the same. While Claim III in this case is not identical to the claims in 28 Ms. L., it rests on the same theories of due process, and is based on the same underlying facts.

1 Claim IV in this case and Claim 2 in Ms. L., alleging violations of the APA, are also the same.
2 Finally, Claim V in this case and Claim 3 in Ms. L. are substantially similar in that both allege federal 3 frustration of the asylum laws with respect to the same set of individuals.

4 Dismissal is appropriate under these circumstances. The Ninth Circuit has instructed that a 5 district court has inherent power to “choose among its broad arsenal of remedies” when 6 confronted with a situation involving duplicative litigation. It went on to note that “in the interests 7 of efficient and economical administration of justice, and with due deference to a fellow judge 8 handling a prior filed case covering the same issues, our refusal to permit continued litigation in this 9 court was entirely appropriate.” Cranford, 599 F.2d 892; accord Newberg on Class Actions § 10:33 (5th 10 ed.) (“If the goals of the class suit are to be achieved, it is generally beneficial for the multiple 11 related actions to be coordinated or consolidated in some fashion.”).

12 Given the nearly identical nature of the claims, the risk of inconsistent judgments is 13 particularly acute here, especially where the district court in Ms. L. has already ordered preliminary 14 relief on behalf of the class that includes the people whose interests the States here purport to 15 represent, and Defendants have already undertaken extensive efforts towards compliance with the 16 preliminary injunction order. See Defendants’ Opposition to Plaintiffs’ Motion for Expedited 17 Discovery, Declarations of Jonathan White and David W. Jennings (Dkt. 21-2, 21-3). Further 18 litigation in this Court would only impede the direction of resources toward the expeditious 19 implementation of the Ms. L. court’s order and the prompt disposition of that case. Additionally, 20 an order from this Court issuing different or conflicting relief for Plaintiffs would further interfere 21 with that litigation, which already provides the individuals the State purports to represent the relief 22 they are seeking from this Court and thus, by hindering that process, would only serve to create 23 unnecessary confusion.

24 These concerns are only more pronounced, where, as here, a third party purports to 25 represent the interests of the parties already litigating the very same claims in a certified class action.
26 Indeed, “a party ‘generally must assert his own legal rights and interests, and cannot rest his claim 27 to relief on the legal rights or interests of third parties.’” Kowlaski v. Tesmer, 543 U.S. 125, 129 28 (2004). Thus, absent a clear showing that the third party litigant who purports to represent the

1 interests of another party has “close relationship with the person” whose rights it invokes and a 2 “hindrance” to that person’s “ability to protect his own interests,” the third party may not invoke 3 the interests of other individuals on their own behalf. Id. at 129–30. Here, the individuals whose 4 interests the States purportedly wish to protect are litigating the same issues in the posture of a 5 certified class action seeking the same or similar relief in Ms. L. If those individuals could not 6 themselves litigate individual claims arising from the same events now being litigated in the Ms. L.
7 class (see above), then a fortiori, the third-party State Plaintiffs cannot do the same on their own 8 behalf.

9 Were it otherwise, then the Court would need to join every individual Ms. L. class member 10 as an indispensable party. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1). Under that rule, a party “must be joined” if 11 “that person claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and is so situated that disposing 12 of the action in the person's absence may: (i) as a practical matter impair or impede the person’s 13 ability to protect the interest; or (ii) leave an existing party subject to a substantial risk of incurring 14 double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations because of the interest.” That is the case 15 here. If every class member in Ms. L. is not joined to this suit, then each parent in Ms. L. risks 16 being unable to protect his or her own interests or being subject to inconsistent obligations with 17 respect to their rights vis-à-vis their children, depending on the orders of this Court compared to 18 the Ms. L. court.

19 Indeed, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure call for district courts to join necessary parties, 20 even involuntarily, or to consider dismissing cases when they cannot proceed “in equity and good 21 conscience” without other indispensable parties. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b); see also Salt River Project 22 Agric. Improvement & Power Dist. v. Lee, 672 F.3d 1176, 1179 (9th Cir. 2012) (citing EEOC v. Peabody 23 W. Coal Co., 400 F.3d 774, 779–80 (9th Cir. 2005)). And the concern of “equity and good 24 conscience” is even more pressing where, rather than the directly affected persons themselves, third 25 parties are seeking to litigate the same Fifth Amendment, APA, and asylum claims. The Civil Rules 26 contemplate just such a dilemma—providing that the general rules governing indispensable parties 27 and joinder do not apply when, but only when, a class has been certified, Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(d)— 28 confirming the necessity of dismissal of this case in light of the existing Ms. L class action. Cf.

1 Wright & Miller, 7 Fed. Prac. & Proc. Civ. § 1626 (3d ed.) (“Without the exception provided by Rule
2 19(d), the utility of the class-action device might be seriously compromised by the joinder
3 requirements in Rule 19.”). Thus, where a class action addressing necessary parties already exists, 4 dismissal of the later filed action is appropriate for the same reasons Rule 19 would otherwise 5 require their joinder here, but for the existence of the class action. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(d).

6 B. The First-To-File Rule

7 Similar principles are at the core of the “first-to-file rule.” This is a “doctrine of federal 8 comity [that] permits a district court to decline jurisdiction over an action when a complaint 9 involving the same parties and issues has already been filed in another district.” Apple Inc. v. Psystar 10 Corp., 658 F.3d 1150, 1161 (9th Cir. 2011) (quotation and citation omitted); see also Smith v. McIver, 11 22 U.S. (9 Wheat.) 532, 535 (1824) (Marshall, C.J.). The “rule is not a rigid or inflexible rule to be 12 mechanically applied, but rather is to be applied with a view to the dictates of sound judicial 13 administration.” Pacesetter Sys., Inc. v. Medtronic, Inc., 678 F.2d 93, 95 (9th Cir. 1982). Thus, strict 14 identity of the parties and identical issues in the cases are not required. Instead, the two cases must 15 be “substantially similar.” See Music Grp. Servs. US, Inc. v. InMusic Brands, Inc., No. 13-cv-182, 2013
16 WL 1499564, at *2 (W.D. Wash. Apr. 11, 2013) (Pechman, J.). Moreover, “the form of relief sought 17 does not determine the ‘similitude’ of the issues.” Am. Guar. & Liab. Ins. Co. v. U.S. Fid. & Guar.
18 Co., No. 06-cv-1254, 2006 WL 3499342, at *2 (W.D. Wash. 2006). Boiled down, the first-to-file rule 19 applies if two matters exhibit chronology, similar parties, and similarity of issues. See Alltrade, Inc. v.
20 Unimeld Prods., Inc., 946 F.2d 622, 625–27 (9th Cir. 1991). All three are present here.

21 First, the chronology of the actions supports transfer because the Ms. L class action was 22 filed nearly five months ago. See Intersearch Worldwide v. Intersearch Grp., 544 F. Supp. 2d 949, 958
23 (N.D. Cal. 2008) (noting how “the focus is on the original complaint, not any amended 24 complaints”). Second, there is substantial similarity between the parties given how a nationwide 25 class has already been certified in Ms. L to cover the same individuals whose rights the States wish 26 to vindicate, as well as the fact that the Defendants are practically identical. Cf. InMusic Brands, 2013 27 WL 1499564, at *2 (“The requirement of similar parties is satisfied if the parties are substantially 28 similar ... not identical.” (emphasis added)).

1 Finally, since the original complaint in Ms. L was filed in February, the plaintiffs in that case
 2 have always sought to include practically the same challenges that are being brought by the States.
 3 Compare Ms. L, No. 18-cv-428, Complaint (Dkt. 1), at ¶¶ 60–75; with Ms. L, No. 18-cv-428, Second 4 Amended Complaint, Dkt. 85, at ¶¶ 83–97. The Ms. L complaints have focused on the same central 5 disputes involved in this case: alleged violations of the Fifth Amendment, Compl. at ¶¶ 342–58, the 6 APA, id. at ¶¶ 359–68, and the asylum statutes, id. at ¶¶ 369–71. Given the substantial similarity 7 between the subject matters, any decision by this Court risks creating inconsistent judgments, 8 causing confusion and potentially inconsistent treatment among the Ms. L class members, and 9 defeating the purpose of uniform prosecution and resolution of such class actions. See Gillespie, 858 10 F.2d at 1103. That is underscored by how the Ms. L court has already ordered preliminary relief on 11 behalf of the class that includes the people whose interests the States here purport to represent, and 12 Defendants have already undertaken extensive efforts towards compliance with the preliminary 13 injunction order. See Defendants’ Opposition to Plaintiffs’ Motion for Expedited Discovery, 14 Declarations of Jonathan White and David W. Jennings (Dkt. 21-2, 21-3). An order from this Court 15 issuing different or conflicting relief for Plaintiffs would only interfere with the orderly 16 administration of justice.

17 C. Colorado River Abstention

18 A similar analysis holds under the Supreme Court’s decision in Colorado River. 424 U.S. at 19 817; see also Landis v. North Am. Co., 299 U.S. 248, 254 (1936). Although Colorado River abstention in 20 its technical sense arises when federal litigation parallels earlier filed state court litigation, its 21 reasoning applies with even more force where federal litigation follows and parallels earlier filed 22 federal cases. See, e.g., O’Neill v. United States, 50 F.3d 677, 688 (9th Cir. 1995) (citing Colorado River 23 and explaining that “[w]here the question of abstention arises among federal courts, judicial 24 economy is a primary consideration,” and noting that “the propriety of a federal district court 25 declining to decide an issue which will be decided in a parallel federal district court proceeding” is 26 more permissive than when federal and state litigation exists in parallel). Considerations of “wise 27 judicial administration, giving regard to conservation of judicial resources and comprehensive 28 disposition of litigation” may counsel granting a stay when there are concurrent proceedings

1 involving the same matter. Colorado River, 424 U.S. at 817. And much like the first-to-file rule, the 2 initial question whether to apply the Colorado River doctrine is whether the two cases are 3 substantially similar. Substantial similarity does not mean that the cases must be identical. Nakash v.
 4 Marciano, 882 F.2d 1411, 1416 (9th Cir.1989) (holding that “exact parallelism” between the two 5 actions at issue are not required under the Colorado River doctrine). Instead, a dispositive factor 6 against dismissal or stay in the Colorado River analysis is the existence of a substantial doubt as to 7 whether the parallel proceedings will resolve the instant action. See Intel Corp. v. Advanced Micro 8 Devices, Inc., 12 F.3d 908, 913 (9th Cir. 1993); see also Moses H. Cone Memorial Hosp. v. Mercury Const.
 9 Corp., 460 U.S. 1, 28 (1983).

10 As discussed above, however, there is considerable overlap between the issues and 11 individuals involved in this case with Ms. L. And given that a nationwide class has now been 12 certified in Ms. L, it is difficult to conceive of how the resolution in that case would not resolve 13 questions on the matters (that is, the Fifth Amendment, the APA, and the asylum statutes)
 14 presented by the States here. In such circumstances, the Colorado River doctrine calls for the later-15 filed case to not proceed in parallel to the first filed case. See TK v. Stanley, No. 16-cv-5506, 2017 16 WL 2671295, at *5–6 (W.D. Wash. June 21, 2017) (staying case to allow the previously filed parallel 17 case to proceed).⁴

18 II. This Case Should Be Transferred To The Southern District Of California
 19 Pursuant To 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a).

20 Alternatively, the considerable overlap between this case and Ms. L would support 21 transferring the case to the Southern District of California under 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a). To begin 22 with, it is indisputable that this case “might have been brought.” in the Southern District of 23 California. 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a). Indeed, one of the Plaintiffs here is the State of California, and 24 given that it is one of the States along the continental United States’ southern border, “a substantial 25

26 ⁴ Even were dismissal outright not appropriate, under these same abstention principles, transfer of proceedings or a 27 stay would be appropriate. See, e.g. Chromologic LLC v. Yang, No. 13-cv-1575, 2013 WL 12125537, at *3 (C.D. Cal. May 9, 28 2013) (“As part of its general power to administer its docket, a district court may stay or dismiss a suit that is duplicative of another federal court suit.” (emphasis added)); Aliphcom v. Wi-LAN Inc., No. 10-cv-2337, 2010 WL 4699844, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 10, 2010) (transfer). See infra at 13–17.

1 part of the events or omissions giving rise to the [plaintiffs'] claim[s] occurred” there, 28 U.S.C.
 2 § 1391(b)(2). See Compl. at ¶¶ 247, 251. This action consequently “might have been brought” in the 3 Southern District of California and “[t]hus, the [real] issue before the Court is whether the Court 4 should exercise its discretion to transfer the case for the convenience of the parties and witnesses, 5 and in the interest of justice.” Vernon v. Qwest Comms. Int’l, Inc., 643 F. Supp. 2d 1256, 1269–70 6 (W.D. Wash. 2009). Practically all of these convenience factors favor transfer.

7 District courts may consider the following convenience factors: (1) the location where the 8 relevant agreements were negotiated and executed, (2) the state that is most familiar with the 9 governing law, (3) the plaintiff’s choice of forum, (4) the respective parties’ contacts with the 10 forum, (5) the contacts relating to the plaintiff’s cause of action in the chosen forum, (6) the 11 differences in the costs of litigation in the two forums, (7) the availability of compulsory process to 12 compel attendance of unwilling non-party witnesses, and (8) the ease of access to sources of proof.
 13 Jones v. GNC Franchising, Inc., 211 F.3d 495, 498–99 (9th Cir. 2000). And these convenience factors 14 developed because Congress “intended to permit courts to grant transfers upon a lesser showing of 15 inconvenience” than was needed for dismissal under the doctrine of forum non conveniens. Norwood v.
 16 Kirkpatrick, 349 U.S. 29, 32 (1955). Applied here, the Jones convenience factors favor transferring 17 this case because almost all of the plaintiffs and actions have “little connection with the chosen 18 forum” meaning that “less deference is accorded [to their] choice, even if [a single] plaintiff is a 19 resident of the forum.” Vernon, 643 F. Supp. 2d at 1260.

20 The first factor to consider under Jones concerns the location of the relevant transaction or 21 occurrence. See 211 F.3d at 498. This factor favors transfer. The Western District of Washington is 22 not the location of a substantial portion of the events giving rise to the States’ complaint. See, e.g., 23 Lamont v. Haig, 590 F.2d 1124 (D.C. Cir. 1978). “To determine whether a substantial part of the 24 events giving rise to the claim occurred in the forum, the court first considers what acts or 25 omissions by the defendants give rise to the plaintiffs’ claims.” United Tactical Sys. LLC v. Real Action 26 Paintball, Inc., 108 F. Supp. 3d 733, 752 (N.D. Cal. 2015); (alteration and citation omitted). After 27 “identif[y]ing] the alleged wrongful acts, the court must determine whether a substantial part of 28 those acts took place in the forum.” All. for Multilingual Multicultural Educ. v. Garcia, No. 11-cv-215,

1 2011 WL 2532478, at *7 (N.D. Cal. June 24, 2011) (citing Daniel v. Am. Bd. of Emergency Med., 428
2 F.3d 408, 432 (2d Cir. 2005) and Jenkins Brick Co. v. Bremer, 321 F.3d 1366, 1372 (11th Cir. 2003)).
3 Here, the only asserted connection to this judicial district is an allegation that persons temporarily 4 detained at “SeaTac, which is located in King County” may have been affected by the policy to 5 prosecute persons entering the United States illegally pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §§ 1325 and 1326, as well 6 as an allegation that children may be detained within Seattle. See Compl. at ¶ 17. This has nothing to 7 do with the States’ allegations against where the locus of the events giving rise to Plaintiffs’ claims 8 may have occurred. As the Complaint demonstrates, the States challenge immigration policies that 9 were implemented along the United States’ southern border with Mexico. See id. at ¶ 41. The “zero 10 tolerance policy” of prosecutions that the States reference and the separations of family units that 11 occurred as a consequence occurred along the southern border in judicial districts such as the 12 Southern District of California. See id. at ¶ 55–56. Indeed, the asylum-based claims that the States 13 invoke occurred directly and exclusively at the border, such that the Southern District of California 14 would plainly serve as the appropriate forum to consider those claims. See, e.g., id. at ¶ 58.

15 Although the second Jones factor (familiarity with state law) is largely inapplicable here, the 16 scattered nature of the States’ alleged harm undermines the third Jones factor of favoring a plaintiff’s 17 chosen forum. Simply put, the States’ Complaint contains no allegations of any particularized 18 interest of either the parties or subject matter within the Western District of Washington. If 19 anything, virtually all of the same issues have been intensely focused on for five months within the 20 Southern District of California. Cf. Vernon, 643 F. Supp. 2d at 1271 (“Plaintiffs have alleged a multi-21 state class action lawsuit across fourteen states. That two of the three named plaintiffs ... call 22 Washington home is given little weight in the Court’s transfer analysis because what is convenient 23 for them is not necessarily convenient for ... other non-Washington members of the putative 24 class.”). This “considerably weaken[s]” the States’ choice of forum here in the Pacific Northwest.
25 Italian Colors Rest. v. Am. Express Co., No. 03-cv-3719, 2003 WL 22682482, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 10, 26 2003) (“[W]here there are hundreds of potential plaintiffs, ... all of whom could with equal show of 27 right go into their many home courts, the claim of any one plaintiff that a forum is appropriate 28 merely because it is his home forum is considerably weakened.”); Stay-Dri Continence Mgmt. Sys.,

1 LLC v. Haire, No. 08-cv-1386, 2008 WL 4304604, at *2 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 10, 2008). Indeed, this 2 undermines the States’ argument of substantial contacts under the fourth and fifth Jones factors, 3 which concern the contacts of the respective parties and the relationship of their cause of action to 4 the chosen forum.

5 Finally, the remaining Jones factors support transfer because they concern more practical 6 circumstances such as “(6) the differences in the costs of litigation in the two forums, (7) the 7 availability of compulsory process to compel attendance of unwilling non-party witnesses, and (8) 8 the ease of access to sources of proof.” 211 F.3d at 498–99. In light of how much farther Ms. L.
9 has progressed, it would be far more practical to litigate the same issues in the same forum. And 10 here again, this is the problem with the diffuse nature of the States’ alleged harm, which dictates 11 that multiple federal districts could provide for an appropriate venue, but never takes into account 12 the tremendous efforts that are already underway in Ms. L. Indeed, it is undisputed that the vast 13 majority of the plaintiffs “ha[ve] no contacts relating to the claims in Washington.” Vernon, 643 F.
14 Supp. 2d at 1272. Instead, almost all of the discovery costs, witnesses, and sources of proof will be 15 found all around the United States. In such circumstances, judicial economy favors transfer. See SZ
16 DJI Tech. Co. Ltd. v. Autel Robotics USA LLC, No. 17-cv-776, 2018 WL 1014614, at *1 (W.D. Wash.
17 Feb. 22, 2018).

18 III. This Case Should Be Held In Abeyance Pending The Disposition Of *Ms. L.
19 And Threshold Issues.

20 Finally, consideration of the traditional stay factors warrants a stay of district court 21 proceedings in this case pending the resolution of Ms. L. “The District Court has broad discretion 22 to stay proceedings as an incident to its power to control its own docket.” Clinton v. Jones, 520 U.S.
23 681, 706 (1997). That power applies “especially in cases of extraordinary public moment,” when “a 24 plaintiff may be required to submit to delay not immoderate in extent and not oppressive in its 25 consequences if the public welfare or convenience will thereby be promoted.” Id. at 707. The Ninth 26 Circuit has described factors to consider when evaluating a motion to stay:

1 Where it is proposed that a pending proceeding be stayed, the competing interests 2 which will be affected by the granting or refusal to grant a stay must be weighed.
 3 Among these competing interests are the possible damage which may result from the 4 granting of a stay, the hardship or inequity which a party may suffer in being required 5 to go forward, and the orderly course of justice measured in terms of the simplifying or complicating of issues, proof, and questions of law which could be expected to result from a stay.

6 CMAX, Inc. v. Hall, 300 F.2d 265, 268 (9th Cir. 1962). As discussed above regarding Colorado River, 7 courts frequently grant stays when resolution of another action may “bear upon the case,” because 8 a stay is most “efficient for [the court’s] own docket and the fairest course for the parties[.]” Leyva v.
 9 Certified Grocers of Cal., Ltd., 593 F.2d 857, 863 (9th Cir. 1979); see also Chromologic, 2013 WL
 10 12125537, at *3. As discussed above, there are serious prudential reasons why “the orderly course 11 of justice” would be served by allowing Ms. L. to proceed expeditiously and having this case 12 “complicat[e the] issues, proof, and questions of law” that the Ms. L. court is currently considering.
 13 CMAX, 300 F.2d at 268.

14 A stay would be equally beneficial when the States’ standing to sue is in question. See, e.g., 15 Horowitz v. Sulla, No. 13-cv-0500, 2014 WL 1048798, at *10 (D. Haw. Mar. 14, 2014) (granting 16 motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction and noting how, before deciding upon a motion for 17 summary judgment, the court had “ordered that all other motions be held in abeyance until the 18 issue of federal jurisdiction was resolved”); see also Defendants’ Opposition to Plaintiffs’ Motion for 19 Expedited Discovery, at 6–10 (Dkt. 21). As a unanimous Supreme Court explained just last month, 20 “a plaintiff seeking relief in federal court must first demonstrate that he has standing to do so, 21 including that he has ‘a personal stake in the outcome,’ distinct from a ‘generally available grievance 22 about government[.]’ That threshold requirement ‘ensures that we act as judges, and do not engage in 23 policymaking properly left to elected representatives.” Gill v. Whitford, 138 S. Ct. 1916, 1923 (2018) 24 (emphasis in original) (quoting Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 204 (1962); Lance v. Coffman, 549 U.S.
 25 437, 439 (2007) (per curiam); and Hollingsworth v. Perry, 570 U.S. 693, 700 (2013), respectively); see 26 also Whitmore v. Arkansas, 495 U.S. 149, 154 (1990) (“It is well established ... that before a federal 27 court can consider the merits of a legal claim, the person seeking to invoke the jurisdiction of the 28 court must establish the requisite standing to sue.”); Ex parte McCardle, 74 U.S. (7 Wall.) 506, 514

1 (1868) (“Without jurisdiction the court cannot proceed at all in any cause.”); Norwood v. Cate, 2014
2 WL 37241, at *8 n.2 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 6, 2014) (“Standing must be determined in order to establish 3 jurisdiction of the Court to hear the case and reach the merits.”). Thus, as a matter of law, it is 4 important that the jurisdictional issues raised in the Defendants’ Opposition to Plaintiffs’ Motion 5 for Expedited Discovery be resolved before anything else.

6 Moreover, swiftly proceeding to the merits or forcing the Defendants to engage in 7 extremely costly discovery when serious threshold jurisdictional issues exist is an inefficient use of 8 the Court’s and parties’ time and resources. And a ruling favorable to the Ms. L. plaintiffs on their 9 efforts to obtain relief could obviate the need for this Court to even consider the Plaintiffs’ case, 10 and render useless any prior briefing on those issues. Under these circumstances, the Court should 11 simply defer this case until 30 days after the Ms. L. case is resolved.⁵

12 CONCLUSION

13 For the foregoing reasons, this Court should grant Defendants’ motion and dismiss. If the 14 Court concludes that dismissal is not warranted, then the Court should transfer this case to the 15 United States District Court for the Southern District of California. Finally, even if the Court 16 concludes that neither dismissal nor transfer is warranted, the Court should hold this case in 17 abeyance pending the disposition by the Southern District of California in Ms. L.

26 ⁵ This same concern with duplicative litigation and discovery costs is reflected by the discovery requested by the States 27 with respect to Claim V and the pending litigation in Al Otro Lado Inc. v. Nielsen, No. 17-cv-2366 (S.D. Cal.). See 28 Defendants’ Opposition to Plaintiffs’ Motion for Expedited Discovery, at 10–12 (Dkt. 21). These concerns present an independent basis to hold at least Claim V in abeyance even if the Court does not dismiss, transfer, or hold in abeyance all of the claims.
